Lack of Force.

More people fail from lack of force than from lack of education or opportunity, says Success. A man may be well educated or brilliant and yet for lack of force be a complete failure in his vocation. A man or woman may succeed without education, but not without force; without capital, but not without energy.

No Bother Whatever.

"Do you ever have any trouble with the plants when your wife goes away?" asked the bachelor friend man sadly.

"None whatever," replied the cheerful chap. "They always die within a week after she leaves, and all I have to do is to put them away until she comes back."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Came Out Strong at the End.

Chippy—I was out at all up to the mark last night; tried to say something agreeable, but couldn't do it somehow, so at last I bade them goodby.

Jones—Ah, then you did manage to say something agreeable after all!—Stray Stories.

Malicious.

"What made her faint?" asked the sympathetic old lady.

"Madam," replied the sour faced misogynist, "there was a good looking young man standing right behind her."—Town and Country.

Not Mourning.

Mrs. Suburbs — There goes Mrs. Toughman. Is she in mourning for her late husband?

Mrs. Knox—No; only wearing black for him.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

DIVERS AFTER PEARLS.

Their Work Is Deadly, and They Do Not Live Long.

Pearl fishers do not live long. They often dive to a depth of 100 feet or more, and the strain wears them out before their lives are half over. From these depths a diver usually brings two oyster shells each "trip." It is on the mother of pearl in these that the European depends for his sure profit. Pearls are "plums," which only occasionally fall to his lot. Divers work for a wage, and all the shells brought up are the property of the employer. In "Studies In Brown Humanity" Hugh Clifford describes Malay pearl fishers. They anchor on the oyster beds or as near them as possible, he says, and the diving takes place twice a day.

"All the boats are manned at morning and evening, and the Sulu boys row them out to the point selected for the day's operations. The white man in charge always goes with them in order to keep an eye upon the shells, to reanimate exhausted divers and generally to look after his own interests.

"Presently a man lowers himself slowly over the side, takes a long, deep breath, and then, turning head downward strokes; his form grows momentarily more distinct, until the final, tense expression of his staring face is plainly visible. Then the quiet surface of the sea splashes in a thousand drops of sun steeped light as his head tears through it, and his bursting lungs, expelling the imprisoned air, draw in the breath which they crave in long, hard gasps. If the dive has been a deep one a little blood may be seen to trickle from nose and mouth and ears. At times even the eye sockets ooze blood, the result of fearful pressure to which the diver has been subjected."

CHILDREN ARE SANE.

But Grownup People, Most of Them, Are More or Less Insane.

"There is one disadvantage which is involved in the very nature of education—that is, that we have to assume that grownup people are representative. We have even to go the length of assuming that grownup people are sane. When we talk about encouraging health in children and discouraging morbidity, when we talk of such and such a child being abnormal or interesting or neurotic or a genius, we are all the time taking for granted that we ourselves have attained to what is profitable and eternal in human nature. But there is at least something that may reasonably be said upon the other side. It may at least very plausibly be maintained that it is children who are, age after age, sane and reliable and grownup people who are, age after age, more or less fantastic and disconcerting. The great majority of grownup people in any age will be in all probability slightly insane; for since no human philosophy is perfect, and since every human philosophy naturally treats itself as if it were perfect, the chances are in every generation that the majority of educated people will forcatastically certain of something that is quite untrue. Children, on the other hand, it may be maintained, represent the actual primary and untouched human nature. Whatever agrees with that is sane; whatever disagrees with it is eccentric. Children are always children, or, to limit the matter with more precision, babies, at any rate, are always babies. But few will be so paradoxical as to maintain that men are always men or women always women.

An Eloquent Peroration.

"And," said the rising young politician as he reached his eloquent peroration, "I predict that our candidate will, when the votes are counted, be found to have ridden to success upon a tidal wave of glory that will have swept all before it like wild fire breaking in flying spray upon the strand where the sun of victory shall blaze forth its most effulgent rays upon the close of one of the most noble, most memorable campaigns that have ever been launched upon the sea of politics to gather strength and carry all before it like the cyclone sweeping across the broad prairies from which even the orb of day has disappeared in terror."

BURNING A WIDOW.

The Story of a Witness of This Cruel Indian Custom.

I had the opportunity of seeing a young widow burn herself by the side of the funeral pile of her husband. The funeral pile was about ten feet high. In the middle of the pile lay her deceased husband, an old and miserable looking man. The devoted victim was a young creature about seventeen, dressed in white, with all her jewels on. There was a confused noise of singing and shouting, intermixed with the sound of tomtoms and at intervals the hollow and sonorous sound of gongs and trumpets. The priests and her friends crowded round her, all speaking to her at once, apparently to distract her attention and to prevent her shrinking at the last moment from sacrificing herself.

There was a small tank of water close to the funeral pile. They led her to this. I was very near her when I saw her quietly take the jewels from her ears, her nose, unclasp her gold bracelets as well as the bangles from her ankles and arrangements she had on, which were received by her relations.

She then stepped into the water, divested herself of her clothes or pure cloth and replaced them with clothes of a yellow color. She then performed her ablutions, came out of the water and, unassisted, walked three times round the pile, followed by the priests and her friends, who at this period appeared to be more anxious than ever in their discourse to her to distract her attention. She then, unassisted, mounted the pile, laid herself down by the side of her husband and put his head under her arm, turning herself toward him.

Then they sprinkled large quantities of oil and straw on the pile. The fatal fire was then applied, amid a wild loud shouts and while the fire reached her I distinctly heard her utter the words "Virtai! Sirtai!"

I was very near her during the different parts of the ceremony and could have saved her life by merely touching her, as she would then have been dead before I could not have been permitted to have the honor of sacrificing herself.

But in saving her life I stood the chance of being torn to pieces, and I certainly should have been brought to a court martial for disobedience of orders, for the English in those days were strictly forbidden to meddle with the customs and prejudices of the natives.—Georg Ehers' "Memoirs."

PITH AND POINT.

In order to be popular forget to say a good deal.

Wisdom is always conceded to a rich man until he loses his riches.

Do not emphasize your own virtues by enlarging on the failings of others.

A safe way to judge a man is to ascertain just what friends he doesn't make.

A genius is a man who refuses to believe in the impossibilities of other people.

The claims to wisdom of owls and a multitude of men rest upon their looks, and nothing more.

To get rid of a bore ask him to repeat his longest and favorite story twice. Even he cannot stand that.

Only a smart man can conceal from a woman the fact that he isn't as smart as he would wish her to think he is.

One of the curious things about a man who wants to borrow money from you today is his eager determination to repay it tomorrow.

There are three stages in the existence of the average man when he is of particular interest to his community—viz, at his birth, marriage and funeral.—Success.

Another Way Out.

In one of Glasgow's daily laid out cemeteries a rich citizen, who was notorious as a skeptic, had erected a massive mausoleum on what he terms "his ancestral plot." One day he met a worthy elder of the kirk coming away from the vicinity of the imposing mass of masonry, so he said to him, "Weel, weel, ye've been up seein' that gran' erection o' mine?"

"Deed, hiv I, sir."

"Gey strong hoose that, isn't it? It 'll tak' a man a' his time tae raise out o' you at the day o' judgment."

"Hoot, ma man," said David, "ye can gie yersell little fash about risin' gin that day comes. They'll tak' the bottom out o't tae let ye fa' doon."—Spare Moments.

Forestalling Trouble.

Sam Tate at one time owned a big cotton plantation on the Mississippi river. Once Tate called on the governor of Arkansas and said, "Governor, if you're not too busy this morning I'd like to have a pardon."

"Who for?"

"For myself."

"Ah, for yourself! And what for?"

"Killing a nigger."

"When did you kill him?"

"Oh, I haven't killed him yet—thought I'd get a pardon in advance, so there wouldn't be any trouble about it."

When a man knows how to give the baby a bath his wife doesn't know whether to rejoice because he is so smart or to weep because he is so little like a man.—New York Press.

NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR

The remarks made by Belleville's delegates to the Congress of Chambers of Commerce, held at Montreal last summer, are not yet forgotten, as may be judged by the following editorial in The Toronto World of Feb. 29. It concerns a question which is every day becoming of more vital interest to Canada and Canadians:

"The subject of the union of Newfoundland with Canada was brought up at the Congress of Chambers of Commerce at Montreal last year. Col. Ponton, of Belleville, who moved the resolution, called attention to the long strip of Labrador coast, which is under the same Government as Newfoundland. We have recently discovered to our sorrow how little coast line we have on the Pacific. We shall be even worse off on the Atlantic, if Labrador is not annexed to Canada.

"Col. Ponton also drew attention to the inroads that are being made on the trade of Newfoundland by the United States. Recent American consular reports emphasize the warning. Consul Cornelius, of St. John's, Newfoundland, in his report for last month, says that the imports from the United Kingdom are declining, those from Canada have increased slightly, while those from the United States have increased nearly 50 per cent. in three years. American capitalists are foremost in developing the wealth of Newfoundland, including the York Harbor copper mine, the Bonsil chrome mine and the Bay Vert pyrites mines. The York Harbor deposits are the richest copper beds in the world, and the owners are spending $250,000 in their development. Americans are acquiring immense tracts of forest for lumbering and charcoal manufacturing. / Consul Cornelius points out that the trade in agricultural implements is now in American hands, and that the present is a good time "for an aggressive campaign by American manufacturers for the general enlargement of their trade in the country."

"It may be said that the enterprise of our neighbors is commendable. But if the positions were reversed, if Newfoundland were politically related to the United States as it is to Canada, we may be sure that the trade would be kept for the United States, and not allowed to fall into Canadian hands."

TIMELY TOPICS.

It is much to be regretted that the unprecedented storm prevented many people from attending the lecture delivered by Mr. Rogers, of Peterboro, in the City Hall last night. Those who were absent, however, can read about it in The Intelligencer, as a fairly full report appears in another column. Mr. Rogers showed himself to be a master of his subject, and his interesting information and lucid comments convinced everyone that the Trent Canal is a necessity and cannot be completed too quickly for Canada's good. The thanks of our citizens are certainly due Mr. Rogers for his dissemination of valuable information.

The Toronto World just now is working hard to make the Kingston Railway live up to its alleged obligations, and this is all the thanks it gets from the Kingston News and Times:

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The coal merchants have long faces these days, and no wonder. The Belleville people are so hot over that O. H.A. business they are using hardly any coal.

Anyhow, we object to being Marched out of the O.H.A. while it was still February.

They have a lift back in Peterboro which raises vessels 60 feet. It might be used to boost the reputation of some of their jin born sports.

Perhaps Mr. Nelson, of The Globe, like his illustrious namesake, is blind to one eye. That's the reason he can't see well enough to do Belleville justice.

We know now how Japan felt after she whipped China and had to let Russia reap the benefit.

The arm chair critics are lost in admiration of Japan's strategy. What would they say of Peterboro's strategy if they heard of it?

Well, we must have a cracking fine hockey team when it takes seven men on the ice and five men on the carpet to beat us out.

President Robertson, of the O.H.A., is in Egypt, and when he hears of the awful work of the executive he will surely jump off one of the pyramids for shame.

Well, this last outrage, if it is not reasonably settled here will put Belleville out with Peterboro and the O. H. A. If they enter the latter and play with the former again they deserve all the shameful treatment they may receive.

A gentleman whose information we have always found to be reliable tells us that several of the Midland hockey team were in Peterboro last Saturday. Now, how did they get the law things were to go?

The Ottawa Citizen quotes an article, "Mr. Busby on Hockey," and credits it to the original Mr. Busby. The article in question first appeared in this paper and was written by a member of The Intelligencer staff. To compare it to the work of Mr. P. F. Dunne is gratifying, but altogether too flattering.

Everybody remembers, of course, how, after the first Stanley Cup game, the Ottawas were censured, by the Toronto papers, with continuous assault and battery. The following letter, written by a Toronto man to The Citizen, makes it appear that there are two sides to the story:

"Editor Citizen: I have been staying at Ottawa for several weeks and have seen the Ottawas play a number of games lately and think they are a team of a life-time. I wish to appreciate to them, on behalf of the sporting people of Toronto, for the utterly unprovoked attacks made on them by the Toronto press. The Marlboros themselves are satisfied with the treatment they got at the hands of the Ottawas, and are satisfied that the rough horse-play, when it occurred, was about evenly divided. It is only the "grocery store strategists," i.e., the press, especially by the old woman's sporting paper, The Globe, that are kicking. It is no disgrace to be beaten by a better team, besides hockey is not supposed to be an "after-you-my-dear-Alphonse" game. Hoping you will not continue to think that all Toronto sports are on a par with The Globe and others, I am, yours sincerely,

MARLBORO.

Latest developments in the hockey situation in this city make it appear that the Belleville Hockey Club intend to carry out their threat and fight the O.H.A. executive to a finish. We are informed on unimpeachable authority that, after a long consultation with their legal adviser, the executive of the local club yesterday afternoon decided to institute legal proceedings against the O.H.A. executive, though Mr. E. Gess Porter had informed us in the afternoon that such would not be at present done. What caused them to change their minds we know not, but this is what was done: Messrs. Porter and McMillan appeared before Judge Fralick, Junior County Court Judge, and that gentleman, after hearing their statements, issued an order for a stay of proceedings for eight days in the case of the O.H.A.'s action disqualifying McMillan and cancelling the games won by Belleville. The order, we are told, also prohibits the O.H.A. from ordering any club to take Belleville's place and play games which were to have been played by that club. This, it would appear, would prevent the game between Peterboro and Midland to-night.

A Serious Strike

There's "a strike on" from head to foot when the Kidneys stop working properly. Dull headaches, tiredness, dizziness, puffiness under the eyes, bad skin, foul stomach, no appetite, sharp pains in the back, swollen feet—all due to Kidney Trouble.

50c box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at your druggist's or direct.

THE BOLE DRUG CO., WINNIPEG, MAN

The outcome of Judge Fralick's order, we are told, will be to make certain members of the executive, who voted to disqualify McMillan, appear before a judge and show good and sufficient cause for their so doing. The judge's order was issued yesterday afternoon, and Mr. Wm. Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A., was notified by telegraph that the Belleville Hockey Club had taken action and that an injunction had been issued by Judge Fralick. Personal service of the writs was to have been made this morning, but the question now is, did the mails reach Toronto in time for the order to be served on the O.H.A. sub-committee and thus compel them to order to-night's game in Peterboro to be cancelled? It is to be hoped so, but what will happen in the future only the stars can tell.

A telephone message from Peterboro says that the game between Midland and the club of that town arranged for to-night, has been postponed, owing to the alleged non-arrival of the Midland team. Some people in this city say the Midland team has been there since Sunday. As a gentleman of this city says: "I guess the machinery is working."

Bade Them Good-bye.

On the evening of Feb. 20th, a large number of friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Foster gathered at their home near Halloway, which they have since left, to say good-bye. During the evening Mr. James A. Bird read an address expressing the esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Foster are held by their friends of many years' standing and wishing them prosperity and contentment in their new home. Some valuable gifts accompanied the address to which Mr. Foster replied suitably. Mr. Foster has bought one of the best farms in Prince Edward County—"Sunny Dale"—the home of the late Lewis B. Stinson, near Bloomfield.

Eye Strain and Civilization

In a lecture recently delivered on the above subject before the Cleveland Academy of Medicine by Geo. Gould, B.M., M.D., he says at the point of "Dangers of Eyestrain": "Without the least doubt, and weighing well what I say, I am sure that no discovery of modern medicine, except vaccination and the germ theory, is of so great importance as that of eye strain. Directly and indirectly it is the cause of more suffering than all the organic diseases combined. Most of all the headache in the world, and of sick headache, is absolutely due to that cause. A very large part of the neurasthenia, and of the hysteria also springs from it; and of 'biliousness,' 'nervousness' etc., it is one of the most active of all causes. And if all the modern productes of a general lowering of vitality none is more frequent and persistant than eyestrain." We make a specialty of them—Oberon cases. No charge for consultation—

NICE TALK, THIS.

BUT IT'S ONLY TALK, AFTER ALL, AND WE'VE HEARD SOMETHING LIKE IT BEFORE.

Toronto Globe: An editorial in The Seattle Post-Intelligencer has a hearty ring about it. The writer says that whether Russ beat Jap or Jap beats Russ, was of no deep interest to Americans. If Britain should become involved it would be a different thing, however. "When that time comes," the article continues, "then, as Tainali said nigh half a century ago at Delhi, they shall find that 'blood is thicker than water.' More than that. Neutral as we will try to be and should be between Russ and Japanese, let England once be involved and neutrality is bound to cease. We cannot stand by idly then, but—hands across the straits—we may say to our blood-brethren over the border, as the poet of our common heritage said:

"'Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them. Nought shall make us rue,
If England to itself do rest but true.'

Such expressions of blood-brotherhood are appearing in quite unexpected quarters in the United States press.

HER HUSBAND WAS A WRECK, NOW A PERFECT MAN.

Montreal.

Dear Sir,—I do not know how to express my gratitude to the Samaria Prescription Co. for the remedy which you sent me about four weeks ago. It produced an astonishing effect on my husband. I'm cannot express the feeling of gratitude I have for you but, however, accept a thousand thanks.

It is to you that I owe the life of my husband, who was before a wreck in health and business. To-day he is a perfect man, and I can state that he has not been for the last three years, since he had started to drink. Please find enclosed $5.00 more for another treatment for one of my friends, whose husband is in the same condition as mine was. You will address it to me, as she does not want her husband to know she is giving it to him. Yours truly,

MADAME A. VILLENEUVE.

SMASH RUSSIANS JAPS SINK ASKOLD

Russians Also Lose One Torpedo Boat at Port Arthur.

Armoured Cruiser Novik Badly Damaged and Battleship Retvizan Again Spiritered—Commander of Port Arthur Garrison Admits That There Is No Way Out But by Fighting, But He Says He Will Not Surrender—Japs Face the Yalu—Vladivostock Blockaded.

London, March 1.—Bennett Burleigh, The Daily Telegraph's correspondent in the Far East, cables that the Japanese bombarded Port Arthur for two hours Monday morning, and when the Russian fleet came out of the harbor, drove it back with great loss. The armored cruiser Askold was in a sinking condition, and the protected cruiser Novik was badly damaged. One torpedo boat was sunk, while the Retvizan was again splintered by the Japanese shells.

Japs Command the Sea.

No news is published here to-day of operations or movements other than at Port Arthur. As an indication that the Japanese possess full command of the sea, the Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Express, says it has been officially announced that the Japanese steamer boat service between Shanghai and Japan will be resumed without naval escort.

Jap Victory.

A despatch to The Daily Telegraph from Yinkow, dated Feb. 29, says: Fifteen Japanese warships furiously bombarded Port Arthur from the sea, for two hours this morning. The Russian cruisers Novik, Askold and Bayan, accompanied by four torpedo boats, steamed out to meet the attack. They were, however, forced to retire. The Askold was in a sinking condition, the Novik was badly damaged and a torpedo boat was sunk. The Russian battleship Retvizan was again damaged. The Japanese withdrew in good order.

THERE IS NO WAY OUT.

Port Arthur Completely Invested—Russian General's Grim Message.

Port Arthur, March 1.—General Stoessel, commander of the garrison here, has issued a general order directing the attention of the troops and inhabitants to the fact that the Japanese intend to land and seize the fortress. The general declares the Japanese consider the seizure of Port Arthur to be a question of national honor, and from their obstinate attacks and bombardments of the fortress and ships he can only conclude that the enemy will make every effort to capture the fortress, failing which the Japanese will destroy the railroad and withdraw.

Fight to the Death.

"The enemy, however," proceeds the general order, "is mistaken. Our troops know and the inhabitants are herewith informed by me that we do not yield. We must fight to the finish, as I, the commandant, will never give an order to surrender. I bring this to the notice of these who daring, and call on all to be prone examined of the necessity of fighting to the death. Those who have without fighting will not save themselves. There is no way out. On three sides there is the sea, and on the fourth will be the enemy. There is no means of escape except by fighting."

Japs Face the Yalu.

Che Foo, March 1.—The twenty-ninth Japanese infantry, occupied Pingyang, midway between Seoul and the Yalu River, on Sunday not a body of Russian cavalry scouts north of Pingyang and drove them back. It is estimated that 60,000 Japanese troops have landed at Chemulpo. The transports now are not escorted by warships.

The Japanese sailors who manned the merchant vessels which were sunk at Port Arthur, on landing here, shaved their heads as a mark of the disgrace they felt at the failure of the project.

The crew of the Jinsen Maru wrote their names on the foremast flag, which remained above water, when the ship went down.

May Be Blockaded.

St. Petersburg, March 1.—Direct confirmation of the report from Hakodate that Vladivostock is blockaded by Japanese vessels, cannot be obtained here, but it is considered not improbable.

PREDICTS A SMASH.

Rosebery Says Unity Among Liberals and That the Government Will Go in the General Elections.

London, March 1.—(C.A.P.)—Lord Rosebery, presiding at the annual banquet of the Liberal League at the Hotel Cecil, said that on all the great questions the Liberals were a united party. He believed in the nature of things that a general election was close at hand, especially as the Government was crumbling to pieces in its own inherent weakness. In the great campaign which had been waged Mr. Asquith had followed Mr. Chamberlain step by step, and where Mr. Asquith had passed little had been left of Mr. Chamberlain. He hoped that every Liberal was essentially an Imperialist. In the coming smash they would see that whatever the principles of the Liberal League prevailed.

Navy a Vital Necessity.

In introducing the naval estimates in the House of Commons yesterday, Ernest G. Pretyman, Secretary of the Admiralty, justified the increase in the estimates on the ground that the two powers standard must be maintained.

Mr. Arnold-Foster, Secretary of War, as a member of the Defence Committee, said he was of the opinion that the Government had done enough in the direction of proposals to the Continental Governments for a reduction of armaments. The Government was prepared to consider proposals from any foreign Government, but Great Britain's naval strength was a vital necessity.

Mr. Roberts' peace resolution was defeated by 171 to 122, majority 52.

Historians to Resign.

London, March 1.—(C. A. P.)—Sir William Vernon Harcourt, M. P., (Liberal leader), has announced his intention to resign his seat at the next general election on account of his age. Sir William has been in Parliament since 1868. This means that Lord Rosebery's star is in the ascendant.

H.M.S. Bonaventure Ashore.

Victoria, B. C., March 1.—It is reported here that H. M. S. Bonaventure, the new flagship of the North Pacific squadron, en route from Esquimalt to England, is ashore on the south or central American coast, and in a bad position.

The arbitration treaty between Great Britain and France was signed on Saturday.

SOO PAPERS ARE SIGNED.

Province Is Secured by First Mortgage on Algoma Central Railway—Government Bill to Follow Days.

Toronto, March 1.—James Conmee, M.P.P., has received a telephone message from Philadelphia last night that the papers in connection with the reorganization of the Soo enterprises had been signed and the reorganization plan goes into effect at once.

In conversation he said the plan provided for the issue of $20,000,000 bond capital. The scheme first proposed was that the Duffy syndicate should raise $8,000,000, but the transaction developed that there should be at least $12,000,000 of working capital. The completion of the Soo line to Sudbury, 180 miles distance or about 75 miles, was not included in the scheme, because it was merely intended to complete the graded portion to the Twin Pine. The settlement which is now secured by underwriting, the Canadian Improvement Company, which is composed of Philadelphia and New York capitalists undertake to get the money.

Security Given Government.

The Government will get a mortgage on the Algoma Central Railway and its assets, including twelve steamers, the ore docks at Michipicoten, and it also holds the land grant. The railway will get a loan of $6,100 a mile from the Dominion Government, the bridge dues to go by way of the ground rent, time $70,000 from that source.

The Government bill will be brought down in a few days.

First of the Year.

Dutton, March 1.—During the electric storm Sunday morning the barns belonging to William Marshman, who resides about four miles north of this place, was struck by lightning and burned. The total loss is $1,200.

Miner Crushed.

Glace Bay, N.S., March 1.—Stephen McNeil, a Dominion miner, was killed in the Caledonia pit yesterday afternoon by a fall of eight tons of coal. He was 35 years of age and leaves a widow and three children.

Want Treaty Denounced.

Berlin, March 1.—In the Reichstag yesterday the Socialists asked that the existing treaty of extradition between Germany and Russia be denounced.

PERMANENCE OF CURE.

THE CHIEF MERIT.

Many so called pill remedies will afford the user slight temporary relief, and the majority of sufferers do not expect more than this. Woman especially, after having tried every preparation recommended for the cure of piles, have come to the conclusion that there is no cure except by an operation. This is rightly viewed with dread. Because of the shock to the delicate nervous system of women, and many of these afflicted, have resigned themselves to the situation with never a thought that there is any help in sight for them.

We invite the attention of all such to the experience of the lady whose address is given below.

"I feel it my duty to recommend the Pyramid Pile Cure, for after suffering ten years with a most distressing form of piles, I am entirely cured, thanks to this remedy. Anyone doubting this can write to Margaret Brady, 159 Whitman street, Cleveland, Ohio."

Ten months later she writes: "I am glad to say that I am still perfectly free from piles, and have not had the slightest trouble since I first used your remedy. I am well known in Cleveland and have advertised Pyramid Pile Cure extensively here. I take pleasure in telling the public of my cure from an operation, which I always dreaded, and you are assured the remedy can have no firmer advocate than I."—

Testimony like this should convince the most skeptical, that Pyramid Pile Cure not only cures, but cures to stay cured. It is in that form of suppository that is applied in the privacy of the home, directly to the parts affected, and does its work quickly and painlessly.

Druggists sell this famous remedy for 50c a package, and we urge all sufferers to buy a package now and give it a trial to-night. Accept no substitutes.

Write Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., for their little book on the cause and cure of piles which is sent free for the asking.

NO. 400,

Front St., - - Belleville,

Is becoming more popularly known every day as the storm centre for frugal buyers, or in other words it is the Underprice Store of Belleville, and will continue to be so if it takes the last ox in dad's barn. Of course there are many reasons why this store should receive the attention of every broad-minded person, 'narrow ones, too," if you please. First—Because some of your other merchants are so interested in your and our welfare that they helped to make a law to keep merchants out who would dare to come in competition with them. $250 is only a drop in the bucket for us, but it might be the price of some would-be stock, everything being boiled down. Second—there is one less empty store room. Third and last—because this is the only Underprice store where high grade goods are sold at low grade prices. Export and consumption of merchandise determine the general condition of prosperity, and to learn the trade situation and prices of merchandise of this store with the volume of daily sales, it will be necessary for you to become one of our many customers. But the test of prosperity in the final and best analysis is the good-data store and our Friday and Saturday bargains are the talk of the town, and it will pay you to visit this economic store on every shopping tour or miss the best bargains ever offer

More visitors are finding enjoyment throughout our store. Why not you?

The best preparation for to-morrow is to do good work to-day—a good preparation for life hereafter is to buy at

RISE OF THE TOLSTOIS.

Curious Story Told of the Famous Novelist's Ancestors.

The following curious story of the Tolstoi family is retailed in one of the London society papers. The founder of this family was in Peter the Great's time a simple doorkeeper before the apartments of the Emperor. One day as he was standing at his post a nobleman approached and asked to be admitted. The doorkeeper, however, refused to let him by, declaring that the Emperor had given positive orders that no one that afternoon was to be admitted to his presence.

"But," said the noble, "I am the Prince ——."

"Still, I cannot admit you, sir," said the doorkeeper.

Enraged, the nobleman struck the doorkeeper across the face with his riding whip.

"Strike away, your highness," said the other, "but nevertheless I cannot let you in."

The tumult had been overheard by the Emperor. He now opened the door and asked what the trouble was. The noble told him. He listened in silence, and then he said: "Very well, Tolstoi, were struck by this gentleman for obeying my orders. Here, take my stick and strike him back."

"But, your majesty," exclaimed the noble, "this man is a common soldier!"

"Then I make him a captain," said the Emperor.

"But I am an officer of your majesty's household."

"I make him a colonel of my life guards."

"My rank, as your majesty knows, is that of a general," protested the nobleman.

"Then I make him a general, too, and thus the beating you are to get will come from a man of your own rank."

The noble then took his punishment philosophically. As for the young soldier, he was next day commissioned a general and made a count. From him the present family of the Tolstois is said to be descended.

An Old Question Revived.

But even the harvester is not an entirely modern invention. Pliny in A.D. 60 described a reaper used on the plains of Bhootia. It had a comb-like bar which stripped off the useful idea can be made to do service in a new guise in the twentieth century is shown by the fact that a patent has recently been granted for a machine propelled from behind, to cut grain in this same old way, with only the added accomplishment of threshing it at the same time.

The advent and perfecting of the self-binder made possible the vast wheat fields of the West. As an instrument of civilization the binder is second only to the plow, and its influence is just as far-reaching. Our reaper crops are now harvested with an ever-increasing rapidity.

Hamilton has a police census, whose duty it is to hand out policies even to the papers. He is rapidly getting to be a standing joke in the Ambitious City, and no wonder. People who try to curtail the privileges of the press are short-sighted, cross-eyed and weak in the upper story. Newspapers have always been one of the greatest aids to the prevention of crime by means of the publicity they bring to offenders. Hamilton seems to be suffering from a lack of grey matter in the heads of its people in authority.

Experts say the Russo-Jap war may last four years. If that is true the O.H.A. may get a chance to throw Belleville out three times more before peace is declared.

Kidney Disease May Last for Years

CAUSING MUCH PAIN OR SUFFERING OR IT MAY SUDDENLY PROVE FATAL.

Pains in the small of the back, scalding, burning sensations when passing water and gradual loss of flesh and weight are the unmistakable symptoms of kidney disease.

If you would prevent Bright's Disease, rheumatism, stone in the bladder and other dreadfully painful developments of kidney disease, you must act promptly.

If you choose Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills the treatment will not long be pursued before you will find yourself greatly benefitted.

The great reputation which this great kidney medicine has made for itself is due to no small extent to the wonderful promptness with which it brings relief and cure to the sufferer from backache.

Backache, lumbago, rheumatism, aching sides and limbs result from poisons in the blood which are entirely eliminated by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

It, seems rather unwise to experiment with untried remedies, when you can rely absolutely on this famous prescription of the great receipt book author.

Mrs. F. Henthorn, whose husband is of the firm of Marsh & Henthorn, founders and machinists, and who lives at 260 Jean street, Belleville, states:—"Some years ago I was taken with a pain across the small of my back, caused no doubt from deranged kidneys and my system generally was run down. I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must say I found great benefit from my trouble at once. They proved thorough and effective in action and soon brought about a complete cure. We have always used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in our family and found them very helpful."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author are on every box of his remedies.

Street Arabs Who Rise.

Newsboys and street arabs often make admirable clerks. The way they work into commercial houses is astonishing. A large percentage of public and prosperous business men of America began as newsboys, but probably no one realizes how many work their way up from the gutter to wealth and influence. They begin as hangers on and are recruited from the ranks of every class of street gamins. Their wits have been sharpened by contact with the sordid side of life and by observation in the school of the street. They know the value of friends. So they are to be found at the door of every big house, ready at any time to run an errand, always at hand to pick up an umbrella or open a door. And before the people who regularly pass in and out of the doors of the place realize it one of these little chaps they have been accustomed to see is on the payroll. Somebody has bought him a dir dollar suit of clothes to put him more at ease with the people and weather, and he is on the road that is a surprising number of cases leads to success.

Eddystone Lighthouse.

The famous Eddystone lighthouse stands fourteen miles off the coast of Land's End and is perhaps the most celebrated in the world. It has often been used as an illustration by poets and preachers, for no other lighthouse is in such a lonesome or dangerous place, and none costs so much money and trouble. There are three keepers, who live there with their families, and two of them are always on duty, while the third is on the main coast enjoying a vacation. They relieve one another each month, so that none of the keepers remain on duty more than two months at a time. The change and rest are said to be absolutely necessary to preserve the nerves of the keepers. The lighthouse is 135 feet high, was erected in 1882 at a cost of $468,000 and rises from a submerged rock. The first lighthouse was erected on this rock as long ago as 1691, but was washed away six years after and was not replaced for a long time. The second was burned down in 1775; the third stood from 1767 to 1882 and was famous in history.

"The" O'Gorman Mahon.

The last of the Irish duelists, O'Gorman Mahon, was indignant at the number of his colleagues in the Irish party who claimed the prefix and by way of ridiculing their pretensions to chieftainship assumed the name there were only three personages properly entitled to it—the pope, the devil and the O'Gorman Mahon. The O'Connor Don, The McDermott, The O'Donoghue, The McGillicuddy of the Reeks, The O'Grady and The O'Sullivan are regarded as entitled to the distinction as heads of old Irish families, or septs. There are also some in Scotland, notably "The McNab," whose ancestor had a boat of his own at the time of the flood, being too proud to accept the hospitality of Noah.

Seldi's Silent Tongue.

One of the most striking anecdotes told in Hermann Klein's "Thirty Years of Musical Life in London" relates to Anton Seidl's first interview with Wagner in the library at Wahnfried. Seidl found the room dark, and, imagining that no one was there, he pulled out his letter of introduction and began silently rehearsing the speech he had prepared. Suddenly from out of the gloomy corner Wagner appeared, and Seidl was so nervous that he could not get out a sentence of his speech. This proved to be his salvation, for Wagner, declaring, "If you can work as well as you can hold your tongue, you will do," engaged him on the spot.

Still Innocent.

"Senator, what was the nearest you ever came to being bribed?" asked the girl who always blurts everything right out.

"It was the time I voted for the postal box bill and received 7,000 shares of stock in the concern that was to make the boxes when the bill gave it a monopoly of the business."

"I should think that was a clear case against you."

"No. The measure didn't go through, and the stock never amounted to anything."

One Description of It.

"What," asked the teacher, "do you understand by the strenuous life? Does it convey any meaning to you?"

"Sure," replied the bad boy.

"What?"

"Why, what happens in the wood shed when pa gets home after you've been naughty," was the prompt reply.

THE YELLOW MAN.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

his punishment. I want to punish him myself."

I confess, knowing something of the Chinese character, that there was reason in this, and my momentary doubts were satisfied. Koon-Si was not pleased to look upon, but that he was the instrument entirely for our use was as painfully apparent that there could be no question of severing ourselves from his guidance.

And so for another hour we smoked and talked, ultimately agreeing upon a plan of action. Koon-Si, being one of those persons who seem to know everything, possessed considerable action and, seeing that we fell readily into his wishes, informed us that on the morrow the Foochow would sail for Shanghai and advised a passage by her. Knowing no reason why we should delay our departure, we at once accepted this proposal, and Jim there and then handed the carpenter sufficient money to enable him to purchase a few necessaries and his passage. Then, overwhelmed with thanks and compliments, we were shown down stairs and out through the shop, and thankful I was to taste again the comparatively fresh air of the street.

"Tomorrow," said Koon-Si as he peered up, blinking, from his cellar, "we shall meet on board the Foochow?"

"Tomorrow," answered my uncle.

"You must not be cunning and escape up," continued the carpenter, "but if you should you will remember that we are strong men. Otherwise there will be lowered his voice and looked fearfully about—"well, the society is everywhere."

"I understand," said Jim. "We shall meet again in a Chinaman's."

"At Shanghai you shall know everything."

We turned from Koon-Si and walked down the narrow street, and as we reached the junction we hesitated for a moment which way to turn. Then it was that our friend Ah Yon advanced, smiling and bowing.

"Makee loseem way?" he said.

"Hello!" cried Jim. "What are you doing here?"

"My makee wait; tink you makee loseem way."

"Well, it is a puzzling, evil smelling place," was the reply.

Ah Yon grinned.

"Chinaman welly dirty beast. He allee same belong dog—like bad smell. You no takee Sockalee?"

"No."

"Welly good. Makee walk. My makee lead."

The rascal stepped out with a jaunty gait, and still sloeing, fats and evening cleared a way for us whenever our progress was liable to receive a check from the masses of people who thronged the streets.

At length we left the worst part of the native quarter behind, and as Ah Yon still continued to pace ahead my uncle and I busied ourselves with discussing the remarkable behavior of Koon-Si.

"He's not exactly the sort of fellow I should choose for a traveling companion," said Jim, "but I'm glad we met him. It is evident that he could and will there would not be the remotest possibility of our ever coming in contact with Kung-a-hee, unless we were to seek us."

Instead of which we seek him. But tell me, Jim, if by any chance Kung falls into our power—what then?"

I asked this question apparently so superfluous, because hitherto our threats of vengeance had been of an indefinite kind, or at least mine had, for I was not one who could contemplate murder with any equanimity. My plan was to seize Kung and hand him over to the government. There would be nothing more for us to fear or do after that.

As I spoke Jim swung around and laid a heavy hand on my shoulder. His olive eyes sought mine, and they were hard, cold, repellent.

"I shall kill him!"

Never was a man more in earnest. The bitterness of years was crowded into that utterance. There was no hesitation here, no doubt. I knew now that the easy going city man, who had hitherto contented nothing more deadly than an ingenious piece of reasoning in the shape of a prospectus, had given about for years with murder in his heart. I saw it now as I had never seen it before, and though I could not palliate my the frightful justice of the contemplated act, I would have given much not to have seen that awful look in my uncle's eyes.

Further on we stopped again to watch the shipping in the bay, the landing of sooty square boxes from a steam launch, and, indeed, bright, buoyant and always willing, and on more than one occasion we gave him good proof of our appreciation. He was a strange creature, and he had funny Chinese eyes, set in a Chinese countenance, but in Chinaman, but he always seemed grateful for a kind act or a kind word, perhaps the first that had ever come his way.

Before the ship cleared the Lyeemoon pass we had become a glimmer. Koon-Si among the cooly passengers, Feeling a little concerned and just a little suspicious of having shown too much confidence in the carpenter, we strolled forward and there, leaning against the winch, was our esteemed friend of the silk mostrit. Though he looked a little cleaner than when we last saw him, he was still dressed after native fashion, and his pigtail was coiled, but for his nose, at which one had to look closely before discovering the slit, it differed nothing from the surrounding ugliness of his compatriots.

We watched the ship for a few minutes longer and then passed on, while Yon, who had taken it for granted that we were in need of his company, kept beside us and pointed out this and that object of interest and expatiated on matters in general with an enormous ability. Presently Jim stopped and beckoned to the donor.

"Tell me, Have you ever been in Shanghai?"

"Yes, cap'n."

"Hankow?"

Yon hesitated a moment, and a curious scrambling look crept into his little black eyes. Then he smiled. It was a smile which seemed somewhat oily and singularly inscrutable.

"Are been 'Ankow side," he said.

"You know the island of Chinglung?"

"Plenty well, cap'n. 'Ave makee long look, see."

"You no 'ave got the Yangtse sky-so?"

"Sabbee," answered Yon. "'Ave been one—two—thice time 'Ankow side."

"Do you know the island of Chinglung?"

Yon screwed up his ugly face in a vain effort to remember.

"No sabbee Ching-lin," he said at last. "Yon no 'ave got plenty island. You go 'Ankow side, cap'n?"

Jim hesitated for a moment, and I saw by his look that he was inclined to rely on his guard. He fixed Mr. Yon with a keen look, but the inquisitive Chinaman bore the scrutiny with an indifference which was most reassuring.

"I may," said Jim.

"You no 'ave got boy, cap'n?"

"No."

"Suppose you takee me along? My makee welly pliper servant. You belong stranger. My makee speak Chinee, sabbee?"

Jim looked at me and I at him. The need of an interpreter was not a necessity while Koon-Si formed one of the party, and suppose by any chance we should lose the valuable services of that gentleman? Moreover, Mr. Yon was an extremely intelligent fellow, and by payment we might command undivided allegiance.

Jim looked at me inquiringly, and, knowing what was passing in his thoughts, I said, "We must make inquiries."

He turned to Mr. Yon.

"I will think over your proposal. Yon. Come to the hotel tomorrow and you shall know."

"My makee welly grateful," said the fellow. "Yon, be belong first chop boy."

I could not help smiling at the quaint eology of self. The rascal had a Celestial sense of humor.

CHAPTER XXIV.

HE STRIKES TWICE WHO STRIKES FIRST.

Upon our return to the hotel we made a few necessary inquiries concerning Mr. Yon more as a sop to our conscienses than aught else, for so that he proved not a Boxer emissary we cared little for his reputation. For the worst we had in hand intelligence and nerve were of more importance than a good character. That he had the one we did not doubt, that he possessed the other time alone would show. At all events we were not long in deciding to take him with us. This journey we contemplated was a strange one, and out of it much might come.

The following morning he presented himself at the hotel and was duly engaged, and later on in the day we went off together to join the Foochow. Yon, who held the position of our boy, took advantage of that privilege and established himself in the cabin next ours, displayed a conspicuous ability to please. Then there followed the shriek of the whistle, a warning to the impudent campans, the shouting and the bustle, and presently the Foochow stood up the River Yang-tse, the widest highway through which we had entered not a week before.

Of the voyage to Shanghai I have little to relate. We found Ah Yon a perfect jewel—a most quiet, bright, inoffensive and always willing, and on more than one occasion we gave him good proof of our appreciation. He was a strange creature, and he had funny Chinese eyes, set in a Chinese countenance, but in Chinaman, but he always seemed grateful for a kind act or a kind word, perhaps the first that had ever come his way.

LIFTING THE BURDEN

With a Gentle Hand—ANTI-PILL.

Woman's life is a battle with nerves that sap strength and energy. Shattered nerves aggravate and promote chronic troubles. There is no time in a woman's life when ANTI-PILL will fail.

When the sleep is restless, food causes distress, headache or dizziness gains in the order named, indigestion, appetite poor, constipated, all tired out, depressed—just one trial of Dr. Leonhardt's ANTI-PILL will "lighten the burden" that is dragging you down. It begins its work in the stomach from which the blood is fed and the nerves nourished.

ANTI-PILL embraces principle. Its effects are natural from anything else, and there is no mistaking the wonderful influence. Dr. Leonhardt has prepared the formula entirely free from the injurious ingredients common to present day Pills, etc. It is the ideal system treatment. Price, 50 cents per box of dealers, or by addressing WILSON PILL CO., Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada, until free sample is to any address.

WHAT TEA DOES TO RHEUMATICS.

(When you next take tea think of this.

Coffee contains only five to seven grains.

Rheumatism is Uric Acid in the blood.

Uric Acid accumulates from food when the digestive apparatus cannot create enough Alkaline elements to neutralize the poisons.

This acid collects uric, or worn-out waste matter from the system.

That Uric makes the blood when Alkaline action has not previously neutralized it.

By and by the waste matter reaches the joints and muscles, through circulation of the blood.

There it gradually deposits in solid particles, like granulated sugar.

Those solid particles grind between the joints and muscles at every movement.

This grinding causes irritation and pain.

Those in turn may develop inflammation and swelling. Then the system's nutrition beatirs Nature to help her self.

She proceeds to exast the hard Uric particles over with cushions of pulpy matter, and then with dissolving strats of an outer sore.

This pulpy covering grows to the bones, as well as to the particles deposited there. It hardens like plaster or sealing wax. Then we have "bony joints," almost inflexible and usually painful. Nature's intention from the pain and inflammation.

That is rheumatism at its worst. It is bad enough before it gets that far.

There is but one sure way of curing Rheumatism. That one step is to neutralize the Uric Acid already in the blood, dissolve, and carry away, the hard deposits that grind between the joints. Then our digestive apparatus into such healthy condition that it will manufacture no more Uric Acid and more Alkalines.

All Uric Acid sources generally have failed to do.

It is what I studied a lifetime to accomplish, and achieved only after many failures and thousands of experiments.

At last I found, in Germany, a Salycin which was the solvent I sought, but absolutely safe to use.

My discovery, now called Dr. Ching-lung's Rheumatic Cure, acts directly, but internally, upon uric acid in the blood and tissues.

It dissolves, and carries off, the painful deposits, producing an immediate change in the quality of the blood, and neutralizing the acid in it which is the cause of the inflammation and extended the disease.

Then the sufferer's joints to flexibility, and it can't undo, in a week, the damage caused by years of rheumatic poisons.

But it will benefit every case, and if it does not cure, it will relieve Rheumatism.

I will tell you on I of this that I will supply Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure to any sick one on this plan. If it cures, a month's trial, at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost to him is only 50 cents. Is not that fair enough?

And if it fails, I bear the whole cost myself.

Surely no one shall be the judge—shall decide who shall pay.

Surely you will not continue to suffer when I offer you this trial at my risk.

Write me a letter an important Treatise on rheumatism, telling of its relief and cure.

It is free to rheumatic people.

Write me a postal card or letter, addressed Dr. Shoop, Box 2116, Racine, Wis.

Your simple cases often yield to one bottle of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Even the worst, the all chronic cases do not supply it on a month's trial. You must write me for that. CLS.

self on the great good fortune which had followed us since we first seriously took in hand our enterprise, and that Koon-Si was a lovable creature there was no doubt, and indeed, he develop any immediate affection. His manner rendered me too forcibly of the stolid, mysterious mercenary of society. There were a cunning and a shrewdness in him which, though they might be useful, were unpleasant. When Kung made an enemy of him, he committed a most unfortunate act, one which I believed would cost him dearly. It was not without reason my fancy had pictured Kung's head.

Had we searched the whole of China I doubt if we could have discovered a man more suited for our purpose.

The Chungking was not a nice steamer, but her captain was, and a nice captain, but she plodded her way up the great river with commendable dignity, and one morning we found ourselves shipped informed us that we should be in Hankow early the next morning. We thanked him. It was a piece of information supplied gratuitously, even chocked at us, but we thanked him. It is extremely pleasant to meet an amiable fellow countryman in a foreign land.

Toward dusk, as we rounded a long bend of the river, an island opened out in the distance, and by the time we were abreast of it the day had apprecially darkened. As Jim and I stood at the rail watching the dense array of land, upon a slight eminence of which we could just distinguish the outline of a dilapidated pagoda, a voice muttered from behind, "Ching-lin."

Turning sharply, we encountered the form of Mr. Koon-Si. The beggar gave me a start. The quiet, crawling, mysterious movements of these yellow men had got upon my nerves. Out of the shadows they came like ghosts or shadows, they glided into their vanished self that we had come to Hankow, and I was afraid my face showed it. Nothing was clear. We were like children groping in the dark. We were too much in the hands of this carpenter.

"I agree with you," said Jim, to whom I had expressed these doubts, "but it is fairly evident that without him we should be more in the dark than we are. I admit that I don't like the fellow, but what of that? He is in the very best hott with us, and I believe him to be a shrewd and a masterful man, and he is absolutely necessary to us. Beyond that I do not see beyond him. When he pinch comes, you may be sure that he will fight only for his own hand. Still, we can't expect more than that, your hand on your revolver."

The outcome of Koon-Si's bundle under his arm, here cut short any further conversation. "He was smiling pleasantly and seemed in the best of spirits.

"I have spoken to my illustrious cousin," he said, "and he is ready. But we must move with caution. The eyes of Kung are everywhere."

"Have you news?"

"Nothing definite. But we have hopes that Kung is still on his island."

"If that is so," said I, reverting to a former idea, "why does your cousin not denounce him?"

"To whom?" asked the carpenter, turning upon me with an amused expression.

"Why, to the authorities, of course. You say they would give much to secure him."

"True. But you must not forget that Kung is the head of a society which embraces all ranks. The very official to whom you confided your secret would probably be in the employ of the very man you wished to denounce. Then for you the end is not far off. No; it is not in that way that Kung shall be brought to book. We must strike with our own hands. You are prepared?"

"Always," answered Jim grimly. "You carry"—

"That which will send Kung hurrieding to join his ancestors."

"Good. You are brave men. Brave

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Psychine's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in them. The fact that the fever centres and the blood is purified very quickly by this remedy, and the result is almost immediate, means a long suffer makes a hearty laugh.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it, as many people do, in the belief that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumption. Many graves be magnificent what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Avery, Middleville, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive" is the best cough medicine I have ever used for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough, but after using a bottle attending me, was gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption. I was given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I also recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

Any person knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it. Mr. Jas. Cook, Lake Side, writes: "I have used Carter's Little Liver Pills for some time, and find them very good for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach."

The average watch represents but 12 hours' work per day.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a household word throughout Barrboos, cholera, summer complaint, and dysentery are quickly relieved, even in children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the above, and has been successful in the most ripe fruit, countenance, etc. It acts like a charm, speedily and surely, and fails to conquer the disease. No one should be without it. It is a true friend of this medicine convenient.

Much talk, many lies.

AT DEATH'S DOOR, DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—It was a wonderful medical adviser and darts that led me I cast, I was at death's door. I was induced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspepsia Cure, and my own one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight rapidly sank from 170 lbs. All the food I took for three months had been made from Vegetable Discovery consisted of Dyspepsia Cure, and I am pleased to say I have regained my usual weight, and am surprisingly well and strong. I feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty doses Vegetable Discovery since it arrived, and all my friends and people in this section know how I was cured. You are at liberty to use this testimonial as you see fit. Yours truly, (Signed) W. H. VALCOURT, Wotton, P.Q. Geners. Merchant

Always reliable and fruitful subjects are yearly born at sea.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will relieve it. Try them and be convinced.

The Flagging Attention of the Constant application to business is apt to upset the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. The genuine Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. The want of exercise brings on nervous complaints. Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to assimilate food properly. In this condition, a few doses of Bitters, which will be found a recuperative of rare power, the weak will find a most healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

A LOT OF CHIPS.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had bad luck, and I let her me with a severe pain in the small of my back which I could not get to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I got Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it internally and externally, and by rubbing and sweating, for three days, it left me entirely, after which time I completely cured."

Don't gather, gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system make Dr. Carson's Pills a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed "Perfection." Many people who have used other remedies of proper remedies had been used. But attacked by not only partially cured, and thoroughly subdue the pain and disease.

A HEALTHY OLD AGE

The Goal of Every Man's Ambition

THOUSANDS of human beings are suffering under the burden of a sickly, premature old age, because of diseased kidneys. These organs once diseased give out to all parts of the body a deadly poison acting potions. The face loses its color, the eyes its luster, the brain its ambition, and the sufferer their energy, and many of the most troublesome ailments result.

Bu-Ju cures all forms of kidney trouble, and brings back youth and vigor by toning and invigorating the kidneys. It is a never-failing cure for every form of kidney ailment. It cures rheumatism by eradicating the cause of rheumatism, kidney disorders. If you are suffering from any form of kidney trouble, commence taking Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, at once. You cannot afford to neglect the many symptoms that point to diseased kidneys.

Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont.

Gentlemen—I had suffered almost continually for seven years from kidney trouble. Could scarcely walk and was unable to attend to my farm duties. Two Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, were sufficient to relieve me from my disorder. After taking the first few pills I felt much relieved and after taking half a box was able to do a full day's work. I know one box of Bu-Ju, never fail to relieve any one, and think they are the finest pill made. I give this testimonial freely and truly. JAMES ABBOTT.

BETTER THAN A MAGAZINE.

The Illustrated Buffalo Express, in its enlarged form, is just about the best illustrated newspaper in the world. It was the pioneer in its field and it ever has been in the lead of the papers which prize quality above mere quantity. The issue of February 28th contained more than six dozen pictures for five cents. Everyone remarked on the beauty and interest of that number. It is the aim of the publishers and editors of The Express to issue, not only the best newspaper in the field, but in fact for each issue better than the one that preceded it. The increased size of the paper makes it possible to offer a greater variety than ever before. The interests of all ages and conditions of readers can thus be fully catered to.

The issue of March 6th will be noteworthy in many respects. It will be an automobile number and its first page will be largely devoted to a pointed drawing on this subject, which will be supplemented by several photographic reproductions, the who's making a solid page of pictures.

The Russian-Japanese war will receive some attention, not only from John Smith, but from others. Frank G. Carpenter has interviewed Secretary Corteyou of the new Department of Labor, which is expected to do as much in meeting industrial problems. The young people will find material that will surely interest them, as well as their elders.

Every one of the twelve illustrated pages will have something which will interest every live man or woman, supplemented by the best of general and special reading matter that can be had.

The Express is not only the best Sunday newspaper printed, but it is better than most magazines.

THE MODIFIED G.T.P. CONTRACT

Time to Complete Western Division Extended to Dec. 1, 1911.

Canada Is Split Into the Eastern Section—Dominion Government Agrees to Impossibilities Guarantee of Bonds For Cost of Construction of Western Section Through Prairies—What G.T.R. Shareholders Must Pass Upon.

London, March 1.—An advance copy of the special report to be submitted at the general meeting of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, to be held on March 8, was handed out last night.

Proposed Changes.

The document closes with the proposed changes in the agreement, as follows:

THIS AGREEMENT, made this eighteenth day of February, 1904, between His Majesty King Edward VII., acting in respect of the Dominion of Canada and herein represented and acting by the Honorable Henry Robert Emmerson, of the first part, and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company of the second part.

"WHEREAS by contract bearing date the 22nd day of July, 1903, made by and entered into between the Minister of the King, of the first part, and Sir Charles Rivers Ogilvie and others, acting on behalf of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, certain, and upon certain terms and conditions in said contract mentioned and set forth, for the construction and operation of a line of railway as described therein, and,

"WHEREAS said contract was afterwards confirmed by an act of parliament of Canada, assented to August 21st of the statutes of 1903 and known as the National Transcontinental Railway Act, and,

"WHEREAS the parties hereto have agreed, subject to make certain modifications in said contract,

"NOW, THEREFORE, this agreement witnesseth that the said parties have contracted, each with the other, as follows:

"Firstly—Notwithstanding anything in the said contract contained, the time fixed for the completion of the eastern division of said railway shall be and the same is hereby EXTENDED TO AND TILL THE 1ST DAY OF DECEMBER, 1911, and the tenth paragraph of the said contract shall be amended accordingly and also by inserting the word 'pitches' after the word 'Roads' in the fourth line thereof.

"Secondly—Notwithstanding anything contained in the fifth and sixth paragraphs of said contract, the company shall, when it has completed the construction of the said eastern division in accordance with the terms of said contract hereby amended, and SHALL HAVE EXPENDED BONA FIDE THEREON TO THE AMOUNT OF FIFTEEN MILLION DOLLARS, IF THE SASKATCHEWAN DIVISION SHALL NOT THEN BE COMPLETED AS HEREINAFTER PROVIDED BY THE GOVERNMENT, BE ENTITLED TO HAVE ISSUED TO THE DEPOSIT MADE UNDER THE 12TH PARAGRAPH HOF SAID CONTRACT, by reason of which said deposit will remain authorized in the hands of the government under the terms of said contract, and the company shall also be entitled to the guarantee of the government endorsed upon the said bonds issued in respect of the eastern division pursuant to paragraph 29 of said contract, and if above is to the satisfaction of the government that the moneys spent on the said eastern division and selling stock to the said amount of fifteen million dollars, and the said construction and completion of the eastern division and that the application of said deposit will enable the company to complete the western division and to supply rolling stock to the said amount and that the same will be so supplied, the said deposit shall be released by the government in such instalments as may from time to time be agreed upon. Provided, however, that of the said rolling stock to the amount of fifteen million dollars, rolling stocks of the amount of five million dollars, to the satisfaction of the government, shall then have been supplied in the manner provided by the 22nd paragraph of said contract, and shall be found to be assigned to the eastern division under said paragraph and the remainder shall be ready to serve all the purposes in respect of the whole of said contract intended to be served by five million dollars worth of rolling stock by said 22nd paragraph mentioned.

"Thirdly—Pending the completion of the eastern division by the company, the government shall, from time to time, upon the completeness to be ascertained under the said act, and upon such portions of said eastern division as may from time to time be completed, but upon such terms as to satisfactory operation upon between the company and the said commissioners, which terms are not to be more onerous than those in the lease of the Quebec section of the said contract provided for, each in so far as it may be necessary, give full effect to the paramount right of the said commissioners over the said lines mentioned, and subject always to the paramount right of said commissioners to use and operate the same without any payment of toll or other compensation, and to such proposals as they may deem necessary or expedient in executing their command.

"Fourthly—The twenty-eighth paragraph of said contract is amended by striking out all of the said paragraph after the word 'mat' in the eighth line thereof and inserting instead the words 'in respect of the prairie section exceed thirty-two per cent of the maximum grade of, nothing to exceed a maximum of 3.5 per cent, of such end of construction may be allowed at the rate of $13,000 per mile.'

"Fifthly—Notwithstanding anything in the said contract contained, THE GOVERNMENT may and shall, reserving always the proportions in said contract provided as between the bonds and mountain sections of the western division, IMPLEMENT, for the purposes and subject otherwise to the provisions of said contract, THE GUARANTEE OF THE BONDS OF THE SAID COMPANY TO BE ISSUED ON ACCOUNT OF THE COST AND CONSTRUCTION OF SAID WESTERN DIVISION IN SUCH A MANNER AS MAY BE AGREED UPON, so as to make the proceeds of said bonds as to be guaranteed, A SUM EQUAL TO 75 PER CENT. OF THE COST OF CONSTRUCTION OF THE WESTERN DIVISION, as contained and provided in said contract, but not exceeding in respect of the prairie section $13,000 per mile.

"Sixthly—Notwithstanding anything in the said contract contained, the government shall not exercise any rights in respect to possession by foreclosure or sale by reason of the non-payment of interest by the company under the thirty-first, thirty-second and thirty-third paragraphs of said contract, or under all or any of them, unless and until there shall be such default to the extent of the whole of a sum equal to the accumulation for five years of such interest, as the company is not entitled to pay out of the moneys in its hands or to capitalize by the provisions of said paragraphs.

"Seventh—In case of such default being made by the company as to which the rest of said bonds so guaranteed by the government as security, under the provisions of the said contract as amended hereby, shall become due, the government shall take possession of said western division of the railway of which the name, the necessity of the government thing, notwithstanding anything in the said contract contained, be the taking possession of the railway and the said sum of $27,000 agree to be appointed as hereinafter provided, which entire cost possession shall be to manage and operate said western division, to receive all tolls and revenues thereof; to pay the running working expenditure as defined by the Railway Act of 1903, including the renewals from time to time of rolling stock, and to distribute the surplus of earnings and receipts, if any, after payment of such working expenditure pari passu between the government and the holders of bonds issued in respect of said contract and guaranteed by the Grand Trunk R. R. and Company of Canada and the proportion of 75 per cent. of such surplus to the government receipts, and 25 per cent. to the holders of the said bonds, and the moneys to be required to be paid by the said parties hereto respectively in that behalf; the said contract and the act to be applicable to the government with the consent of the company, and if they be unwilling, then by a majority of the justices of the supreme court of Canada.

"Eighth—Should possession be taken under the aforesaid right of the government, such possession shall terminate at such time as the payment of the proportion herein provided of said principal of bills and coupons shall have been paid off all arrears of such proportion.

"Ninth—Notwithstanding anything in the 27th paragraph of said contract contained, the Grand Trunk Pacific Company of Canada shall not, after the completion of Section C of the common stock therein mentioned less and the amount of shares held by it, exclusive of not exceeding one thousand, be prevented from making, issuing or disposition of such common stock as the said Grand Trunk Pacific Company of Canada may deem expedient, provided, however, that the said Grand Trunk Pacific Company of Canada shall, during the delay mentioned in the 28th paragraph, continue to hold a majority of said stock by such time as shall enable the Grand Trunk Pacific Company of Canada to control the policy of the company.

"Ten—Paragraph 10 of said contract is amended by adding thereto the following clause: "Provided further that in the event of the company hereby intending to undertake the operation of said eastern division itself, the company shall be entitled for a further period of 50 years to such running powers, privileges rights as may be necessary to the continuity of operations between said western division and other portions of the company's system and the Grand Trunk Railway system, upon such terms as may from time to time be agreed upon between the said parties or in case of failure so to agree, as to the terms of such running powers, as may be determined in the manner provided by paragraph 24 "2" of said contract, which hereby made applicable to cases under this paragraph. If any such branch line or lines shall have received any grant or grants under the provisions of any act of the parliament of Canada, the amount of such grant or grants when withdrawn shall be deducted from such value and the difference only shall be payable by the government upon taking over such branch line or lines.

"Twelve—Said contract modified by this agreement is to be ratified by the general meeting of the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Pacific Company of Canada, to be held before the 8th day of March, 1904, and THE DEPOSIT required by the 12th paragraph of said contract IS TO BE MADE IN CASH OR APPROVED SECURITIES IMMEDIATELY AFTER SUCH RATIFICATION.

"Thirteen—The parties have herein expressly provided for said contract and for each and every provision of this supplemental contract, but they are hereby expressly declared to be ratified and the words and expressions defined in said contract shall, except where herein expressly varied, be held to have the same meaning herein as in the said contract, and particularly and without in anyway limiting the generality of the foregoing, the word and expressions "government," "company," "eastern division," "western division," "prairie section," "mountain section," "bonds" and "rolling stock" shall have the same meaning as in said contract.

"Fourteen—The 34th paragraph of the said contract is hereby amended by inserting the word 'thirty-five' for the word 'twenty-five' in the twelfth line thereof.

"Fifteen—This agreement shall be submitted to and be subject to the ratification of the parliament of Canada.

"In witness whereof, the said Henry Robert Emmerson, acting on behalf of his majesty the king, hath hereunto set his hand and seal, and the Honorable Charles Hibbert Tupper, Bart., Clifford Sifton, Arthur Wellington Ross, Frederick William Gordon Haultain, Charles M. Hays, Frank W. Morse, John Bell and William Wainwright have affixed their signatures.

LUCID LECTURE ON THE TRENT CANAL

Mr. R. B. Rogers, of Peterboro, Gives Excellent Reasons for its Completion.

Almost a Natural Waterway—The Canal's Early History—Its Estimated Cost.

Some Important Advantages Which its Completion Would Ensure to Belleville

The public meeting held in the City Hall last evening for the purpose of hearing the Trent Valley Canal scheme discussed, was, considering the storm which raged, well attended. A goodly number of the city's prominent business and professional men were present, and all who attended were amply repaid. Much valuable information in reference to the route of the proposed canal and the pecuniary advantages to be derived through its construction, was given, especially by Mr. Richard B. Rogers, of Peterboro, who is the chief engineer. The title of his address was "Water Transportation in Canada with Special Reference to the Trent Canal." The lecture, for such it was, was profusely illustrated with beautiful views, showing the route of the proposed canal from the Georgian Bay to Trenton. In his opening remarks the speaker dealt at some length with the transportation question in its various phases. He said there was no doubt whatever that Canada controls the natural highway of transportation by the Great Lakes and rivers. He described minutely the canals and water courses which Canada possesses at present, but which were as yet imadequate to the requirements, and especially in handling the great wheat products of the Northwest. In speaking of the trent canal proper he said the idea of building this waterway was first conceived by the Kingston people as far back as 1793. Government, who were then out here in the first quarter of this century in order to organize and carry out the best means of improving the transportation facilities through the country. The money necessary to build the Canal was so far as Ontario was concerned, a small three-quarters of the distance in length of the whole canal, was actually used, but about this time the Mackenzie rebellion broke out (1837) and the money so appropriated was used in quelling the rebellion. Nothing more of any extent was done until 1841, whereby time Lord Sydenham took up the matter. In 1850 they handed in their report, which, as a matter of fact, their opinion the Government should proceed at once to the completion of the canal. A great advantage that this route has is that it is almost wholly a natural navigable channel for its entire length. The distance between Trenton and the Georgian Bay, by the cross country route from Lake Ontario, is 240 miles, the length of this whole distance it is calculated that not more than 15 or 20 miles will be actual excavation, the remaining distance being either beautiful bay or river navigation. Another great advantage is that it is land-locked route, from its entrance at Georgian Bay to Montreal. Another advantage is that a very cheap class of vessels could be used and the insurance on both freight and vessels would be low. The route of the Trent Valley Canal is all along free of danger of consumption and the district through which the canal would pass contains a population of about one-sixth of the smaller provinces of the Dominion. Possibly not much can be considerably reduced by the completion of the canal, on coal, grain, iron, etc., by at least one-third. The question of what the Trent Canal would do in the way of adding to its own way was considered. First, the water power which will be developed by the construction of the reservoirs dams along the route; he believed that every pound of available water power would be utilized in the near future. There would be about 40,000 horse power available to rent, after the Government rents this power at present, namely, $2 per horse power, and would yield a revenue of $80,000 per annum, which would pay the interest on the cost of the canal capital expenditure of two and three-quarters million dollars. Then there is the question of tolls. It is estimated that from this source a revenue of $125,000 per annum will be secured. These two items would yield a revenue of about $205,000, a sum sufficient to pay the interest at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum on four millions of dollars capital required to complete the canal, also to pay the salaries of the officials necessary to operate the canal, $40,000, and leave a balance of $45,000 for repairs and renewals. The capacity of the Trent canal will be over 12 millions tons, or about 400 million bushels of wheat per annum, which will be more than we will require for many years at least. There is no scheme before the people of Canada to-day that, for such a small capital expenditure, will ensure such great results. The speaker then described minutely the route as surveyed from Trenton to the Georgian Bay. It is estimated that it will take a fleet of one steam barge towing five other barges, about one week to go from the Georgian Bay to Montreal, carrying about 150,000 bushels of wheat. Mr. Rogers, in concluding his able and lucid address, spoke of the beneficial effect that the canal when completed, would have upon Belleville, which would reap a much benefit as Trenton. It will have the effect of placing the city in a direct line of cheap transportation, by means of which we would be able to ship cheaply to any point on the line of the canal. This fact would facilitate manufactures to locate in the city. The rates would be cut down of or 70 per cent. and the lower the freight rates the larger the field of operations. There was no reason why Belleville, with its close proximity to the immense water power of the River Trent, should not become a large manufacturing centre. Electricity is now cheaply transmitted, with so little loss of energy, that it makes very little difference whether a town is located right at the source of operation or at a reasonable distance away, such as Bel ville is. The importance of this water course had not, he thought, been as fully appreciated by Belleville as it should have been. In conclusion he made an appeal to Belleville to assist in the proposed scheme.

Mr. Gilmour, of Trenton.

Mr. D. Gilmour, of Trenton, was present and spoke briefly. He said that Mr. Rogers had placed the business proposition before the people clearly. It referred to the immense power on the route of the canal and the benefits to be derived therefrom; $3,000,000 will complete the work and it would so many well invested. The power would be taken away if the canal was so built by the way of Trenton. He referred to the coming session of the commission and said unanimous action was necessary. The facts should be laid before the commission and Belleville should co-operate in this matter, as it was of vital importance to the city in many ways. "Let us be united on the matter," said Mr. Gilmour," and get the Government interested in the completion of the work."

Some Questions.

Mr. J. W. Johnson asked a yield of from 40 to 60 bushels per acre. Would the completion of the project. Belleville be was certain, would assist in the matter.

Mr. Gilmour said what was wanted was concerted action. He advised Belleville to join in, and Brockville should also assist, as it would help them. It will mean cheaper rates upon wheat shipments, and the West is interested in this, even Manitoba, it would be a saving to do all we can to have the canal completed as soon as possible.

Mr. Pentar asked why work had been done in the centre of the proposed route and not at either end.

Mr. Gilmour said that no doubt politics had done that. The political party in power must be considered but parties work together for the successful completion of the work.

A Vote of Thanks.

Mr. Thos. Ritchie, in moving a vote of thanks to Messrs. Rogers and Gilmour, said he was fully alive to the importance of the carrying out of the work and hoped it would be completed. The best steps to enlighten the people in this scheme should be taken.

Mr. F. S. Wallbridge seconded the motion, which was unanimously carried.

A Deputation Appointed.

Mr. J. W. Johnson said that none but the members of the city had met at the meeting. Belleville should deputize a couple of men to go to Ottawa in its power to have the route by way of Trenton, and not by the way of Port Hope. A committee consisting of Mayor Chown, Messrs. T. Ritchie and F. S. Wallbridge was appointed by the city before the commission which sits next week.

Col. Panton seconded the motion, which prevailed.

Lively Speech Briefly.

Col. Lazier, Mr. J. M. Hurley, ex-M.P., and Mr. J. K. McCargar also spoke briefly. The remarks of the speakers of the evening upon the valuable information they had imparted.

The meeting, which was presided over by Mayor Chown, was then brought to a close.

Died at Frankford.

Mrs. Mary McCauley died at Frankford yesterday morning. She was a native of Adamsville. She married mother and a true friend. She leaves, besides a large circle of friends, three daughters to mourn her sad demise. She was a sister of Mr. A. G. McDonnell, of this city, and an aunt of C. D. MacCauley, of this city. The funeral took from her late residence at 10 o'clock this morning to the R. C. cemetery, Frankford.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Great Battle Believed to be in Progress at Port Arthur—Japanese Inflict More Naval Losses on the Russians—Belief That Vladivostok Has been Blockaded.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

St. Petersburg, March 1.—The report has spread in all parts of the city that the Japanese have made a great combined attack by sea and land on Port Arthur, that fighting is going on now and that there have been further naval losses.

London, March 1.—The Daily Telegraph correspondent at Yin Kow says the Japanese battered Port Arthur for a couple of hours yesterday and forced back into the harbor the cruisers Novi, Askold and Bayan, which came out to meet them, accompanied by several torpedo boats. The Askold and Novik were badly damaged and a torpedo boat was sunk, while the Retvisan was damaged again.

For a week now there has been no authentic information from Vladivostok, and the belief is growing that a Japanese squadron is off that port and has blocked up the Russian cruisers after the example set at Port Arthur.

Emden, Prussia, March 1.—News has been received here that the Japanese attacked Port Arthur to-day and were repulsed with heavy losses.

WORST STORM OF THE SEASON

WAS THAT WHICH HIT US LAST NIGHT—RAILROADS ARE BADLY "UP AGAINST IT."

In the early part of yesterday afternoon a few snow flurries, driven by a stiff easterly wind, began to fall. No one expected that it was but the beginning of the worst storm of the season, but such it proved to be. The wind increased in fury and the snow fell thicker and thicker. At six o'clock it was in the grip of a blizzard. As night wore on the fury of the storm did not abate. The snow was almost blinding. There were times when it was impossible to discern an object from one side of the street to the other. At 7 o'clock minutes after 11 o'clock, whilst it was still snowing hard and a gale was blowing, word was startled to see flashes of lightning and hear the rumble of thunder. The storm continued until an early hour this morning, when it abated somewhat. The worst of the storm was such that traffic on the railways was virtually blocked. The C.P.R. express from the east arrived here during the night and this morning, a few hours late, but from 6 o'clock in the evening until this afternoon no train arrived from the west. The G.T.R. sent out engines with snow ploughs, but were hampered by unable to clear the track. It was stated that in some of the cuts the snow was packed in to a depth of from 5 to 6 feet. The local train from the west, which is due here at 9.10 p.m., became stalled between Frankford and Trenton. A like fate befel the later train which left Toronto. The train from the east, due here at an early hour this morning, was rescued off the track near Newcastle. And the portion of the auxiliary which went west left the rails near Colborne. It was also currently reported that some of the snow ploughs had left the tracks. The mail train due here from the west at 11.40 was cancelled. The 7 o'clock international Limited left Toronto some two hours late.

Between the Midland division no trains had been sent out to-day, owing to the heavy blockade.

The roads leading out into the country are also blocked, and in some of them are liable to remain so for some time. In consequence of this some of the stages did not arrive here and those which did some were late.

About the city the snow is piled up in great quantities, especially in the business part. It was no doubt one of the worst storms that ever visited this section of the community.

What Do People Read?

Every roadside fence is now a primer for the passerby, every trolley car is a first reader to the traveler and every boarding a treatise on zoology, manufactures and social problems. Today most read a little, if only the signs and posters; some read newspapers—probably 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 of the 40,000,000 who could read them if they would. A few read novels. If the most popular novel finds only 1,000,000 buyers in a country where 40,000,000 could read it if they would, who can say that novel readers are more than a few? A very few, possibly 2,000,000 to 3,000,000, read standard literature and serious contributions to thought and knowledge. Barely the procession of readers grows larger every year, relatively as well as absolutely.—Outlook.

Fiske a Cook.

A resident of Florida tells this story f an old negro who came to a watchmaker with the two hands of a clock:

"I want yer to fix dis clock. Hit don' ain't kept no correct time for me den six months."

"Well, where is the clock?" responded the watchmaker.

"Out to my house."

"How much will it cost?"

"Hit I must have the clock."

"Didn' I tell yer dat's nuffin de matter wid de clock 'ceptin de han's? Ain' here dey be. You jess want de clock so you kin tinker it an' charge me a big price. Gimme back dem han's."

And, so saying, he started off to find an honest watchmaker.

Raid Neighboring Villages and Carry Off Many Prisoners.

Dr. H. C. McCook tells of a species of kidnaping ants which make organized attacks on other ant villages for the purpose of capturing slaves. Here is an account of the attack:

"At last the muster is complete. Mysteriously, but effectively, the signal 'Forward!' is given, and the army moves from the hill. There is no regular alignment, but a show of solidarity, a holding of the ranks within the compass and touch—a 'rout step,' in fact. There is no general; there are no subordinate officers, but each is the sympathetic unity that they seem to move in response to one will and command. If every warrior is a law unto himself the law so binds and animates and compels all alike that the ends of an organized cohort are served.

"Assault, battle and pillage follow quickly upon the sortie. The objective point of the march is not far away, a hundred yards distant is a Pueblo village. The route thereto lies across the edge of a grove, over a footpath, along a fallen tree, under whose shelter and shaded by tufts of grass is the devoted commune. It is feeble in numbers, and there is a bare show of defense as the freebooters burl themselves upon the hill and plunge into the open gates. The villagers flee at the first onset through unassailed or fewer passages. Some round the gaol let through the assailing ranks. All who can carry a part of the family treasure—eggs, larvæ and pupæ. Like their Brobdingnagian brothers of the human race, when disaster befalls their first care is for their offspring. The fugitives mount into nearby clumps of low wood plants, whence they look down upon the devastation of their homes—with what feelings? For one must suppose that the instincts are not, though sometimes he would fain hope otherwise.

"Meanwhile the invaders issue from the gates, bearing in their jaws the Pueblo young and occasionally an adult. They take the home trail, but not in ordered ranks. It is go as you please now. They are weighted down by their black confederates, who receive the captives and take them—their very own sisters perhaps—into the domestic quarters. The soldiers hurry back to the scene of action, for their work is not yet finished."—Harper's Magazine.

The Saracens and the Moon.

The Saracens called the moon Cabar the Great, and the crescent still surmounts the Moslem mosques and is often emblazoned on the green standard of the prophet. Abulfeda mentions a story that Mohammed "wished to pass with his disciples as a person transfigured in a supernatural light and that the credulity of his followers saw the moon, or the moon's light, descend upon him, or those his garments and replenish him.

"That intention for the moon which still forms a national, or, rather, religious, characteristic of the Mohammedans may perhaps have its foundation in the older superstition or pagan idolatry of the Arabs."

Not His Fault.

A doctor was summoned to attend the miller's little boy. He wrote out a prescription, which was promptly made up and administered in due form. The next day he called again to see his patient and found the whole family in tears.

A Bold Holdup.

Within an hour and a time (and I am not such an old man either) two stagecoaches containing about twenty-three passengers were stopped and all the valuables of the passengers taken by one man. The robber made them all stand in a row and "hand over." The route was only traveled by one coach, but on account of the large number of passengers an additional coach was put on that day. The robber stopped the first coach and made the passengers get out. When the passengers in the first coach were in sight of the second coach the appearance. He made them get out and then told them he didn't expect two coaches. That was nerve. A Jew insisted on retaining enough of his money to get his dinner. The robber took all and then gave him back 50 cents, and the Jew got into an argument with him as to the amount being sufficient to get a meal. That was check. The robber went off with all the money and valuables. The passengers, and yet there were many brave men in that caravan, but discretion was the better part of valor. The robber had two pistols out and ready. A shot from one of the twenty-three would have caused the robber to shoot, and several would have been killed. The next day they looked at it.—Forest and Stream.

Pulse Beats.

The rate of the pulse in males at different ages is as follows: At birth, 130 beats per minute; at 5 years, 85 beats per minute; between 10-15 years, 78 beats per minute; 20-25 years, 72 beats per minute; between 30-35 years, 69 beats per minute; between 40-50 years, 71 beats per minute; between 50-60 years, 70 beats per minute.

In females the rate is from 1 to 4.5 beats faster per minute.

Slow walking raises the pulse from 10 to 20 beats, while rapid running may raise it to 140. This rise may last one half an hour after the run.

Eating raises the pulse from 8 to 20 beats; without wine, 12.1; with wine, 17.5. In the morning the pulse is 10 beats higher than at night. When the barometer rises 5 inches the pulse increases 4 per minute. If the air is 60.6 while lying down it will be 72 when sitting and 75.9 when standing.

Ancient Tribe in Panama.

In Panama reside the Talamancans, a tribe of Indians ruled by a king who have not changed their habits since the days of Columbus. The Talamancan's hut, which is a masterpiece in the art of thatching, is a huge circular affair with the entire family and all his worldly possessions, including the domestic animals. As he is a past master in the art of domesticating the wild deer, the peccary, the tapir and even the tiger cub among his pets, the animals are present in every village. His bed consists of the trunk of a certain species of palm, with the sides strips and supported three or four feet from the ground on a frame. A few earthen pots complete the furnishings of his house.

Balzac's Impecuniosity.

Of Balzac it is stated that whenever he was at work he went to meet "like the fowls," as he himself put it, at 7 in the evening. He was called at 1 in the morning and was till 6; then took another hour and a half of sleep; then after a light meal went to work again and lived in the afternoon; then he took a bath, saw a few friends, took pedestrian exercise and immediately after dinner went off to bed.

"I shall be compelled," he wrote, "to lead this regular life for a few months without stopping in order not to be swamped by those terrible bills that are due." And yet he was always hard up for money.

Oddities About Alphabets.

When the Portuguese first explored Brazil they made great fun of the natives of that country because they had in their alphabet no f, r or l, a people, the invaders declared, without fe, ley or ar in their speech. Ah, ha, ha, ha! The Mohawks, again, have no labials and and vowel is put aside when the missionaries tried to teach them to pronounce p and b, "for who," said they, "can speak with his mouth shut?"—Blackwood's Magazine.

Too Considerate.

Mistress (returning from holiday)—Why, Bridget, whatever has become of the parrot?

Bridget—Well, you see, mum, after you left it kept a bit pining like and didn't talk much, so the cook and I put it out of its misery, poor thing, and I had it stuffed for my new 'at.—Judy.

MEETING AN AUTHOR.

Robert Barr's Visit to His Friend Captain Mayne Reid.

Robert Barr, the author, told with glee how Captain Mayne Reid, a friend of his, came to live in London and sent his address to Barr. The latter started to call on Reid. He did not know the street and, asking a bus man if his vehicle passed such and such a street, was told that it did not, but of course he came upon the street. In his letter Mayne Reid said he had taken a corner house in this street and added that he had a delightful garden and a high wall. "When I get down from the bus," says Mr. Barr, "I found that the corner house had a high wall and doubtless behind it a delightful garden, which answered perfectly the description which Captain Mayne Reid had given me.

"I said to a policemen, because I wanted to be sure, 'Could you tell me where Mr. Reid lives?' And he answered, 'Do you mean Mr. Reid, the author?' And I replied, 'Yes.' So the policeman pointed to the premises I had already selected as the residence of my friend. Therefore I went through the gate without fear and rang the bell at the residence, which stood some distance back in the garden. I was admitted and asked if Mr. Reid was at home. I was told that he was and was shown into a room on the left hand side of the passage. Waiting there presently was a tall, handsome man, in whom I did not recognize.

"'Do you wish to see me?' he asked. I rose from my seat and replied, 'I have called to see Captain Mayne Reid.'

"'I am the gentleman,' he said very frigidly. 'I am Charles Reade,' with which he turned his back upon me and left me standing alone. That was the last time I had the pleasure of meeting one of England's greatest authors. Captain Mayne Reid had taken a corner house in a street of the same name in Maida Vale, some miles from where Mr. Charles Reade resided during his last days."

THE MODEL GUEST.

He Knows Just When, What and How to Do or Not to Do.

A really fine specimen of the guest who does his best has a spirit which cannot be broken by weather or weariness. He can manage to talk for hours into any discussion and how to keep out of it. He does not seek his own amusement, yet he never fails to show that he is amused. He is tolerant of every opinion, and though he may have many convictions of his own and may state them so as to do them justice he never tries to proselytize.

His visit is not a mission, and he never for a moment fancies himself on the hustings, in a debating society, a pulpit or a court of justice. Above all, he has a good opinion of himself. Good wine needs no bush. He has no desire to boast, but he is certain that he will not be slighted. If his hostess suggests to him a dull job he is sure it is because she knows he could do it well and if he feels it to be really below his powers he takes her mistake into account not with like to under rate her, but when he next receives her kind invitation. He is not plagued by that craving of the overworked to be like their company nor does he belong to that race of born diffusers who would always ratther be different.

But, alas, conscience and talent do not always go together. There are some rich principled guests who are terrible bores. In their solicitude to be agreeable they never stop talking, and pursue their garrulous ideal like a dog following a carriage. To every interruption they give immediate but momentary attention and run breathless on.—London Outlook.

Evolution of the Folding Bed.

"Pa," said Tat—Ike's pa, anything new in folding beds?"

"Yes, boy—Of this, madam, and it really is quite a success. On arising in the morning you touch a spring and it turns into a washstand and bathtub. After your bath, you touch another spring, and it becomes a dressing case, with a French plate mirror. After breakfast in your room, a slight pressure will transform it into a comfortable table. After breakfast, you press these three buttons at once and you have an upright piano. That's all it will do, except that when you die it can be changed into a rosewood coffin.—

She Won.

He was a philosopher and a talker. She was a woman of action. They stood together on the bridge and watched a tug that was hauling a long line of barges up the river.

"Look there, my dear," said he. "Such is life. The tug is like the man, working and toiling, while the barges, like the women, are"—

His wife gave him no time to finish the sentence. "I know," she said. "The tug does all the blowing and the barges bear all the burden."

The Official Time.

Jerrold—As I was saying, I had $50 on Topnotch at 100 to 1. The race was six furlongs and Topnotch won.

Harold—What was the time?

Jerrold—Why—er—I heard the clock strike 2 just as I woke up!—Puck.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

We have used "Sunlight Soap," and we want to tell you that it is the best soap made, that's why we are writing. We found out that the Sunlight way is the best way to wash with "Sunlight Soap." At first we used to wash with Sunlight Soap in the old way as we did with common soap, but after we washed according to directions printed on the package, we would never wash the old way again. We first soap the articles, leave them to soak and then rub out lightly on the wash board. Not much to do and it makes the clothes white as snow.

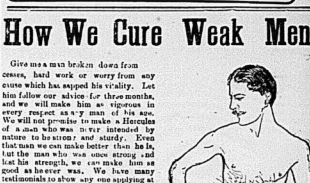
How We Cure Weak Men.



Give me a man broken down from excesses, hard work or worry from any cause which has made his vitality. Let him follow our advice for three months, and we will make him as vigorous in every respect as a young man of 18 is now. We will not promise to make a Hercules of a man who was never intended by nature to be strong and sturdy. Even that man we can make better than he is, but the man who was once strong and lost his strength, we can make him as good as he ever was. We have many testimonials to show any one applying at this store, these are people who do not wish their name made known through the newspapers. Read this,—for a long time I have been a great sufferer from nervous trouble, I was unable to attend to business and could not sleep at night. I tried all the leading doctors in Belleville, but they did me no good. I went away to Gravenhurst where I gave the same result. By this time I was pretty well discouraged and had almost given up, when my son persuaded me to try the Gilm Belt, which I did, and after using it for three months began to feel like a new man. Any one who needs treatment for the disease, can make no mistake on this great Belt. I would not take one thousand dollars for mine unless I could get another."

"For many years have had rheumatism very badly, especially before a storm; I would suffer for days at a time with pain I could hardly endure. I tried all the doctors and they gave me up saying there was no relief for me. At last I tried the Gilmour Electric Belt and after using it for a time began to improve, and am today a pretty good man from its use. I can recommend this Belt to any one suffering from rheumatism."

"I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble for nearly twenty years I could get nothing to do me any good. I was induced by a friend to try the Gilmour Electric Appliance with the special attachment for treating such cases. After using it for a few weeks, began to feel better and can say am getting better. Any one suffering from this ailment can make no mistake on this appliance."

This is the most powerful Electric Appliance in the world. If there is such a thing as cure in Electricity, which everyone knows there is, this appliance will surely give it.

MEN'S DISEASES

There is seldom a day that we are not consulted in regard to a condition that, if we were to have seen it in its early stages, the sufferer would have been spared much and saved considerable expense. This we consider today in lack of knowledge on the part of the sufferer as to the seriousness of his condition. Many a man has had a drain for a long term and observed the condition peculiar to same, or it may not have been suspected in not getting a permanent cure elsewhere, we would ask that you come to our office for personal examination or write for a question blank for free Diagnosis. We will explain to you OUR SYSTEM OF TREATMENT, which we know from years of experience is the most successful treatment for your disease. Don't neglect your case, for if you do you will surely regret it later on. Delays are dangerous in all of your case. If we find you are incurable we will honestly tell you so. If we can cure you we will give you a written guarantee to that effect.

—YOU CAN PAY WHEN CURED—

Bell Co. Pay Heavily.

Ottawa, March 2.—The Railroad Commission on Monday listened to argument on behalf of Port Arthur and Fort William, who desire to have their municipal telephone lines connected with the C.P.R. stations and premises, and which the railroad under their contract with the Bell Company, refuse, the application in effect being to invalidate the contract as a "restraint to commerce," and as such being of considerable significance as affecting other places. During the argument it was stated that the net benefit to the C.P.R. annually was $20,459.

THE SAW-OFF SCANDAL

Major Clark Moves to Amend Controverted Elections Act.

Reform Could Be Had By Repealing the Time For the Filing of Election Petitions—A Valuable Discussion—Let Protests Be Raised—Severe Hardship to Meaverble Public Men Countenanced By Present Law.

Toronto, March 2.—A valuable discussion arose in the Legislature yesterday afternoon out of the effort of Hugh Clark (Centre Bruce) to reform the Controverted Elections Act. Mr. Clark believes that his suggestion will do away, to some extent at least, with the annoyance to which many who have been honestly elected are subjected by petitions against their return. He asks that the law be amended, giving sixty days in which to collect evidence of improper practices; then if the petitioner fails to go on, or if the protest has not been made in good faith the deposit of $1,000 which is required to be made will be forfeited. This would do away with the saw-off iniquity. It was urged on behalf of the measure that frequently protests are put in without there being any just grounds to attack the election of the successful candidates, and that the hope of the petitioner is to negotiate a saw-off with the opposite party.

A Lawyer on Lawyers.

Incidentally Mr. Carscallen of Hamilton made some pointed observations concerning the harrassing tactics of lawyers and others who live on the politicians. Mr. Carscallen said the annoyance to which many public men are put is enough to drive them out of public life.

Attorney-General Against.

The Attorney-General, while agreeing that the object of Mr. Clark was meritorious, did not take very kindly to the suggestions contained in the bill. He said he intended bringing down an amendment to the election law and suggested that the Legal Committee might find some way to meet the objections of the member for East Bruce.

Fix Time From Polling Day.

Mr. Foy said the bill touched on a subject where some amendment might be made to the advantage of the people. He thought the date for filing a petition ought to be a fixed number of days after the polling day and not after the return, as it frequently happened that the return was delayed to suit the convenience of the Government candidate. By extending the time for filing a petition, a fuller opportunity would be given to investigate the evidence of alleged corrupt practices.

Four Protests For Reid.

Mr. Reid said he had been elected four times and had four protests, and if any man had been elected honestly he was the member for Addington. The protests were filed to put him to worry and get a saw-off.

Mr. Clark wanted some assurance from the Government that it did not attempt to burk reform by sending the bill to the Committee.

Mr. Gibson assured Mr. Clark that the Government would be honestly made to meet the case.

Mr. Whitney believed that it would be found a difficult matter to deal with this question.

The bill was read a second time.

Second Reading.

In moving the second reading of the Act respecting statute labor, the Attorney-General said the law as it at present stands was somewhat obsolete. He hoped, however, the day would come when statute labor would be abolished. The bill was read a second time.

Mr. Hunter's bill to amend the High Schools Act was read a second time. It provides that trustees may collect a fee from parents for books.

Mr. Harcourt's bill to amend the act respecting boards of education in certain cities was also given a second reading.

The law respecting security of public offices was amended to reach division court clerks and bailiffs.

Mr. Ross' bill to amend the General Road Companies Act was read a second time.

Houses of Refuge.

Mr. Stratton's bill respecting houses of refuge, read a second time, allows a municipality containing a house of refuge to make arrangements with the nearest town or city for electric light, sewer and water connections. It may issue debentures up to $30,000 for improvements to the refuge without the consent of the ratepayers. After discussion, the bill was sent to committee.

Hon. Mr. Gibson's bill to amend the law respecting religious institutions, so as to give quarterly boards of the Methodist Church power to sell deeds of property, was read a second time.

Riordon Contract Ratified.

The Premier moved that an agreement with the Riordon Paper Mills Co. for the supply of printing paper for five years be ratified. He explained that the contract effected a saving of $1,500 a year on about $8,000 worth of paper, comparing prices with the last contract.

Col. Matheson said the contract had not been properly advertised. The contract price was 5c. and 5½c. per pound, and he had been told that 4c. would be a good price.

The Premier said the paper used for Parliamentary purpose was better than ordinary paper and he believed the contract was a good one.

Col. Matheson: Then why was only one tender was received.

The resolution was declared carried on division.

The Premier also moved to ratify the contract entered into with Warwick Bros. & Rutter. The contract would expire on 31st July, when new tenders for the work will be asked for.

The motion passed without comment.

The following bills were given a final reading: Respecting the town of North Markham; to authorize the town of Ingersoll to issue debentures (Sutherland); to confirm a by-law of the city of Chatham (Pardo).

Estimates Taken Up.

After recess the House went into supply. The estimates of the Crown Lands Department were then taken up and Hon. Mr. Davis explained a number of increases. The total estimates of the Crown Lands Department are $743,375, as against $705,825 last year.

The Public Works estimates, showing an increase of $30,000, were passed without debate, and the House went into the discussion of figures of the Treasury Department.

The Committee rose at 10.15 and the House immediately adjourned.

Railway Interests Clash.

In the Railway Committee yesterday morning there was a clash of interests between the Brantford and Erie Railway Company, which proposes to build from Brantford to Port Dover, and the Toronto Simcoe, with a loop line, taking in Ivihi and Lynchburg, and the Hamilton, Lincoln and Lake Erie Company, which covers some of the same ground. T. H. Preston said the municipalities interested should give their consent, and further discussion of the bill was postponed.

CRISIS IN TRANSVAAL.

Lord Milner, However, Is Not Dismayed at the Gloomy Prospects—Defeat Amounts to $5,000,000.

Johannesburg, March 2.—Lord Milner, British High Commissioner in South Africa, in delivering the Presidential address before the Inter-Colonial Council for the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, revealed the grave financial condition of the colony. He said a deficit amounting to $5,000,000 was due to the shrinkage in railroad receipts and the general paralysis of industry, while almost all of the $150,000,000 had already been expended on railroads, repatriation of the Boers and the development of the country. The only resources now were patience and economy. Lord Milner said he was not dismayed and that he hoped for improvements when an adequate supply of labor was forthcoming.

BELL DIES FROM INJURIES.

Editor of the Mining Review and Mining Authority at Ottawa.

Ottawa, March 2.—H. T. A. Bell, editor of The Mining Review, who fell down the elevator shaft in the Orm building here eight days ago, died at 10.15 yesterday morning. His injuries were of a terrible character, including a fracture of the base of the skull. His collar bone and three ribs were also fractured. Mr. Bell was 52 years of age and was born in Edinburgh, Scotland. He came to Canada when a young man, and drifted into journalism, being on the reportial staff of The Ottawa Citizen. He subsequently became editor of The Mining Review, and made it a fine property. At the time of the accident he was preparing the report, with Judge Britton, on the Yukon investigation. He was Secretary of the Canadian Mining Institute, which meets in Toronto this month. He was a recognized authority on all questions pertaining to mining and the mineral resources of Canada.

Sam Thompson Arraigned.

Toronto, March 2.—At the sessions yesterday the only important business done was the arraigning of Sam Thompson on the charge of conspiracy, etc., on which Magistrate Denison committed him for trial. Thompson, through his counsel, T. C. Robinette, K.C., pleaded guilty. He was remanded until April 2.

Burned to Death.

Montreal, March 2.—Rosa Lizotte, a seven-year-old girl, was literally roasted to death yesterday at her home, 212 Lafontaine street. She was playing around the stove in the kitchen when her clothes caught fire.

MR. FIELDING—PAST AND PRESENT.

That circumstances alter cases, no one who knows aught of the history of the Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance in the Laurier Cabinet, will deny. In 1887, long before Mr. Fielding was thought of as a Cabinet possibility, he led the Nova Scotia Liberals during the Federal election of that year. His personal organ, the Halifax Chronicle, pt which Mr. Fielding was editor, waged war on the Canadian Confederation, the people of Upper Canada and the West, and devoted much space to decrying the extravagance of Sir Charles Tupper, then High Commissioner. It printed three columns of items of expenditure in connection with the furnishings for the High Commissioner's home, of which the following are good examples:—

Kidderminster Carpets	17	10	0
3 Iron Bedsteads	3	3	9
1 Gravy Strainer		1	1
1 Mincing Knife		1	0
2 Wood Spoons			8

Mr. Fielding has since been called to the Finance Department and is responsible for the expenditure of the High Commissioner. He seems to have lost interest in the bedsteads, wood spoons, etc., however, and the Auditor-General's report shows, that whereas in 1886 and 1887 Sir Charles Tupper spent $13,699 and $12,748 respectively, in 1902 and 1903, Lord Strathcona, under Mr. Fielding's patronage, disbursed $31,198 and $36,491 respectively. The money has without doubt been expended wisely, and the Conservative party has not gone into Lord Strathcona's kitchen, parlors and bedrooms to secure evidence to the contrary.

But Mr. Fielding, who was so solicitous in 1887 as to the number of spoons and bedsteads, Sir Charles Tupper purchased for himself and his successors, has also failed to enquire further into the matter. Probably this is to be accounted for by the fact that Mr. Fielding has been engaged in providing $6,678,000 for Premier Parent's Quebec Bridge Company; $151,000,000 for the Cox G.T.P. deal; $57,000 for Mr. Lovell's private wharf at Grande Vallee; thousands of dollars for graving dock works in his own constituency, etc. His present reckless waste of money and his anxiety concerning Sir Charles Tupper's personal spoons show the calibre of the man who aspires to the Liberal leadership.

TIMELY TOPICS.

A few days like this will soon cut down the ice and snow.

And make the gentle springtime an established fact.

We may see green grass yet on St. Patrick's Day.

But it looks just now as though we'll have to go to Florida to do it.

A word of praise is certainly due the Public Works department for the way they have looked after the crossings, etc, lately.

The man on the next block, when asked his opinion of the Zwick's island water scheme, said he didn't care if he never saw any more water. Nice kind of a citizen, that, and well counted on his support for the public work this summer.

If the Russians are having as hard a time on the Siberian railway as the Grand Trunk are at present we don't envy 'em their job.

Well, there's one consolation about the heavy snowfall this winter. The longer it takes the snow to go away the longer it will cover up the old dump.

It seems to be a case of "nothing doing" in the matter of the Queen's Old Boys' Reunion. At least it would take the Old Boy himself to wake up any interest in the matter.

The hockey season is nearly over, and from appearances about the only kind of sport included in Belleville before next year's next winter will be automobile racing.

Guelph has a coal famine, and refuses to give the G.T.R. any water till they bring in coal. This is a conflict of fire and water, and water seems to have the best of it.

Pro-Boer Woodsy, of Ottawa, lectured in Toronto last night, and Mayor Urquhart refused to preside at the meeting. Good for His Worship. He took a proper stand in showing his contempt for the blatant notoriety-seekers who ponder to the worst element in their own country and then expect to be welcomed by the very people they traduce.

The Clan-na-Gael is openly sympathizing with Russia. This was to be expected, but why should a society which is always shouting about freedom look up the cudgels for the most despotic country on the face of God's footstool? Queer people, the Fenians.

March, so far, has been a perfect lady. Perhaps she will atone for the misdeeds of the months gone before.

WHACKING WHITNEY.

READ IT THROUGH.

Two of Spoil This Story to Tell It in the Headlines.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "Ocean Tale." Having taken a sail small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon, of Mella Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia. In one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturer of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For sale by all druggists.

CHATTERTON.

Many congratulations are extended to Mr. J. Connor, as he is taken to himself a companion for life.

Mr. Foster has left for his new home near Bloomfield. All wish him every prosperity in life. We will miss Mr. and Mrs. Foster.

Mr. J. Moore has engaged to Mr. J. Sergey for the coming season. The building of a barn will be the work.

The sand piles in these parts are getting small. The snow in the woods is so deep that few can get to the wood.

Mr. Smith has moved in this locality. He hails from Zion Hill.

Mr. Bert Dafoe and mother have moved to Stirling. They will be much missed by their neighbors.

FOR A DISORDERED STOMACH.

"I have been troubled for some time with indigestion and sour stomach," says Mrs. Sarah W. Cattin, of Lee, Mass., "and have been taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets which have helped me very much so that now I can eat any things that those I could not." If you have any trouble with your stomach why not take these tablets and get well? For sale by all druggists.

CARMEL.

Mr. and Mrs. George Green, of Rawdon, were visiting at Mr. John Pitman's last week.

Mr. Fry, of Michigan, has been visiting relatives in this neighborhood.

Mrs. Walter Gilbert is quite ill. Mr. Lyman Jones is on the sick list.

Mrs. McMullen has received the sad news of the death of her niece, Herbet Thompson, the daughter of William Thompson, formerly of this place. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Thompson in his northwest home.

Mr. Albert Jones and wife will leave for their home in the northwest the tenth of this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vanallen have moved to their new home in Sidney.

COLDS ARE DANGEROUS.

How often you hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

GARDENVILLE.

Mr. Geo. Clark is drawing lumber to build an addition to his house.

Mrs. Marshall Young has gone to Anson to visit her father, Mr. Merrick.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Dymond spent a few days in Belleville visiting their son, who is attending Ontario Business College, and also their friend, Mr. and Mrs. R. Powell.

Mrs. Harry Gayhead's children are on the sick list.

We are glad to hear that Mr. A. J. Chase's little daughter is improving, after a severe attack of grip.

Mr. O. Maynes and sister, Frankie, have returned, after a short visit in Brighton.

A Plain Question: Do you really get the only Painkiller—Perry Davis'—when you ask for it? Better to be sure than sorry. It has not, in 60 years, failed to stop looseness and pain in the bowels.

THE HARDEST PAIN TO ENDURE

is the pain of a tender corn, but experience proves that corns are cured quickest by Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, which acts in twenty-four hours. Putnam's never burns or causes sores. The only painless cure is Putnam's. Use no other.

A Story of Gladstone's Boyhood.

John Morley a few days after the publication of his life of "Gladstone" told in a speech at Sheffield a story of Mr. Gladstone's boyhood. "He had," he said, "was in the country. A farmer was showing him over his estate. The farmer would pause before each field to describe it, and before every cow and pig he would make a brief biographical address.

"Finally they came to a small field that contained a large black bull, and "That is a fine bull indeed, Master William," said the farmer, "a very fine, strong two-year-old bull."

"Two years old!" said the boy.

"Yes, two years, sir."

"How do you tell its age?"

"Why, by its horns."

The little boy frowned. He mused a moment. Then his countenance cleared.

"Ah," he said. "By its horns. I see. Two horns—two years."

WELL AGAIN.

The many friends of John Blount will be pleased to learn that he has entirely recovered from his attack of rheumatism. Chamberlain's Pain Balm cured him after the best doctors in the town (Merton, Ind.) had failed to give relief. The pain relief from pain which this liniment affords is alone worth many times its cost. Sold by all druggists.

NO DIFFERENCE.

No distinction is made as to the kind of Piles that Ham-Reid cures.

The names Internal, External, Bleeding, Blind, Itching, Suppurating, etc., are simply names of the different stages of the disease and each one will pass if it continues long enough.

Piles are caused by congestion or stagnation of blood in the lower bowel, and it takes an internal remedy to remove the cause.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid is a tablet taken internally.

It is a permanent cure and no case of Piles has ever been found it failed to cure.

THE WILY RED MAN.

Some Instances of the Indians' Quickness of Wit.

Numerous instances of the red man's quickness of wit are related by those who have had dealings with him. A Canadian chief was looking idly on while some Englishmen were hard at work improving property newly acquired from the Sioux Tribe.

"Why don't you work?" asked the supervisor of the chief.

"Why you no work yourself?" was the rejoinder.

"I work headwork," replied the white man, touching his forehead. "Pale-face here and kill this calf for me, and I'll give you a quarter."

The Indian stood still for a moment, apparently deep in thought, and then he went off to kill the calf.

"Why don't you finish your job?" presently asked the supervisor, seeing the man stand with folded arms over the unskinned, undressed carcass.

"You say you give me quarter to kill calf," was the reply. "Calf dead. Me want quarter."

The white man smiled and handed the Indian an extra coin to go on with the work.

"How is it," asked the Englishman one day after a series of such one sided dealings, "that you so often get the better of me?"

"I work headwork," solemnly replied the man of the forest.

A white trader once succeeded in selling a large quantity of gunpowder to one of the Indians, who subsequently that it was a new kind that the white man used for seal and if sown in especially prepared loam would yield an amazing crop. Away went the Indian to sow the powder and in his hope of making money from his fellows was careful not to mention his enterprise. When at last, however, he realized how he had been duped he held his tongue for a year or more until the trickster had completely forgotten the occurrence. Then he went to his bonze's tent and bought charms and relics amounting to a little more than the price of the planted gunpowder. He had the reputation of a good payer, and his scheme worked easily. When settling day came, the creditor called promptly.

"Right," said the Indian slowly--"right, but my powder not get sprouted. Me pay you when me reap him."

A Successful Nurse Must Be Gentle, Patient and Tactful.

The proper mental atmosphere created in a sickroom is often as important as the remedies given. A nurse should be in touch with her patient--that is, she should be sympathetic and not allow irritability and whims to upset her equanimity. The nurse who can create an atmosphere of repose, who can ignore without indulging her patient in all the idiosyncrasies of sick people, has won half the battle. An unsympathetic, impatient nurse will do more to hinder recovery than the lack of remedies. It is not acts and words alone that help or hinder; her very thoughts are as potent as her general conduct, and the sensitive patient will be influenced for good or ill if the nurse were dumb. She should at all times maintain a positive uplifting mental attitude and remember that the patient's irritability or melancholia is justified by her physical condition and is not perverseness.

Gentleness, patience and, above all, tact are the requisites for good and intelligent nursing, and the nurse who lacks these qualities has indeed missed her calling. Patients have often failed to improve simply because they did not fancy their nurse. A nurse must be likable and make herself liked, and it takes only plain tact and a little circumspection to ingratiate herself with the most uninteresting of patients.

THE GYPSIES.

Their Tribes Existed In Europe From Immemorial Times.

Gypsies were found in England about 1514, according to "A Dyalogue of Sir Thomas More" (1529), but the exact year of their arrival is unknown. They were present in Scotland in 1505, and possibly they were the "Saracens" whose depredations in that country prior to 1460 are on record.

Batailland and other authors believe that gypsies existed in Europe from immemorial times, for they find no account of their crossing the Bosphorus and no record is known to exist of their passage to England or Scotland.

They were better received in these countries than in any other, but so early as 1531 an act was passed requiring the Egyptians to quit the realm under pain of death, a similar edict being issued in Scotland in 1541 and at varying periods in most of the European states.

Transportation across the seas was among the milder means adopted and probably was the cause of much further dispersion of the tribes. Under Henry VIII. gypsies were shipped from England to Norway or France, and from France, so recently as 1802, they were deported to Africa.

Our Double Selves.

In a form of experience which is almost as common as ordinary dreaming we see that the semiunconscious self possesses a faculty not always given to the waking self. Compared with my own waking self, for instance, my half asleep self is almost a personality of genius. He can create visions that the waking self can remember but cannot originate and cannot trace to any memory of waking impressions. These apparently trivial things thus point to the existence of almost wholly submerged potentialities in a mind so everyday, commonplace and, so to speak, superficial as mine.

ARCHITECT'S EPPERIMENTS.

Church Built by One Man--Sealskins and Snow, Wax, Precious Stones for Vess, Served Esquimo.

At Stivichall, near Coventry, may be seen a church that--among English Churches at all events--possesses the unique distinction of having been built by the unaided efforts of one man alone. The name of this persistent and assiduous workman was John Green, a stonemason of Coventry, who had the first stone in 1849, and finished his self-imposed task seven years later.

When the Rev. C. H. Sellwood Goodwin came into the living of St. Aidan's, near Middlesbrough, he found his flock without a place of worship, for a time he was at his wits' end and knew not what to do, for the cost of even a temporary wooden structure was far beyond the very limited means of the poor neighborhood. But, fortune to his purpose and a man of resource, he did not remain long idle, and having been fortunate enough to secure a suitable site, set to work himself to dig the foundations.

Such energy and enthusiasm proved contagious, and on Saturday afternoon, and often, too, on other evenings after working hours, a crowd of willing assistants might be seen adding their quota to his laudable design. Gifts of timber, bricks, glass, slates, etc., were not wanting, and after every available penny in the pleasant toil these zealous workers were rewarded by the consecration of a church of which any parish would have been proud.

The worthy missionary, the Rev. E. J. Peck, rose to the occasion when, leaving the scene of his labors of congregation, he constructed one out of snow-blocks--a rude but efficient structure, that served its purpose of protecting its occupant from the inclemency of the Arctic rigid around. The seats, the altar, and all else within were likewise made of snow.

On Blackdead Island, Cumberland Sound, this same missionary also played his further ingenuity by utilizing in the erection of a place of worship some of the seals which were sewn together and stretched over a framework of whale's ribs. For seats old provision boxes and boards did duty. The pastor, however, reckoned without his parishioners' dogs, which, pressed by hunger, partially devoured the church, and were only driven off with great difficulty. The reins that their voracity had made in the sealskins were subsequently repaired with pieces of canvas and old sacks.

The Chapel of Transfiguration, which belongs to Canonicus, Island, Narragansett Bay, is built in sheets so that it can be transferred from place to place as need requires. During the summer it is stationed at Conanicut Park, near Jamestown, but when approaching winter drives people from the hotel and adjoining house, the church moves likewise, and follows its congregation into winter quarters. Its removal necessitates the employment of a team of twenty oxen.

Along the nine miles of navigable canal that lie within the boundaries of the parish of Holme, Hunts, is towed a structure somewhat similar in appearance to a house-boat. This is the floating church of St. Wilburga, to which dock such of the inhabitants of the neighboring fens whom distance, or other reasons, precludes from attending the parish church.

This unique place of worship, which is built upon a flat-bottomed lighter, is 30 feet in length by 7 feet in height, and cost $350 to erect. It contains, in addition to benches for the choir, thirty-six chairs for the use of the congregation, a small organ, and a reading desk. On the whole it answers most satisfactorily, though certain of the worshipers have, through the gentle rocking of the boat, experienced at times the qualms of sea sickness.

Sculptured by Nature.

Nature through the active agency of the rains, winds and even the dust sometimes performs wonderful things in the strange fashioning of the obdurate stone into forms resembling the human face. On the very summit of Mount Tamalpais, a lofty peak that stands about twelve miles from the city of San Francisco, is a most remarkable profile wrought in the solid stone.

Just a few minutes' walk from the end of the railroad that leads up to the mountain's summit, on the trail that circles the crest of the peak, brings one to the Old Lady Profile. The huge natural sphinx seems to guard the path where it narrows on a rocky ledge.

The profile is perfect. The seams and creases made by the contortion of weather are like lines of care and age worn in the human face. No one, however aged in our worldly years, can remember when the Old Lady was young. However, when one passes further along the path and looks backward, the outline of the wrinkled visage is lost, and instead there is simply trace the features of a woman young and as beautiful as an Egyptian princess.

Camel Back Riding.

Lord Kitchener of Khartum is credited with the best description of camel back riding that is known. The selection is a description at a dinner party in London which some Americans attended.

"When we asked Lord Kitchener," one of the Americans said, "to tell us what it felt like to ride a camel, he twisted his mustache and said:

"'You know the game of cup and ball? You have a ball and a cup, and you throw the ball in the air and try to catch it in the cup, then bounce it up and try to catch it again. Well, when you ride a camel the brute plays cup and ball with you, missing you nearly every time.'"

PHYSICAL ACTIVITY.

Nothing Else Can Supplant It as a Preserver of Youth.

Next to air and food in the human economy comes exercise. We may have plenty of fresh air and a proper allowance of the right kind of food, and yet without helpful daily exercise these will not avail to keep the body in good condition. The answer to the question, "Why do we grow old?" a French writer gives these three reasons: "We do not get enough physical exercise in the open air, we are poisoned by microbes which the phagocytes have not succeeded in destroying, and we are depressed by fear of death." Of the three reasons it will be noted that he gives the place of first importance to lack of exercise. There is nothing else which can take the place of physical activity as a preserver of youth and energy. "Grow younger as you grow older by cultivating a moderate love of good, healthful, honest sport," is sound advice. Walking, running, jumping, rowing, playing golf, tennis or croquet or any other milder form of exercise in its degree keeps the muscles supple and prevents the joints from stiffening, fills the lungs with life giving oxygen and keeps the blood from becoming sluggish or the liver torpid. In short, it is exercise that keeps the body in tune and "up to concert pitch," just as exercise keeps the voice of a music instrument in perfect tone.

EYES INCREASE IN SIZE.

Change Often Results In the Improvement of the Sight.

A convenient and inconsistent latter developed the fact that among men of large affairs where decided executive ability and strong mental equipment were requisite it was common to find a decided increase in cranial development. A more detailed investigation among some of the large metropolitan letters revealed the fact that many of them had for years by means of an automatic measuring device kept records of the measurements of the cranial outline of many of our prominent men, which had led to the discovery that which, however, little importance had been attached; that the skull often shows a decided increase in size after middle age.

Thus, if it is a fact that the human eye depends largely upon the surrounding bony structure for its size and proportion, it can readily be seen that in the case of an eye which presents abnormal visual conditions due to an inadequate development the increase in the size of the skull referred to, accompanied, as it usually is, by generalized physical conditions, would naturally tend to a corresponding increase in the size of the eyeball, thereby contributing to a possible neutralization of the visual defect.

LOCKS AND KEYS.

Their Use Can Be Traced Back to the Ancient Egyptians.

According to Denon, locks and keys can be traced back to the ancient Egyptians, more than 4,000 years ago. This is inferred from the sculptures on the great temple of Karnak, which closely resemble locks still in use there--clumsy, massive wooden locks, in which three pins drop into three holes in the bolt, when it is pushed in, and are raised by corresponding fixed pins on the door key. Similar locks and keys are found at Mosul, near Nineveh, the key being more than a foot long, quite flexible and often carried on the shoulder.

Keys are also mentioned at the siege of Troy, 1193 B. C. The Phoenicians are said to have exchanged locks for tin from Cornwall. Occasional notices of them occur in many Greek and Roman writers, Pliny ascribing their invention to Theodorus of Samos. Bronze and iron keys have been found in the ruins of Pompeii.

Possibly far more ancient than these are Chinese locks, with springs and tumblers, some of them musical, almost exact counterparts of the famous Bramah locks of England in the eighteenth century.

Why Little Folks Are Big Eaters.

It has been laid down as a physiological rule that the requirements of adult diet depend not on the weight of the eater, but on the extent of his bodily surface. In the case of children this rule is further modified. An infant may weigh one-eighteenth as much as a grown man, but its surface is more than one-seventh as great. As the food requirement of the infant's food is to replace the heat that is continually being lost by radiation from all parts of the body, the latter fraction determines the needed proportion of nourishment rather than the former. But in the case of a growing child food is also needed to supply the increase of bodily weight. In all, an infant's ration may be five times as much as would be estimated from its actual weight alone.--Success.

The Whole Thing.

"I suppose," said the absconding cashier to the friend who had run across him in parts unknown, "that there was a good deal of talk about me after I disappeared?"

"I should think there was!" answered the friend. "Why, man, the weather wasn't mentioned at all for two weeks."

Helping Out the Supply.

Magistrate--So you admit having been engaged in making counterfeit money?

Prisoner--Yes, your honor. You see, the supply of the genuine article is so very, very short!

Don't hang a dismal picture on the wall, and don't daub with sable and gloom your conversation.--Emerson.

HEREDITARY RANK.

Precedence in England as It Struck an American Girl.

I knew a young American girl who, going to England under the care of an ambassador's family and attending her first large dinner party and looking about her, selected as the guest to whom she most interested her one man of distinguished aspect, whom she reserved to watch. In the course of events were ushered into the dining hall according to the laws of precedence she found herself at the very end of the brilliant procession as one of two untitled plebeians in the room, assigned to the escort of the very man she had interested her and who turned out to be Samuel Rogers, the poet and patron of art and the recognized head of literary society in England. She always said that she secured two things at that entertainment--namely, the most delightful companion that she ever had at a dinner party and, moreover, a lesson in the outcome of mere hereditary rank that would last a lifetime. Rogers' poems are not now read so much as formerly, but at that time the highest literary honor a man could have was to dine with Rogers. He was also one of the richest bankers in London and was very possibly the only person in the room who had won for himself a reputation outside of his own little circle. The only person in nobody in that company, and the little American girl was probably as much so as Wentworth Higginson in Atlantic.

THE GOOD OLD CLOCK.

Its Mellow, Friendly Tick an Antidote For Loneliness.

"Give me the clock for company," said the observant man. "I may not have all the balance of the inanimate things under the sun, or over it, and I think I know a few of the animals to be good measure. I can conceive of nothing more friendly, more unspeakably comforting, than the steady tick of the old family clock which towers high on the old fashioned mantel, above the great old open faced fireplace where the embers are dying down and deepening into a bluish smoldery gray late of winter nights. One never feels quite alone as long as one may hear the mellow tick tock of the old clock, with the same sweet mellow cadences which have rung in one's ear from childhood days, through all the changes and upheavals of time, down to the present. Other sounds may fail and depress into the sadder silence of the night's heavy stillness, but the old clock continues to mark the flight of time, and no second may escape without hearing its passing called out dreamily by the faithful clock whose voice we have measured already so many days--some bright and full of light and life and promise and sweet bodings of the future and others echoing back sepulchrally from the years already counted. Ah, the clock! But give me the clock with its ticking all through the night, and the silvery chiming on the hour, and you may have the other things, and the dog to boot. I will take the clock in preference every time when it comes to keeping off that feeling of lonesomeness which creeps upon us now and then!"

Poet Riley on His Native Heath.

Several years ago James Whitcomb Riley returned to his native town, Greenfield, Ind., for the purpose of giving a reading, the proceeds of which were for some charitable purpose. It had been many years since he had visited the old town, and as the affair had been well advertised people poured in from all sections of the county. Riley arrived on an evening train. The "old band" met at the station, and the poet was put in a low necked carriage with a reception committee, and, headed by the band, a procession was formed of citizens, and they paraded the business streets. A very old man leaned up against the Gyrandelle, a hotel of Riley's day, and as the carriage passed he squinted one eye and, out of the opposite corner of his mouth said, "I've seen the time in this here burg when I could lick a dozen of the brass band to a standstill."--Jimmie Riley out of town."

An Arithmetical Wonder.

If twelve persons were to agree to dine together every day, but never sit exactly in the same order around the table, it would require 13,000,000 years at the rate of one dinner a day, and they would have to eat more than 479,000,000 dinners before the last concert through all the possible arrangements in which they would place themselves. A has only 1 change; A, B, 2; A, B, C, 6; four letters, 24; five, 120; six, 720; seven, 5,040; eight, 40,320; nine, 362,800; ten, 3,628,800; eleven, 39,916,800; twelve, 479,001,600.

A Mean Dig.

Mrs. Bragg--I gave quite a nice little luncheon the other day. Didn't Mrs. Jenkins tell you?

Mrs. Sly--No.

Mrs. Bragg--Strange! Why, she was one of my guests.

Mrs. Sly--Yes, she told me that.

Accurate Painters.

The famous Tintoretto, in a painting of the Israelites gathering manna, showed them armed with guns, and a latter day Neapolitan artist has depicted the holy family crossing the Nile, in their flight into Egypt, in a magnificently ornamented barge.

The Doctor's Expectation.

Friend--I'm glad to see you so much better, old man. Does the doctor expect you to be out soon?

Invalid--Well, I think he expects he soon to be out the amount of his bill. He sent it in today.--Exchange.

The Great Eastern Stock Company

NO. 400,

Front St., - - Belleville,

Is becoming more popularly known every day as the storm centre for frugal buyers, or in other words it is the Underprice Store of Belleville, and will continue to be so if it takes the last ox in dad's barn. Of course there are many reasons why this store should receive the attention of every broad-minded person, "narrow ones, too," if you please. First—Because some of your other merchants are so interested in your and our welfare that they helped to make a law to keep merchants out who would dare to come in competition with them. $250 is only a drop in the bucket for us, but it might be the price of some would-be stock, everything being boiled down. Second—there is one less empty store room. Third and last—because this is the only Underprice store where high grade goods are sold at low grade prices. Export and consumption of merchandise determine the general condition of prosperity, and to learn the trade situation and prices of commodities of daily sales it will be necessary for you to become one of our many customers. But the test of prosperity in the final and best analysis is the up-to-date men and our Friday and Saturday bargains are the talk of the town, and it will pay you to visit this economic store on every shopping tour or miss the best bargains ever offered.

More visitors are finding enjoyment throughout our store. Why not you?

The best preparation for to-morrow is to do good work to-day—a good preparation for life hereafter is to buy at

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

Plain Truth

Our perferences are always in strict accordance with the promise made in our "ads." We believe in the SUBLIMITY of PLAIN TRUTH. TIMELY TOPICS.

The Union Pacific Railway, at a certain stretch of country in Nevada, was compelled to build sheds over its tracks to prevent them from the heavy snowfalls. It looks as though, if these good old-fashioned winters are to keep on, it would pay the Grand Trunk to do the same as the U. P.

The backbone of winter, it may be remarked, is not so easy to break as a New Year's resolution.

Sudden drops of temperature are impossible in the home heated by hot water. Stove fires die out, hot air furnaces heat unevenly, and the hot air switches to other parts of the house leaving the remaining rooms cold and drafty. But with the heating system of the in connection with Oxford Radiators an even, steady circulation of hot water is kept up throughout the house. Each radiator is diffusing the same temperature of heat in sufficient quantities for the size of the room.

The illustration below shows that the distance from the fire to the first surface is less than in any heater made, and the water has a shorter distance to travel, thus a more equal temperature is maintained in the water of the several sections.

Write for our booklets, they are of interest to everyone with a home to heat.

Eye Strain and Civilization

In a lecture recently delivered on the above subject before the Cleveland Academy of Medicine by Geo. M. Gould, B.M., M.D., he says, on the point of "Dangers of Eyestrain"; Without the least doubt, and weighing well what I say, I am sure that no discovery of modern medicine, except vaccination and the germ theory, is of so great importance as that of eye strain. Directly and indirectly it is the cause of more suffering than all the organic diseases combined. Most of all the headache in the world, and of sick headache, is absolutely due to that cause. A very large part of the neurasthenia, and of the hysteria also springs from it; and of "biliousness," "nervousness," etc. It is one of the most active of all causes. And if all the modern producers of general unwellness or vitality soon is more frequent and persistent than eyestrain." We make a specialty of these obscure cases. No charge for consultation.—

TRAINS FAST IN DRIFTS.

Ontario Towns Entirely Without Railway Service and Suffering Failure.

Clinton, March 2.—The big storm of Monday, of rain, sleet and snow has made the railway situation the worst in the history of all railroading in this section. Nine engines, two snow plows and two passenger trains are stuck, disabled or off the track at this place, and last night showed no signs of being relieved. A snow plow cannot keep the track, owing to the ice and snow. Large gangs of men are being engaged to dig the line out, which seems the only way it will ever be opened up. The G.T.R. have over seventy-five people as their guests at the different hotels here. No mail or papers have been received since 8 o'clock Monday morning, while provisions of all kinds are short and business is at a standstill.

Snow Eight Feet Deep.

London, March 2.—The month of March brought with it one of the worst blockades experienced by the railways this hard winter. Monday a severe sleet and snow storm set in and continued all day. The snow between here and Stratford is reported to be over 8 feet deep. No. 1 express came to grief on the Stratford branch Monday and was stalled all night. Mrs. Hays, wife of President C. M. Hays of the G.T.R., was one of the unfortunates who spent the night in the snow. This train did not reach London till 11 o'clock last evening. The main lines are being kept clear so far. The Huron & Bruce is still blocked, as is the St. Mary's branch. Similar conditions are being experienced on the Pere Marquette and C.P.R.

Fast Situation Grave.

Guelph, March 2.—The snowstorm of Monday has completely demoralized railway traffic and business generally in the city. Not a train has arrived since early Monday afternoon, and not one has departed. The fuel situation is again very grave.

Assizes Postponed.

Brockville, March 2.—No train on the Brockville, Westport and Northwestern Railway reached here yesterday. The train due at 11 a. m. became fast in a drift near Athens and had to be dug out. The spring assizes were postponed till Wednesday, owing to the non-arrival of Justice Street and some of the jurors.

Branch Lines Closed.

Kingston, March 2.—This city is in the grip of the storm. The Kingston and Pembroke trains were cancelled, and snow plows cleared the line, and the Day of Quinte line has been closed since Saturday. On the main line of the G.T.R. the Monday mail from the west passed here last evening.

men are dangerous. You have come to kill."

This was rather an unhappy remark and one I am sure which neither Jim nor I appreciated. And yet that's what it looked like. For what other reason had we come? I had no wish personally to kill Kung, and yet I knew either he or I must perish ere I would bring him down. But I always had the vague sort of hope that something would intervene and that the law would ultimately punish him for his many crimes.

Jim, however, evinced no squeamishness. The deadly determination of the man was shown in every look and word.

"Have we not good cause?" he said.

"Aye, more than we have good!" I repeated the carpenter. "The sins of Kung must be paid for."

"Mark you, Koon-Si," said Jim, "it is written in our good book that there shall be blood for blood, and as it has been, and so it shall be. And now, tell us your plan."

Koon-Si looked steadily at Jim, and I knew that the subtle brain of the Chinaman was beating fast behind those inscrutable eyes of his.

"My plan is this: This evening we descend by boat to the river Min, which is down in the native fashion, so that you may pass through the streets unobserved. I have my old boat ready, and I've touched the aforementioned bundle. "You can easily slip them over your own things."

"And who goes with us?"

"Your boy, Ah Yon, and perhaps two boatmen. Friends, you understand, who will wait for me in case we have to retreat suddenly." He turned to go and then came back with a cautious finger uplifted. "I am sorry to add that your excellencies had better remain within doors today. The eyes of Kung are everywhere. It would not do for him to gain an inkling of your esteemed presence in Hankow—that not do, that is, for your excellencies."

CHAPTER XXV.

A RUN DOWN THE YANG-TSE.

Shortly after breakfast Koon-Si came and joined us in our inner chamber, clothes, a complete outfit of which, even to a big cooly hat and pendent wigtail, had been provided. But it was nevertheless a long and dreary day we spent shut up in that little room of the disturbing cousin. I thought the sun would never set, and when at length the shadows did begin to fall I was quite unable to realize it. The carpenter had paid us two or three short visits during the day, but had nothing to report. Ah Yon, who had been dispatched on a reconnoitring expedition, had expected back until the evening, so that Jim and I had nothing to divert us but our own thoughts, and these I might be accepted as a criterion of his they were not such as men gladly welcome.

However, the day did' eventually draw to a close, and when Ah Yon had come Koon-Si entered with the welcome information that it was time to start. Our small preparations were hurriedly made, and we quickly followed the carpenter to the door.

"Where is Ah Yon?" asked my uncle.

"He will meet us at the boat. Too many going together might excite suspicion."

A wonderful fellow was the carpenter. He seemed to think of everything. And, though personally I did not like the man, I had to admit that for our needs we could not have created a better one.

Out into the street we went, our big sutraw hats pulled well forward so as to shade the face, and in this manner we pursued our way without raising remarks or any undue curiosity from the passers-by. Koon-Si led a swiftly and silently along, having previously cautioned us not to speak; for, as he said, the very streets have ears and Kung is everywhere.

Presently we found we were taking a direction contrary to that from which we had come, though this was no cause for wonder, as the island was some miles below the town. Nevertheless it was anything but a pleasant journey. There was always a sigh of relief as we gradually left the ill smelling alleys behind and came more into the straggling streets which denoted the outskirts of the town. These in turn gave place to still more or less open country, and presently we began the descent of a slope, at the bottom of which I thought I could detect the sparkle of water.

"The river?" said Jim.

"Yes," answered Koon-Si. "Here we can embark with perfect safety, as we are some distance below the town."

He led us on for another hundred yards or so along the water's edge, and then, stopping for a minute and looking round as if to locate the exact spot, he uttered the cry of a night bird. Waiting a little while, he signalled again, but this time the cry was varied, there being three distinct calls. Almost immediately I heard the echo came over the water, and this was followed shortly after by the soft splash of a rowing scull. Then from the gloom, which lay like a cloak upon the river, I saw a dark object emerge, and presently a boat grated on the shingle at our feet.

"Aboard quickly," said Koon-Si. "The wind is fair, and the current is strong. In two or three hours we shall be abreast of Ching-hi."

The boat was steadied for us, and we instantly scrambled aboard. The carpenter followed, one of the men shoved off, and presently we were spinking down the current river.

Jim and I sat in the little cabin, a structure with which every Chinese sampan is rigged. Koon-Si sat on the after thwart, facing us, and acting as our laid to with a will. A man on the bench forward also tugged like a galley slave. A second sat still forward to bale and kept a good lookout. Ah Yon, our worthy servant, stood aft, the steering-oar or scull in his hand.

It was a strange journey, that run down the dark river, and if the people's conditions were not without their effect on me it is small cause for wonder. Jim was significantly mute, and I felt keenly that this was no occasion for the use of idle words. I knew that the carpenter had revealed no further than the island of Ching-hi and that they wandered there at large. Chinese and Kung and his society, with a black record of thought those three words conjured up! It seemed to me as though the darkness of the night concentrated in them, and as the boat rushed on and on, swinging blindly, as it were, toward destiny, I thought of Cecil, of my sins and of such things as stir the imagination when a great event is foreshadowed. Truly we were in the hands of fate, and I prayed for hope!

For some time nothing but the swirling of the waters, the risthg and falling of the oars, the gurgling soughing of the wind as it swept down the great black waterway, beat an accompaniment to our thoughts. But at length the canvas tilt which roofed our little cabin I heard a sound not unlike that which the rubbing of a finger nail would produce.

For a time I paid little heed to it, but as it continued without cessation I

"Look, yonder is the island of Ching-hi," pricked up my ears and listened still more intently. The sound came at regular intervals, and after a little hesitation I concocted it in some manner with the sawing of the big steering scull aft. Then the thought of the scull conjured up a vision of the man who was working it, and Mr. Ah Yon immediately stood before my mind's eye.

Ever on the alert and but sure of one thing, that the unexpected always happens, I instantly made up my mind that Ah Yon was signaling me, and further to test the truth of this surmise I got up, opened the flap at the back of the little cabin and looked out.

Ah Yon's face was but darkly seen, yet his figure stood out distinctly, a darker object against the dark background of the sky. As he saw me he stooped, his finger to his lips, but at last I mustered a cough of Koon-Si was heard, and Yon immediately stood upright and stiffened himself to his work. But the carpenter, continuing to speak and somewhat excitedly, I thought, the man who had been keeping the lookout forward came and took Yon's place, the latter scrambling forward in turn. Then for a space there was peace on the boat, and we swung on, on.

Though at the moment I thought the occurrence a little strange, a fuller mental investigation failed to lay bare any important fact. That Ah Yon had meant to communicate with me was obvious, but that his communication was of no moment it would be difficult to say. That he had been relieved from his post aft was only natural, considering the time he had stood there. Nevertheless I mentioned the incident to Jim, who could make no more out of it than I. Among friends the uttered word is not always big with importance, the word unnoticed is easily forgiven.

No incident of any importance marked the continuance of our journey. It was long and dull to a degree, and the only satisfaction we received from the carpenter we imporiuned with queries as to distances, etc., was the information that Ching-hi lay ahead. Everything was "presently," and for want of a fuller answer we were forced to possess our souls in patience.

But at length the apparently interminable journey came to an end, and when I looked over the side I saw that we were moving slowly down upon the land. The carpenter came and relieved the man aft and held a hurried conversation with the steersman, the result of which was that we presently turned somewhat, making for what appeared to be a break in the land. Then, thanks to the current which about here, where the waters parted, ran with an increased velocity, we progressed rapidly, evidently for one to descry a little inlet or bay, and into this we glided. The carpenter, with Koon-Si, appeared to know the lay of the land, and with that accuracy which seems to be the one gift seen to come man we made our way without mishap. Once in still water, the oars were again brought into requisition, and presently I felt the boat's keel grat on the bottom. The carpenter slipped overboard and held the boat while Jim and I leaped ashore, a feat we accomplished for the most part wetting of our boots. Koon-Si immediately joined us.

"At last, excellencies, we are here," he said, on the island of Ching-hi. He whom we have come to find is here. The gods have greatly favored our endeavors."

"Indeed, it seems so," replied Jim. "You are a wonderful man, Koon-Si. Thanks to you and your accomplishment what at one time seemed to be an impossible journey. I think we have not cause for the least fear."

"Believe me, excellency, you have not come for nothing, nor have I. I have waited long for this day. I have worked much, endured much degradation, but the gods are wise, and in their hands is vengeance."

"Good, and how?"

"Now, excellency, with the aid of these worthy boatmen, who know of the habitation of Kung and his manner of living, we shall discover our foe in his abode. What shall follow we know not, but this we do know, that it is destined that Kung shall die this evening."

With that the boat was drawn up out of the current, and, leaving cautious word about, though I could distinguish little in the gloom, I loosened my revolver. Then began a whispered consultation between the carpenter and his associates, during which Ah Yon slided up to me and said in a low voice, "Master, pistol all it."

"All it, Yon," I replied. "You know all about this expedition?"

"Sabbee plenty. Be welly careful. Plenty dangulous."

Here Koon-Si, who seemed to have eyes and ears for everything, interposed and said that Yon had been right in saying.

"His merely mentioned the fact that it was time to keep our eyes open and our pistols handy."

"Indeed," said the carpenter. "Ah Yon is a worthy servant. He shall be rewarded."

"That he shall be," said Jim heartily. "Ah Yon is an excellent fellow."

But the subject of our praises, flattering remarks in blank away, his natural modesty being no proof against such praise.

Learning from the carpenter that we had still some distance to walk before reaching Kung's house, we immediately set out with Ah Yon and one of the boatmen at our head. Jim followed next. Then came Koon-Si, myself and the other boatmen.

In this manner we pursued our way in silence, and if the journey down the river had seemed to be charged with the horror of awful uncertainty, this creeping over unknown ground through the dark night toward a fate which no man might foresee contained for me all the elements of a hideous nightmare. I confess that my nerves were strung to an acute pitch, that my imagination pictured many strange and inconsequent things, but the knowledge that one was entirely in the hands of this carpenter and his associates was not conducive to the tranquillity of one's mind. To me it seemed as though I wanted to see something, listen to something, grope for something in the dark, and I yearned for the light.

Yet I must in fairness to Jim admit that in Koon-Si we had a marvelous auxiliary and one without whom it would have been quite impossible to proceed upon this desperate adventure. Indeed, but for the hint my friend had of seeking out the carpenter I now saw that our visit to China would have been destined to failure. Without Koon-Si we had be entitled the hopes which we had centered in him, and I felt that it was unprofitable for me even to attempt to hold from him the praise which was so justly his due.

Presently the leaders of our little party stopped. There was a hurried whispering among Koon-Si and the boatmen, and this done we went on again, but this time more slowly and carefully, instinctively I crept closer to Jim and felt that my revolver was ready, for danger seemed to lurk in the very air. Then we came to a standstill at the highest pitch of intensity. However, nothing came as yet, and the carpenter again moved forward and presently found ourselves facing a structure which, seen through the gloom, appeared to be a house or chimney, but which in reality was the dilapidated pagoda we had seen from the river.

Toward this our guides led us, and as we emerged within the shadow of it while my eyes were fixed with all intensity upon it I received a violent blow on the side of the head which drove me, face foremost, to the ground.

Of what followed I have but a vague recollection.

I saw, as if in fancy, the quick rush of figures toward me, heard the confused murmurs as of many voices; I felt a man's knees on my back and powerful hands at my throat, and then I remembered no more.

CHAPTER XXVI.

KUNG.

When consciousness returned to me, which quickly enough, I found that I or a day (I had lost count of time), I found myself in complete darkness and for some moments could not be unconscious that I was. But the numbed feeling of the bond which had bound painfully upon me to be a reality of my position, and with horror I realized the fact that I was a prisoner. Then little by little the past came back —the run down the river, the landing on the island, the rush of the foe and from behind which had laid me low.

Who could have done this? Where was I? Not in the hands of Kung—what of him? Had he, too, fallen into the hands of the enemy? Was he dead? Worst of all, Had Koon-Si betrayed us! All these questions ran like lightning through my brain, and for the time being my fears answered darkly. Had Kung, the omniscient Kung, seen us at last? If it was so all was sudden, this surprise, the blow, too, had surely come from the hands of one of Kung's agents or friends. And the pagoda—was it fancy, or had I really seen one?

Then there came the most injurious effect upon my throbbing brain, and with the intensity of my mental agony around the temples I attempted to lift my hands to my head. To my excruciating alarm I found I was unable to accomplish this simple movement for the very good reason that my arms were bound tightly to my sides, and in the case with my feet, which were bound so tightly that I scarcely had the power to move them.

Then came the most injurious effect upon my throbbing brain, and with the intensity of my mental agony around the temples I attempted to lift my hands to my head. To my excruciating alarm I found I was unable to accomplish this simple movement for the very good reason that my arms were bound tightly to my sides, and in the case with my feet, which were bound so tightly that I scarcely had the power to move them.

It seemed to me as though I lay for hours in the darkness, racked to and fro by the pains in my head, I began to experience the agonies of thirst. These I mutely endured for some considerable time, and then I began to call for help, for I had an idea that possibly I was the hostage of my captors to subject me to this horrible form of death. However, in response to the cry, I presently heard the creaking of a door, and a man bearing a lamp entered the apartment. He came and held it over me, and, though I could but indistinctly see his face, I noticed that he was a half dressed cooly.

"Water," I gasped. "Give me something to drink."

He did not answer, so I cannot say if he knew English, but without a double he understood me, for he immediately placed his lamp upon the floor, lifted me into a sitting attitude, my hands remaining as they were, and a bowl of tea was brought to my lips.

I drank deeply, for my throat was hot and dry, and never until that moment had I known the real pleasure of quenching thirst. And as I drank eagerly, I asked him where I was, but without replying he took up his lamp, and I heard the key turn in the door creak as he passed out.

Left alone once more with my thoughts I stared blankly into the gloom, which now seemed deeper than ever and gave way to the bitterness of defeat.

And as I pictured it all in that gloomy cavern of a prison I felt that the game we have played for seven years was lost. Kung had given up hope of being cured, what was indeed to try Holloway's Corn Cure? Before I had taken one bottle I noticed a change, and before I had used half of the second bottle I was completely cured. Others of my friends have used it with like success. Holloway's Corn Cure is sold by all druggists and dealers everywhere. Large bottles only 25 cents.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficiency in purifying the blood of the system. It has called forth many letters of commendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They act on the nerve centres and the blood, and by keeping the latter cool the result is almost immediately seen.

A long portage makes a weary road.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without it, do not think that hereditary disease have drifted into consumption, but by not neglecting what was only a slight joint of distress, Thomas' Eclectric Consumption Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mrs. Mary Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is the best medicine on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for a long time I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of consumption. He also gives up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I noticed a change, and after using by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

No one can answer these questions, who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills for a few weeks, but will say they are a cure for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

The average watch represents but 12 hours' work per day.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Cholera, summer complaint, and sickness and pain caused by eating children cutting teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the above troubles. Of Indigestion in its worst type, it soothes, etc. It sets like a wonderful charm, and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear using it, for it has a host of the most medicine convenient.

Much talk, many lies.

A DEAFNESS BOOK—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TREATISE—Containing Medical Advice and others told me I cor. I not possible to be cured. I decided to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia, and he was one of the worst of its kind. Within a few months I gained from 119 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured, and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything I like, and feel like a well man. I have sold over thirty cases Vegetable Discovery, and have a ten well-known and people in this section know how I was cured. Any further what I have said is true. They are eager to buy Vegetable Discovery. It certainly saved my life as I never would have lived another year had I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything I have said. I am willing to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of saving the life of some poor sufferer. Certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Yours truly, JOHN VALCOURT, Wotton, P.Q. General Merchant

Dr. Thomas Indian Root Bitters are nearly born at sea.

A sure method of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They are a perfect remedy for dizziness, nausea, etc. Their action is mild and natural. One pill is a dose. Price 25 cents. Constant application to business is a cause of nervousness, but it need not be; not relaxation, laudlude and depression, which are the consequences, comes from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous prostration, and if the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil will be found a recuperative of rare power. By the use of this valuable, healthful action, dispelling depression, and restoring the body to vigor.

The biggest brave does not always make the best one.

A CURE FOR A SLIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last June I had a Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and left hip. I could not catch me whenever I tried to climb a hill. I tried many things for two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it freely. I received relief at once, by morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Don't be a deadbeat, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Dr. Thomas' Eclectric and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Pills may well be termed "Perfection." Others may claim to be the same as or at least equal remedies had been used, it is idle to do so. They are the only bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. This medicine is a specific to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

See the safe, pleasant, and effective tonic worm killer, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Every bottle warranted. Procure a bottle and take it home.

If you have a good business, it is always better to stay where you are.

"Cure-Alls" Didn't Cure

Only a Kidney Specific of the Latest Discovery Will Cure American Kidney Cure can now hope to cope with the insidious kidney diseases in all its forms.

"For two years I was greatly troubled with an affection of the kidneys—frequently unfitting me for work. I tried many patent medicines and "cure-alls," without getting any relief, for I had become quite discouraged. Recently South American Kidney Cure was recommended to me. A few doses after commencing its use I got great relief. Four bottles cured. It is worth its weight in gold."—Frank S. Powell, Arnprior, Ont.

HOODED COBRA OF INDIA.

Most Deadly of All Snakes and Its Interesting History.

One of the most interesting as well as the most deadly of all snakes is the hooded cobra of India. In that country hundreds of people die every year from the venomous bite of these reptiles. As it lies coiled up in a heap in its cage it looks inoffensive enough, and not nearly so unpleasant as the stuff-tailed ebony moccasins. But when excited the cobra rears up its head and about one-third of its body, and as you see by the name for the name "hooded." The ribs just back of the head are very long and slender, and when they are extended straight out from the body the skin stretched between them forms a curved shield or hood around the head. On the back of this hood, in the adult snake, is a most remarkable ornament, looking like two eyes or a pair of spectacles, nose-piece and all. In no two snakes is this ornament exactly alike, and some individuals lack it altogether.

When the snake sways back and forth all ready to strike, its tongue playing like lightning, one may indeed be glad that a thick sheet of glass is between him and this terrible threat of death. But one must remember that this tongue has nothing to do with the venom or bite, the poison fluid being stored up in little sacs, and when the snake strikes it is forced down and out through the hollow teeth.

This is the snake which the snake charmers of the East use in their performances. The music of the flutes evidently excites them to spread their hoods, as does the presence of food.

When the hood is not in use it closes back upon the neck and folds so neatly between the ribs that it disappears, and the neck of the snake shows no sign of being different in structure from that of ordinary species.

The cobra sometimes grows to a length of six feet, and often finds its way into the walls and roofs of houses, being fond of the rats which abound in such places in India. These snakes go about in pairs, and they never stray far from each other. The female lays about twelve eggs, which are nearly as large as those of a pigeon, white, and very soft shelled.

The natives of India have what they call "snake stones," which are very curious and absorbing substances, and when these are applied to the wound they draw up a considerable quantity of blood. How such crude treatment can ever effect a cure seems incredible, but many instances have been reported by Englishmen where deception was out of the question. The wild jungle fowl are said to feed on the young snakes, and that curious little lizard creature, the mongoose, is the cobra's worst enemy, showing great skill and cunning in attacking and avoiding the fangs of the cobra. The snake is invariably killed in these encounters.

JAPAN'S FIGHTING FORCE.

Half a Million Men and 168,000 Horses the Present Programme.

In a paper in the Journal of the United Service of India on the growth of the military power of Japan, Capt. H. W. H. Scopes traces the origin of the present Japanese army to the action of the Mikado, when a "commission was sent out from Japan to all foreign countries in 1869 to enquire into the best system of national defence, the best system of education, and the best religion. On its return the commission reported the French military system, the British naval system, and the American system of education to be the best. They stated, however, that they found no civilized religion to be worth adopting."

In 1887 the Mikado undertook the reorganization of his land forces on Prussian lines with the assistance of a German military mission. The issue was seen in the triumph of Japan in the war with China in 1894, a brief account of which is given by Capt. Senior. The principal results were "the complete unification of the various clans into the Japanese nation with a strong national feeling, and the receipt of the indemnity of £34,500,000."

This sum was partly applied to the further reorganization of the army, and reforms were instituted which will be completed in April, 1903, and to be in full working order by 1905, when the Japanese army will have a peace strength of 150,000 men and 168,000 horses, the organization by trained men to an army of 500,000 men with 100,000 horses per year, with a supplementary reserve of about another 500,000 men."

The cavalry are armed with sword and carbine, those of the Imperial Guard also carrying a lance for escort duties. The cavalry is the weakest portion of the army, the Japanese being indifferent riders. The artillery and engineers are well organized and equipped. Their medical arrangements are excellent, and a foreign surgeon wrote in 1900:

"It was the general impression among medical men with the expedition that the Japanese medical service was most efficient and complete, removing their wounded promptly to the base. This was not due to superiority of equipment, but to a better organization of personnel for field service, and to the numbers they have at their disposal."

Devil Worship in Paris.

A Swedish baron and a Belgian Count, charged with devil worship and the systematic corruption of minors, have appeared before the court at Paris, which sat with closed doors to hear the case. It was stated that the baron had arranged a temple to Satan at his residence in the fashionable Elysee Quarter, and that the count assisted him in attracting minors thereto. Counsel for the defence pleaded that they were corrupted by reading the works of popular modern French authors, and that these writers, and not their victims, should be held responsible.

A MOUSE THAT 'SINGS."

Men Who Caught It Says It Warbles Like a Canary.

Singing mice are rare, but a correspondent writes from Yorkshire asking whether we can give him any information about a specimen he captured.

He adds, "It has been warbling just like a canary for the last month in our workshop, and although I have it in a cage it still continues to sing."

That mice do occasionally "sing" is undeniable. Some observers say that their "song" is softer, sweeter and more delicate than that of the canary, which one can believe quite easily. Others go so far as to compare it to that of a warbler or even a piping bullfinch. But the question as to why they lift up their voices in this tuneful manner still remains to be answered.

Three explanations have been suggested:

First.—That all mice are potential vocalists and can learn to sing, by imitation, from singing birds.

Second.—That many mice possess an exceptional talent for mimicry, together with a keen sense of the ludicrous.

Third.—That some mice are subject to bronchitis and that the so called "song" is only the wheezing of rodents which suffer from the distressing complaint.

A certain amount of color is given to the last theory by the fact that a mouse which was caught by the neck in a wire trap not sufficiently strong to kill it "sang" while its throat was under compression, but never again during its subsequent life as a captive.—London Mail.

JADE AS MEDICINE.

It Is Used in Various Ways For Many Diseases in China.

Everything in China of any rarity whatever is certain to be dragged into the pharmacopeia of the Chinese physician. Jade is no exception to the rule. It may be swallowed as a powder or in little pieces the size of hemp seed for various stomachic complaints. Even pockmarks and scars may be obliterated by being daily rubbed with a piece of pure jade. It is also considered to be of a moist nature, and we read of an imperial favorite of the eighth century who was cured of excessive thirst by drinking a few drops of water in her mouth. And so when the tomb of the great commander, Yeso Yeso, third century, A. D., was opened 200 years after his death, among the usual objects found in such circumstances was a large silver bowl full of water. That the water had not dried up was accounted for by the presence in the bowl of a jade boy three feet in height.

Jade is chiefly brought from the Kwenlun, or Kouenlun, range, between thy desert of Gobi and Tibet; from Khotan or Ilesh, in Turkland, and from Lop-tien, on the Beluttgah mountains, still farther to the west. In the tenth century, A. D., the latter was actually known as the Jade hills district, though it does not appear that any jade has ever been found there.—Pendleton Herbert A. Giles in Nineteenth Century.

Ancient Roman Wall.

The destruction of Newgate brought to light another section of the ancient Roman wall which surrounded London and served as a fortification of the city. The whole extent of the wall has now been fairly well traced and parts of it are still used as cellars and warehouses. The only portion of it that is still above ground is a bastion in the Church of St. Giles, Cripplegate. The ground of London is estimated to have risen at the rate of nearly a foot a century, and doubtless from time to time many rich finds of antiquities will be found, especially if a start is made to construct high buildings on the American plan.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MRS. T. E. GEORGE DEAD.

WAS 62 YEARS OF AGE AND A NATIVE OF ENGLAND.

Mrs. Thomas E. George died this morning at the family residence, south Albert street, after a long lingering illness. The deceased was born at Cornwall, England, 62 years ago and lived in the Old Country until 10 years ago, when the family came to Canada and took up their residence in Belleville. Mrs. George was known to many and was an estimable lady. She was a member of Christ Church. A husband and a family of four daughters and one son survive. The son, Frank, resides in Toronto, also two of the daughters, Mrs. A. E. Hay and Mrs. J. Brown. Mrs. C. Harris and Miss Rosie reside in the city.

Death at the Institute.

Allan Walton, a student at the Deaf and Dumb Institution, died this morning from an attack of meningitis. He had been ill but a few days. The deceased was a native of Ivan in his 19th year and had been a student for some time. The family reside at Wexford, Scarboro. Before the remains were sent to-day.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

"A Reader" asks: "Is the O.H.A. an incorporated institution, and, if not was it not illegal for its executive body to transact business on Sunday?"

Answer—The O.H.A., according to the "History," published under its auspices, was incorporated in 1896. We have the opinion of a prominent lawyer of this city that any business transacted by an incorporated body on Sunday is invalid. The resolution suspending McMillan and cancelling all games played by Belleville was passed according to Mr. Porter, between 2 and 3 o'clock on Sunday morning.

The Toronto papers are still making excuses for the Marlboros because they failed to lift the Stanley Cup. None of the papers seem willing to acknowledge the real reason, because they couldn't play Dat enough.

The O. H. A. executive rose in its might on Saturday and in a seventeen hour session succeeded in putting Teddy McMillan and the Belleville club to a lot of business. They probably go on the principle that it is better late than never, but it must be admitted that the intervention is muddled things somewhat. They now offer the championship of the district to fourteen members of Victoria has disbanded and Port Hope is out of business. But if the Belleville team had been regulated at the right time would not have been disbanded.

One sad result of the throwing out of Belleville was the resignation of E. Rose Porter, M.P., from the executive. Still even this great blow may prove fatal to hockey in Ontario. Mr. Porter learned most of his hockey in political strife, and when he gets up for a real game in the homestead, they are not calculated to greatly astonish any amateur team.

The sound that comes from Belleville to-day is not that of the soft zephyrs sighing through the telephone wires.

If Belleville will try to re-open the McMillan case and threaten in case of refusal to play hockey, it is their midst. And as the rule of the O.H.A. has been clean hockey or no hockey at all, it seems about time for hockey to die in Belleville. If it would reason it has no chance. The O. H. A. would still have about ninety-odd teams and find it doesn't commonly per cent. of its annual troubles.

The store jaundiced remarks, of course, were only to be expected from a paper which, from away back in last summer, has never lost a chance to "knock" the hockey of Belleville. However, the game has not been played out yet, and the O.H.A. may find that it is one thing to attempt an injustice and another thing to succeed in it.

The Port Hope Guide fails to understand why Belleville was so severely treated. It says:

The O.H.A. executive, after much investigation, has reached a decision upon the Belleville case. They have declared "Reddy" McMillan ineligible and thrown the whole Belleville team out. The decision seems to be anything but a fair one. In the first place no one accused Belleville, and why the executive should make such a clean sweep in the probability of the Belleville players is very strange. If the executive were to look after some of the other hockey teams it is quite likely they would find cause to take action there also. It seems that Belleville comes in for its very fair share of hard knocks and also the present one would have carried out in a better way.

You remember when Port Hope protested Cobourg out had strong evidence as to one of their players being over age. Now Cobourg did not come out with a clean bill of the O.H.A. only suspended the player and ordered the game to be played over. If they had even given Belleville a chance like that it would have been all right, but to allow the whole team out seems to be rather severe.

The Kingston News and Times makes the following friendly and sensible comments:

"The O. H. A. executive have been apparently giving several snap verdicts lately which are not raising them in the estimation of the public. The guiding hand of President John Ross Robertson seems to be absent in the case of the Belleville "pro" at one meeting a majority vote had been cast in favor of his reinstatement. At a meeting afterwards when no further evidence so far as is known, was produced, a forward in his favor, a remarkable change took place and the motion was carried to reinstate him. Francis Nelson, the vice-president, resigned in protest.

"Again there is the Belleville matter. The O. H. A. was supposed to have looked thoroughly into the case and declared "no evidence" against McMillan. Lo and behold on Saturday night the executive threw out the whole team, who were hooked on as intermediate champions. These "double-headers" are getting too frequent.

Perhaps the O.H.A. executive will consider the case of Phillips, late of the Marlboros. While the hockey season was on Phillips lived in Toronto; when the hockey season is off Phillips turns up in Montreal."

The Toronto papers to-day simply role the service of the injunction and writ on Vice-President Nelson and Secretary Hewitt, of the O.H.A., and also that suit has been entered on behalf of McMillan for $200. Mr. F. H. Johnston has been engaged to act for the association.

Mr. Wm. Carnew, solicitor for McMillan and the Belleville club, informs us that all members of the O.H.A. executive have been served with a copy of the writ except J. Ross Robertson, who is in Egypt. Nothing new has yet developed. All proceedings, when the case comes up, will take place here, in the County Court of the County of Hastings. Mr. E. Rose Porter's resignation was not accepted, and he is still a member of the O.H.A. executive.

PROPOSED NEW COLORS FOR 15th REGIMENT.

DESIGNS HAVE BEEN RECEIVED—WHAT THEY ARE.

Designs have been received for the new colors for the Fifteenth Regiment, and very beautiful they are, which was duly to be expected, coming as they do from Messrs. Hobson & Son, of London, Eng., color makers by His Majesty's War Department. As everybody knows, the work of securing the new colors has fallen to the lot of Lieut.-Colonel Wood-League, who are holding a meeting this afternoon in connection therewith, presided over by Lieut.-Colonel Ponton, president. The cost of the colors will be $257, of which a little over $200 has been raised. It is hoped that the balance will be secured and the colors obtained ready for presentation by the Regiment before Empire day, May 24. As the regiment is at present on a war footing it will be considered in the small balance required. The ladies have requested Mrs. Ponton, Col. Gallinwell, Major Pope and Major Jones to act on the committee in obtaining the colors, Mrs. Daniel is treasurer.

Following is a description of the colors received:

King's Color—Great Union, best English silk, embroidered in colors and gold, with regimental title, viz., "Argyll Light Infantry," with regimental number "XV." on a scroll, surmounted by Tudor crown, gold and silver fringe, gold and crimson cords and sels, ash staff with mercurial gilt ball and crown head.

Regimental Color — Best English blue silk, small Union in corner with regimental number on same, surrounded in colors proper, maple, rose, shamrock and thistle wreath for all, maple wreath circle with regimental title encircling the regimental crest, the "Lion Rampant" standing, all crowned, under the wreath the regimental device on a scroll "Nulli Secundus," gold and blue fringe, gold and crimson tassels, ash staff with mercurial gilt Lion and crown head.

Pair of solid leather covers with brass bars. Pair of brass sword belts with regimental breast plates in gilt metal.

THE SPRING ASSIZES.

WERE OPENED THIS MORNING—NO CRIMINAL CASES IN THE DOCKET.

Owing to the snow blockade yesterday the opening of the spring assizes had to be postponed until this morning. As a number of the Grand Jurors had not yet been able to reach the city, Justice Falconbridge was unable to address them. Fortunately there is nothing but routine business for them to transact. The following gentlemen composed the jury:

Charles E. Bishop, H. S. Burrell, F. W. Burrell, Geo. W. Burrell, Belleville; M. Gannan, Montreague; Wm. Bell, Thurlow; D. Donnelly, Tyendinaga; R. Maybee, Sidney; J. Rose, Wallace; J. Gay, Hungerford; Chas. Ashley, Thurlow; W. Sexsmith, Descronto; J. Janner, Rawdon.

The first civil case taken up was No. 5 in the docket, dating back to January 16th, 1903. Miss Lillian J. Purdy, of Sidney, was driving over a railway crossing near Frankford when the cutter was struck by a train. Both horse and the young lady was instantly killed. The father has brought this action to recover damages. The case was in progress all day. Messrs. Porter & Porter are acting for the plaintiff, and Messrs. Bell, McCamus, Ponton, Mahon & Bell, K.C., for the defendants.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Ask your doctor if this is the medicine that cured his hard cold. Doctors have used it for over fifty years.

J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

JOHN GANNON HAD VERY CLOSE CALL.

PIECE OF MEAT LODGED IN HIS THROAT, AND IT WAS NEARLY UP TO THE UNDERTAKER.

John Gannon, who is employed at the International Hotel, in this city, during the noon hour to-day came near being choked to death, and would have succumbed had not physicians arrived quickly upon the scene. He was engaged in eating his dinner when a piece of meat became lodged in the wind pipe, and his efforts to dislodge it proved of futile. Medical aid was summoned and when two physicians arrived the unfortunate man was unconscious. They succeeded in giving him relief, although the obstacle was not removed for some time after.

NEW RAILWAY.

SECURITIES OF ELECTRIC RAILWAY ARE GOOD.

Subscription Blanks Circulated—The Returns Expected To-day—Conservative Estimate — Splendid Opportunity For Investors.

Whatever else may be said of the attainment of the public to the assertion of, "The Ontario Electric Railway Company" as an investment. The table of estimated earnings show that only that the company will be able to earn the interest on its bonds, but a dividend of six per cent. on its stock and a surplus of nearly $40,000 a year additional.

The subscription blanks are now being distributed and are three in number, one for a subscription for the first mortgage bonds of the company, another for the shares of the company, and a third for blocks of stock and bonds. Subscriptions for shares will be taken from one share up, and for bonds from $500 up, but no subscriptions will be received for "bonds" for less than $1,200, which will entitle the purchaser to one $1,000 five per cent. bond and five shares of the capital stock, having a par value of $1,000 each. It should the purchaser so desire, he may have his bonds issued in $500 pieces.

On each block of stock (par value $100), subscription price $75. $6.25 interest on investment equal to eight per cent.

On each $500 first mortgage bond at subscription price $475. Rate of interest on investment equal to five per cent. quarterly.

On each "block" consisting of one $1,000 mortgage five per cent. bond and five shares of stock par value $1,500, and subscription price $1,200. $31.25 interest on investment, six and two-thirds per cent.

By reading this pamphlet and studying the tables therein contained, the investor will see at once that the statement is very conservative as compared with the showing made by other roads.

Taking the Canadian and United States as a whole, they showed earnings the past year of over six per cent. on their stock. The Ontario company has estimated the number of passengers they will carry per mile of road as 2,888, against an average of all Canadian roads outside of Montreal, Toronto and Hamilton, of 4,468, and there seems to be no reason why they should not do quite as much as the average. They have estimated the cost of living and population during the year but five times, while the average for Canada and the United States is many times greater. Again, they have estimated the cost of tarry per mile at 1,000 10,283 passengers, while the average for Canada during the past year has been 24,708. Their freight estimates have been carefully gone into by experts and they, too, have been pronounced very conservative. Their cost per mile is estimated at about $6,000 be more than estimated.

In addition to obtaining a safe and conservative investment the public, by subscribing to the securities, is showing their endorsement of the project and insuring to themselves a very low rate of transportation for passengers, freight and express. When this saving in rates is taken into account the securities the public will benefit largely.

JAP HORSES ARE UNSERVICEABLE

Serious Defect Disclosed By a Chemulpo Correspondent.

FLEET IS MADE STRONGER

Great Japanese Attack Now in Progress —Admiral Togo Hammers Port Arthur —Consequently Use of the Wires Has Been Discontinued—Fight of Feb. 23 Not Yet Confirmed—Japs Occupy Ishinyang and Are Fortifying It.

London, March 2.—A correspondent of the Daily Mail, at Che Foo, who has just returned from Chemulpo, Corea, states that Japanese transports carrying troops continue to arrive at Chemulpo at the rate of one a day, while provisions are being landed near Hwang Ju, fifty-six miles northeast of Chemulpo, at the head of Taidong River, where a large force of Japanese infantry has concentrated.

"A serious defect has been disclosed," the correspondent continues. "It is feared that most of the Japanese horses are unserviceable.

"The Japanese squadron at Chemulpo has been strengthened. Effect of twelve battleships and cruisers has been stationed permanently at Prince Jerome Gulf, between Chedido Island and the anchorage.

"Yesterday I saw a cruiser of the Niitaka type beached at the entrance of Namyang Creek; she was docked except for a Japanese guard.

"The Coreans are hostile to the Japanese, and they are assisting the Russians in Northern Corea."

Hammering Port Arthur.

London, March 2.—No confirmation of the report published Monday in The Daily Telegraph that the Japanese had bombarded Port Arthur, Feb. 29, has been received from any point.

The wires from the scene of war have been practically silent for the past 24 hours, and in some quarters this silence is supposed to indicate that Japan's attack on Port Arthur is actually in progress and that consequently the use of the wires has been discontinued.

In a despatch from Shanghai, a correspondent to The Daily Telegraph reports that the Japanese military authorities object to the installation of wireless apparatus on newspaper despatch boats.

More Chinese Gather.

St. Petersburg, March 2.—A Russian correspondent of the Associated Press at Shanghai telegraphs that it is reported at Tientsin that 4,000 additional Chinese soldiers have been posted in Northern China, and that the Chinese Government has recently placed large orders for guns and ammunition.

Fortifies the Town.

Liaoyang, Manchuria, March 2.—The Japanese have occupied Ishinyang, Corea, and are now fortifying the walls of the town. A detachment of Russian troops is in the neighborhood of Ishinyang. The Coreans are averse to giving the Russians information regarding the movements of the Japanese.

Railway to Be Built.

Tokio, March 2.—According to the stipulations of the protocol, the Japanese Minister at Seoul has notified the Corean Government that the building of a railroad from Seoul to Wiju for military purposes will be commenced forthwith. Engineers and surveyors have already left Seoul.

Wounded Japs Arrive.

Nagasaki, March 2. — Several Wounded regulars arrived at Sasebo Monday from the front. Seven merchant steamers sank off Port Arthur, Feb. 24. The sinking of the vessels was managed by wires connecting them with the Japanese torpedo boat destroyers.

Japan's Military Staff Sails.

Tokio, March 2.—The general staff and a regiment of the Guards left Japan yesterday for a port on the west coast of Corea, probably Chemulpo.

Attempted to Blow Up Dock.

St. Petersburg, March 2.—The Japanese attempted to blow up a dock at Vladivostok, but did not succeed. They escaped. A Japanese barber at Vladivostok, deeming himself insulted by a Russian officer, shot him dead and then automatically announced that by was a captain on the Japanese General Staff, and was not used to taking insults.

Russian Account of Feb. 26.

Che Poo, March 2.—A Russian official despatch says that the Japanese renewed the attack on Port Arthur on the morning of Feb. 26. The fleet was beyond the range of all but the most powerful land batteries. The engagement lasted one hour; the Japanese then retiring. Their loss is unknown. The Russian cruiser Askold had one gun dismounted and two men injured. At low water on Feb. 28 the Russians discovered a Japanese torpedo boat destroyer which had been sunk on the shore of the outer harbor. They also found five unexploded torpedoes.

War Makes 10,000 Idle.

Odessa, Russia, March 2.—About 10,000 dock laborers are out of employment here on account of the stoppage of sea business.

Elections in Japan.

Tokio, March 2.—The general election was held yesterday in Japan, and was without disturbance of any kind. An Imperial rescript convening the diet in special session at Tokio, on March 16, will be issued on March 2. This session will last for 10 days, and the most important bill to be presented is one which increases the land tax by 1½ per cent. This increase will result in doubling the income from this source.

THE ROAD TO HEALTH

LIES THROUGH RICH, RED BLOOD AND STRONG NERVES.

Debility is a word that fairly expresses many ailments under one name. Poor blood, weak nerves, impaired digestion, loss of flesh, no energy, no ambition, listless and indifferent. This condition is perhaps the penalty of overwork, or the result of neglected health. You must regain the health of your blood entirely. There is just one absolutely sure way to do this—take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills will bring you new life, fill every vein with rich, red blood, restore vitality to the step, the glow of health to the wan cheek; they will inspire you with new energy and supply the vital force of mind and body.

There is not a corner of the civilized world where Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have not brought health and hope and happiness to some weak, debilitated, despairing person. If you have not used the pills yourself, ask your neighbors and they will tell you these statements are no less truth. Mr. Chas. Saulnier, Cornerville, N.S., says: "I was very much run down and so weak I could hardly work. It seemed as though my blood was little better than water. I tried several medicines but I got nothing to help me until I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It was simply astonishing how quickly these pills began to help me and how much new life and vigor they put into me. I am a cook by profession, and the two years I was ill—the last of the fifteen men last winter is the best I have had since I have made me as sound as ever I was."

There is no mystery about the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have to put new life and strength into you. They actually make new blood and that is why they cure all blood and nerve troubles, indigestion, liver and kidney troubles, headaches and backaches and the secret ailments of women. They make the blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills feed and steady the nerves, which sit at the root of nervousness, cure St. Vitus' dance, fits, neuralgia, relaxation and partial paralysis. All these diseases spring from blood and disordered nerves and they have always been cured positively and permanently by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, or by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Nova Scotia conservatives.

Halifax, N.S., March 2.—At a convention of Conservatives here yesterday of Nova Scotia, held last night for organization, it was decided to divide the province into districts of which Halifax will form one. An executive will be named for each district, with John F. Stairs as President, and a vigorous campaign will be waged.

Sir Richard May Succeed.

London, March 2.—(C.A.P.)—The Daily Chronicle, referring to the rumor that Sir Richard Cartwright is to succeed Lord Strathcona, says that the former is a dashing old fellow, a man of culture and a friend of the late W. E. Gladstone.

New Provincial Treasurer.

Winnipeg, March 2.—John H. Agnew, member of the Legislature for Virden, was sworn in last night as Provincial Treasurer, succeeding the late Hon. John A. Davidson.

Regrets Retirement.

London, March 2.—(C. A. P.)—The press of the whole country regrets regret at the retirement of Sir William Vernon Harcourt.

Dead Aged 131.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 2.—Noah Hadge died yesterday in the Piscataway Poor House, which he had been an inmate for the last forty years. If he had lived until April 1 next, according to his own statement, he would have been 132 years old.

German Steel Trust.

Berlin, March 2.—After long and tedious negotiations the German Steel Syndicate has finally been organized, among twenty-six of the largest concerns in the country.

Gives 2 Years.

London, March 2.—James Watson was sentenced to five years in Kingston Penitentiary yesterday morning by Magistrate Lowe for the burglary in which Steve Doyle was killed.

1 Year For Stealing a Horse.

St. Thomas, March 2.—Elmer Schram of Dunboyne, was given one year in jail for horse stealing yesterday.

KEEP EYES ON FAR EAST

Premier Balfour's Advice to the House of Commons.

General Situation Abroad Alone Can Justify Magnitude of British Naval Estimates—Britain's Acts Are Defensive—What Coal Is Contraband—The Japanese Reply to Russia's Charge That she Violates Treaty of Nations.

London, March 1—In the course of a discussion of the naval estimates in the House of Commons last night, Premier Balfour, while admitting the magnitude of the estimates, said the House should not only consider the amount, but should watch the general European and Asiatic situation, which alone could justify what the country was asked to expend. The country should not lose sight of the possibility of war between Great Britain and two great maritime powers, which could hardly end without great loss on the part of both the enemies and Great Britain, in which event the other navies would be intact, and in a dangerous position which they did not now hold.

Balfour Not a Firebrand.

Continuing, Mr. Balfour said he was reluctant to mention the possibility of war. He did not think such a disastrous contingency was one which they at present had any reason to apprehend. But, when talking of the last, they must, almost, be talking of the possibility of war, and he was afraid when delineating the general outlines of the reasons which compelled the Government to ask for this sacrifice to indirect responsibilities which did not exist twenty-five years ago, he was doing the best possible comparison between the dependence Great Britain placed on her navy, which was defensive, and the dependence placed by America or any European country on their navies, which were offensive.

Great Britain's policy had been to see what other nations were doing in the way of laying down ships, and to immediately make a reply. So long as the Admiralty was careful not to anticipate or force other countries on, but simply to follow suit in insuring that other countries did not outstrip Great Britain in the race for naval supremacy, Mr. Balfour believed the country would support him in the expenditure.

John Redmond (Irish Nationalist leader), speaking in the same debate, said that the small contribution of the colonies to the expenses of the Navy was a mockery of Imperialism. Ireland's contribution should be the same as that of Australia, on account of her having no overseas trade.

The vote for the effective of the navy was then agreed to.

When Coal Is Contraband.

London, March 2.—Messrs. Pawley, Thomas & Co. of Cardiff, having written to the Marquis of Lansdowne, asking whether, in view of the hostilities between Japan and Russia, coal can be declared, have received Monday the following reply from the Foreign office:

"I am to state generally that coal is an article which, inquits usus, not per se, contraband of war, but if destined for warlike, as opposed to industrial use, it may become contraband. Whether in any particular case coal is or is not contraband of war is a matter prima facie for the determination of the prize courts of the captor's nationality, and so long as such decision, when given, does not conflict with well-established principles and rules of international law, His Majesty's Government will not be prepared to take exception thereto. I am to add that His Majesty's Government are not at present aware that any declaration on the subject has been made by either of the belligerents."

JAPAN DENIES CHARGES.

Says She Did Not Violate Law of Nations in Making War Prior to Making a Declaration.

Washington, March 2.—The Japanese Minister last night gave out his Government's reply to Russia's charge that Japan had treacherously obtained a victory by a sudden attack, and by not issuing a declaration of war had been guilty of a flagrant breach of international law. The reply says:

"The answer to these charges may be found in the action of Russia. That her Government never entertained any sincere desire for peace can be clearly seen from its own conduct, which is then reviewed at great length. The reply continues:

"On Feb. 6, Japan announced to Russia her determination to terminate the pending negotiations, and to take such independent action as she might deem best to defend her position, menaced by Russia, and to protect her established rights and legitimate interests.

"The term 'independent action' naturally included the opening of hostilities. The fact that Russia was unable to withstand, or was not fully light is, of course, no reason why Japan should be charged with guilt for the misinterpretation made by Russia. It is the almost unanimous opinion of international jurists that a declaration of war is not an indispensable prerequisite to the opening of hostilities. Indeed, it has been the common practice in recent years to declare war after hostilities have been begun. Japan's action, therefore, is not open to the least criticism in this regard. From the standpoint of international law, it must be acknowledged that the charge made against her does not come with good grace from Russia, inasmuch as there are not only many historical instances of Russia herself resorting to hostilities without declaring war, but one case, that of her invasion of Finland in 1808, when she began war before there had even been a rupture of diplomatic relations."

Found "Not Guilty" Twice.

Brockville, March 3.—The Spring Assizes were formally opened yesterday, Justice Street presiding. The first case was that of King v. Drake, the charge being shooting with intent to kill. Drake is a one-armed man, who comes from Cardinal, Ont. On May 24 last Drake and another man named Monette got into a row in a boarding house at that place, which ended by Drake drawing a revolver and firing at Monette. The latter also drew a revolver, and the pair exchanged several shots, both being wounded in the fracas. Drake's defence was self-defence. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty. The next case was King v. Monette, the charge being the same, shooting with intent to kill. He also was found not guilty by the jury.

MILE AND A QUARTER RAILWAY BLOWN UP

Japs Injure Siberian Line Between Harbin and Vladivostock.

MUKDEN POINTS FORTIFIED

Reports Received at a Focus Between Russians and Japanese Bandits—Russians Seize Telegraph Offices North of Pingyang—Main Force of Russian Main Defenses Is at Liao Yang—Japanese Troops Mass in Vicinity of Vladivostock to Attack Hunchun, Manchuria.

London, March 3.—A mile and a quarter of the Siberian Railway, according to the Tokio reports, has been destroyed in the Ninguta district between Vladivostock and Harbin.

The Tientsin correspondent of The Standard cables that the Russians are strongly fortifying points south of Mukden. Thousands of coolies, who are working day and night on the ramparts and entrenchments of Haicheng, are compelled to labor without pay.

Japs Marching on Vladivostock.

Shanghai, March 3.—The Japanese force that landed at Possiet Bay on Feb. 26 has penetrated inland and is reported to have gained possession of the telegraph line between Vladivostock and Harbin. A strong patrol, moving rapidly towards the latter point, has destroyed the railroad near Harbin. The main body is believed to be marching on Vladivostock, acting in co-operation with the fleet reported to be hovering around the northern fortress. News of the complete investment of Vladivostock by sea and land is expected within the next few days.

Many Killed and Wounded.

Yinkow, near Newchwang, Manchuria, March 3.—Many Japanese are actively engaged throughout the district around Newchwang in fomenting raids on the Russian posts along the line of the Manchurian Railroad. The country swarms with bandits and scarcely a day passes without a determined attack on some one or other of the numerous Russian outposts. An unsuccessful attack was made on the Russian telegraph office at Kuan Tien Tsu, 30 miles north of Newchwang, on Tuesday night. The attacking party was driven off by the Russian guard, but not before the telegraph instruments had been destroyed.

Russians Seize Telegraph Offices.

Tokio, March 3.—It has been learned that the Russians have occupied the telegraph offices of Anju and Yongpyon, north of Pingyang. They have imprisoned the District Governor and have confiscated official papers. The Russian force near Anju number only about forty men. The main Russian force is concentrated at Lioayang, a station on the Manchuria railroad nearly midway between Newchwang and Mukden. The Russians near Antung aggregate 2,000. No important engagement is expected south of the Yalu River, which it is believed the Russians will make their main line of defence.

Hovering About Vladivostock.

St. Petersburg, March 3.—A despatch from Vladivostock, dated yesterday, says that according to private reports there three Japanese detachments of 800 men each, recently landed at Chunghan, Corea, about 130 miles north of Wonsan (Gensen), with the supposed object of reaching the valley of the Tumen River and threatening Hunchun, Manchuria (nine miles north of the Corean boundary and near Vladivostock). A fleet of ten Japanese warships has recently sighted on the horizon off Vladivostock. They were believed to be reserve vessels, not powerful enough to blockade Valdivostock, the stronger the Russian first-class cruisers whose base is that port.

6,000 Japs at Pingyang.

St. Petersburg, March 3.—An official despatch from Major-General Pflug, Viceroy Alexieff's chief of staff, dated March 2, says: "According to the reports of our patrols to Pingyang and on the road to Gensai, (Wonsan) there are no signs of the enemy. Pingyang has been occupied by 6,000 Japanese, who include 200 cavalrymen. No particulars have been obtained concerning artillery. It has been learned that the Japanese bring troops by sea from Fusan."

Chinese Signalled Japs.

St. Petersburg, March 3.—According to a special despatch from Port Arthur twenty Chinese have been arrested here for signalling to the Japanese ships from the shore with flashlights and lanterns. A warning has been issued that similar offenders will hereafter be treated as spies and shot.

No Port Arthur Fallen.

London, March 3.—A rumor was circulated in the lobby of the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that Port Arthur had fallen. The origin of the rumor could not be traced and no confirmation whatever was obtainable.

8,000 British Troops For Malta.

London, March 3.—Orders were issued yesterday to despatch 2,000 troops to reinforce the British garrison at Malta. It is believed that this movement is made to facilitate the reinforcement of the stations in China later, should necessity arise.

3 Cossacks Chase 7 Japs.

St. Petersburg, March 3.—In a despatch to the Czar, Viceroy Alexieff says:

"Admiral Stark, telegraphing from Port Arthur yesterday, March 2, says the enemy did not appear off Port Arthur on Feb. 28, Feb. 29 or March 1. Reconnaissances made by cruisers and torpedo boats within a radius of sixty miles from Port Arthur also failed to discover The enemy's vessels.

"Major-General Pflug, Viceroy Alexieff's chief of staff, sends in the following telegram, dated March 2:

"According to additional information which has reached me, our patrols having passed the night twelve versts (eight miles) from Pingyang, approached that town on the morning of Feb. 29. They met a strong opposing Japanese patrol of seven officers. Lt. Arnshakel attacked this patrol with three Cossacks, forcing it to retreat at a gallop towards the gates of the town.

"The presence of our patrols near the town caused much alarm, and soon the enemy's sharpshooters manned the walls and the towers and opened fire, expecting an attack. According to the report our patrols approached within 200 paces of the paces of the town, which they found to be surrounded by both old and new ramparts. These, however, were not occupied by the enemy, and it is supposed that the Japanese have not more than 15,000 men in Pingyang."

Dies at Last March 13.

Tokio, March 3.—The Cabinet met and discussed war taxation measures in an extra session yesterday. It is now planned to increase by seventy million yen the amounts to be raised by taxation. The Emperor issued a rescript, countersigned by the Ministers of State, announcing the diet to meet in special session on March 13.

Smallpox Smites the Russians.

New York, March 2.—A cable to The World from St. Petersburg says: Reports received here from the troops along the route to Harbin show a disheartening condition of affairs. Fever is rife among the Russians. A smallpox epidemic is raging in East Siberia, and has spread among the regiments. Pneumonia and bronchitis are claiming many victims and already thousands of men have been rendered unfit for service by frost bite.

OFF FOR COREA.

Canadians Left Wednesday For Vancouver —Capt. Thacker With Others.

Ottawa, March 3.—Owing to the Grand Trunk system between Toronto and North Bay being blocked with snow, Sir William Nicholson, Director-General of the British Intelligence Department, and Lieut.-Col. Haldane, who are on their way to Corea, came around by way of Ottawa to take the C.P.R. for the coast. They called on Lord Minto and Lord Dundonald yesterday morning, and at 1.30 left for Vancouver, the general officer commanding being at the station to see them off. Capt. Thacker of the Royal Canadian Artillery, who has been detailed to watch the Japanese operations on behalf of Canada, arrived here yesterday, and was introduced to General Nicholson, on whose staff he will serve. Capt. Thacker was fortunate enough to secure a passage on the same steamer as General Nicholson and Lieut.-Col. Haldane, and left with them yesterday afternoon.

END OF AN OUTLAW.

Terror of Big Muddy River Shot By Sheriff.

Moose Jaw, March 3.—The fatal shooting of Outlaw Jones is very satisfactory to residents along the Big Muddy River. He was looked upon as one of the worst characters in that section, and had been a regular terror to everyone.

It is reported by Indians, who have returned from this section, that a sheriff called on Jones to arrest a man who was working for him for some offence. The sheriff started off with his prisoner, and several miles out he was overtaken by the Outlaw Jones, who had pursued them. Jones got a drop on the sheriff, ordering him to hold up his hands. He did so, and Jones then took the sheriff's horse, and, disarming him, sent him home on foot, Jones returning to his cabin with the man who had been arrested.

The sheriff returned with a posse of 25 men, and started searching for Jones. It was some time before he was located. He was taken by surprise and ordered to surrender. He immediately reached for his gun, but was fired on and shot through the body and head, instantly dying. His cabin contained all kinds of goods which it is thought had been stolen.

COST OF "THE LITTLE GAME OF WAR."

The statisticians are already at work estimating the cost to each nation engaged in the present war in the Far East, and the results obtained make interesting reading. M. Jules Roche, an eminent French authority, estimates

"That as long as the present war remains localized in Manchuria and Corea, Russia will be under a daily expense of about $1,700,000. Should the war spread, and thus necessitate the transportation and maintenance of troops at different points on the borders of the Russian Empire, the sum may be increased by fifty per cent. This huge outlay does not include the initial expenses of a campaign which in the first two months after hostilities break out will probably amount to an additional $150,000,000. In ordinary circumstances, Russia has the cheapest army in Europe; each soldier costing on an average about 16 cents a day. For obvious reasons the expense of the Manchurian army will be greater, so that the war with Japan will cost the Czar from a million and a half to a million and three-quarters of dollars per diem. In this comparison Japan shows to advantage. Her military organization is said to be so good that it has accomplish the most satisfactory results at a comparatively small cost. Estimating the entire numerical strength of her army at 400,000 men, Japan's daily expense, for both army and navy, will be about $750,000 or $1,000,000 a day. In the earlier phases of the campaign Japan's expenses, like those of Russia, will be much greater."

Nearly two millions per day is a large sum for Russia to spend, for she, of all the so-called "great powers," is the poorest and has the weakest credit, Mr. George Kennan, the famous traveller and writer, whose knowledge of Russia is extensive, in a recent article in the New York Outlook expressed the opinion that Russia was now collecting all the revenues from her citizens that it was possible to collect. And he gave his reasons for thinking so. He even quoted a recent speech of the Russian Finance Minister, in which the fact was admitted. Taking the above facts into consideration, it does not appear that Russia is in a position to carry on a long war. Her present debt is quite large, being given officially for 1901 as 6,384,000,000 roubles, the roubles being worth about 77 cents of our money. Since then her debt has kept on growing, and according to Mr. Kennan her people are actually becoming poorer, and her prospects of borrowing any large amount would not seem to be particularly bright.

People who have given deep study to the question think that if Japan can hold her own with Russia for one year, the financial necessities of the Czar's empire will compel a close of the war. And that the Japanese can do that, and more if necessary, there is now every reason to think. They have a navy superior to any that Russia can send to the Pacific, and they have an army of over 400,000 strong, well armed and commanded by trained officers. They are also near their base and have abundant means of transport. Under these circumstances nothing but a tremendous disaster should make it impossible for them to hold out even for one year, but for several. They may even be able to put Russia on the defensive on Manchuria and Siberia, in which case they would no doubt be joined by thousands of natives and Chinese. For the distrust of Russia is just as strong on the Chinese as on the Japanese.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Despatches are contradictory, of course, but it seems fairly safe to assume that Miss Port Arthur will not be coy and hold out so long as our own dear Lady Smith did.

A STRAIGHT TIP.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Mr. Whitney—Dear Sir: This afternoon your Japanese style of tactics in fighting the Ross Government does not appeal to the "inveterate partisans" who pile up the good old Tory vote on the elections. I took successions of this fair province. Right while you fight on the floor of the House and in other personal courtesies to the corridors.

It is not flattering to our friends across the line when they realize that many of the Russian ships which were put out of commission by the Japs are U. S. built, while the Japanese ships, most of which were built in Britain, have withstood all the shot that the Russians could throw at them. The Czar will know where to go to get his new navy built.

SHANNONVILLE.

It was with much surprise and sorrow that the report was heard that Miss Emma Leverton had passed away. She died on Friday, February 5th, and was buried on Tuesday, the 9th. The large congregation that assembled to pay their last respects was an evidence of the high esteem in which she was held in the community. The clergyman of Trinity Church, Shannonville, conducted the service and preached an appropriate sermon from the text "Be ye also ready." The solemn marches played by the organist were in good taste. Miss Leverton was the eldest daughter of Mr. John Leverton, one of the first concession of Tyendinaga.

WANTS HUSBAND TO TAKE SAMARIA BEFORE GOING TO THE YUKON.

Seattle, Wash.

Dear Sir,—Enclosed please find a money order for $3.00, for which send to my address your treatment for the cure of the drinking habit. My husband expects shortly to go to Alaska to run a steamer on the Yukon River all through the summer months, and I really think he ought to have this as soon as possible.

The friend who recommended this cure to me says he took it and it cured him of the drinking habit. Yours truly,

A REMARKABLE ECHO

WONDERFUL SOUND EFFECTS IN A NEW YORK MONUMENT.

The Famous Baptistery at Pisa Outdone by the Soldiers' Shaft on Riverside Drive, Where Sound Rolls About Like a Ball.

A big French motor car occupied by two men and two very pretty women whirred up Riverside drive late Sunday evening and at Ninetieth street drew up and stopped at the approach to the Soldiers and Sailors' monument. It was long past the hour when the crowd of fashionable promenaders leaves the drive as the party of four stepped out of the big, vibrating machine and climbed the steps to the monument.

One of the men was a millionaire well known in the financial district. The other was a great tenor. With them were the millionaire's wife and a woman known in half a dozen European capitals as one of the greatest operatic coaches living—a woman who is a constant attendant upon operatic stars and a sharer in no small degree in their musical triumphs.

If it had been made during a Sunday or a weekday afternoon, a crowd of fashionable folk would undoubtedly have had their curiosity piqued by the strange party. Of course such would mean a people. The whole affair was so brief and the scene which soon followed from the narrow entrance to the gilt-tenting white monument were so few that not any but a late midnight hour a crowd must have quickly filled the plaza around the marble shaft. A dozen persons were all unaware of incidents probably fell the visitors to choose the nighttime for their visit.

"The average American is a consummate ass," said the New Yorker as he guided the small party up the moonlit steps to the monument. "He travels to the utmost parts of the world, spends barrels of money and generally writes a book or two describing the marvelous things he sees when he gets outside right at home he could have seen sights of a similar kind which would have knocked the spots off the things on which he has wasted his patrimony and paragraphs of superlatives."

"But echoes, signor," replied the tenor as he grasped the Wall street man's arm, "echoes such as we have in the baptistery! Never—except in the old cathedrals of Italy!"

"That's just what Americans say," retorted the New York man. "They go into ecstatic raptures over European mediocrity without knowing that they live among the greatest collection of marvels in the world. Listen to this."

The party had reached the door leading to the interior of the monument. A solid cylindrical wall of marble and granite surrounded a slender room empty save for a half dozen dried wreaths lying on one corner of the stone floor. When the whole party had ormed its way into the monument, the Wall street man bade them be very still and with upturned face he oned a low note. An echo was heard which rivaled those marvelous reverberations which have drawn travelers to distant parts of the world and have been the subjects of brilliant descriptions in the daily press and between covers. The note seemed instantly transformed into a musical ball of sound, its journey to the distant stone ceiling could be distinctly traced. It seemed to be wafted upward like a ring of smoke or a cottony dandelion seed. The sound decreased until the note seemed to strike the small, high ceiling, where it lingered a moment before commencing its downward trip. Gradually increasing in loudness, it came back to the floor of the monument, apparently as loud and as intact as when it was uttered. The whole wonderful incident occupied only a few seconds, but every stage of the sound's trip to the top of the monument and back was as pronounced and as easily traced as though it had been a butterfly or a toy balloon.

"Magnificent!" exclaimed the tenor in tones of rapture and surprise. "I never dreamed such a marvelous echo existed outside the baptistery at Pisa."

His voice made a perfect riot of sound within the narrow shaft. Countless tones going and coming in rapid succession produced an effect almost painful upon the ears of the listeners.

At the request of one of the women the tenor sang very slowly and softly a few phrases of "La Donna e Mobile." The effect was peculiarly beautiful. Two men seemed to be singing, one a half beat behind the other. As in the Wall street man's experiment, each note could be heard distinctly soaring aloft to the ceiling and back again. The return of each note in its original vigor and fullness the effect of a second singer was produced. The union of the bell-like tones of the beautiful voice, the wonderful echo and the peculiar strangeness of the whole situation brought cries of delight from the two women.

"I believe it is as fine as the one in Pisa," said the woman who coaches prima donnas, "and to think that we never even heard of it before!"

"Peculiar fact," said the New Yorker, striking a match and illuminating the dark, cold interior. "New Yorkers never know anything about New York. You can't sit down in a hotel lobby or in a club and speak of echoes but a dozen men will commence to dilate on some reverberations they have heard in some backwoods German or Italian town. But none of them knows of anything remarkable in his own town, the greatest city on earth."

A DISRAELI EPISODE.

How the Statesman Took His Brandy Neat In the Commons.

I was stationed in London nearly two years during the seventies, when Disraeli was prime minister, and often heard him speak, frequently saw him upon Whitehall, walking home with Lord Russell by his side, once "interviewed" him and witnessed the solemnities of his elevation to an earldom. But the most characteristic and thoroughly Disraelian incident I recall has never been told.

About 1 o'clock in the morning, shortly after the return of the earl from Berlin bearing "peace with honor," I left the press gallery of the house to go to the cable office. Passing a stand in the lobby where a stoop shouldered woman was wont to sell spirits and "soft" drinks, I dropped into line with half a dozen men and waited my turn to be served. I paid no attention to the man directly in front of me except to note that he was hatless and to comment mentally upon the dangers of such conduct in that cold and drafty place.

"Sixpenny 'orth o' brandy, neat," said the broad shouldered little man directly ahead. The dame courteseed, an unusual attention to a customer, served the spirits, and the purchaser drained the glass at a gulp.

"Put it on the book," said the customer as he turned to the left and leaned on the counter. Then he turned, facing me, and made his way through the crowd toward the house of lords. The man was unnoticed in the badly lighted corridor, although his name was ringing throughout the civilized world, the Earl of Beaconsfield!

The lightning change scene of this episode was not that his lordship took a drink of brandy during a long night's session, but that he had an account with the woman tapkeeper and from behind the counter of a hall lighted over the northern end of Westminster palace to get his "brandy neat" at the familiar place.—Julius Chambers in Harper's Weekly.

WORKED BOTH WAYS.

Clever Manner in Which a Paris Counterfeiter Was Outwitted.

Honore Palmer once outwitted a counterfeiter in a clever way.

A lad of sixteen or thereabout at the time, Mr. Palmer was spending the winter in Paris with his mother. One cold night in February he stayed out unusually late, and desiring to get in without arousing the porter, rang up the concierge softly. The concierge, into restful slumbers, came downstairs. He whispered through the keyhole, "Is that you, Mr. Palmer?" and then he said pointedly:

"I can't let you in, sir."

"Why not?" asked the young man.

"Because the rules are very strict," said the concierge. "No one ever is in after midnight."

The boy desired ardently to enter. He thought a moment and then he pushed a gold louis under the door.

"I have just slipped a gold louis under the door for you, concierge," he whispered. "Now let me in; that's a good fellow."

The concierge instantly drew back the bolt. "Come in softly. Make no noise, monsieur," he said shamelessly.

But young Palmer already regretting the gold louis, his last one. A thought struck him, and he had no sooner thought it than he said:

"Oh, by the way, I left a book on the table outside. Do you mind getting it for me?"

With great politeness the concierge, in his turn, opened the door upon the cold stones. While he fumbled the boy pushed to the door and locked it.

"Let me in, monsieur," whispered the concierge, who had nothing on but a nightdress and white linen.

"I can't let you in. We let no one in after midnight, unless"—

But the young fellow had to go no further. The concierge, freezing in the cold, perceived he had been outwitted, and, in his turn, slipped the gold louis under the door. Pocketing it, the boy regained the man and then went quietly to bed.

The Art of Growing Young.

To retain the spirit of youth while age weakens the body is a splendid thing. There are those of whom we say "He never grows old." Their hair may be whitened, their faces wrinkled and their shoulders bent, but in heart they are young. If "their strength is labor and sorrow," there is special interest in the things that concern those of younger generations gives no indication of it. Their tendencies, their almost thoughts may be of the past, but they live in the present.

Self Made.

A Philadelphian, at an evening gathering recently, where he met a widow to whom he wished to be especially complimentary, said: "The fact is," said he during the after dinner conversation, "you women make fools of the men."

"Sometimes, perhaps," said the widow carelessly. "Sometimes we don't have to."

The Mean Thing.

"Phyllis is the meanest kind of a gossip."

"What makes you think so?"

"Because she never tells you anything herself, but gets you to tell her all you know."—London King.

Not a Compliment.

"He hasn't a very high opinion of your intelligence."

"How do you know?"

"I heard him refer to you once as an ideal juror."—Exchange.

If you be poor do not seem poor if you would avoid insult as well as suffering.—Goldsmith.

The Great Eastern Stock Company

"Disturbers" and distributors of Unerprice Merchandise WITHOUT RESERVE.

Will offer for sale this stock in small or large quantities. Life membership in the firm or stock company is yours. Price of membership will be "good citizenship," "attending all our bargain day sales and our annual dinner if convenient." No further dues or assessments, and no liabilities. Your further duties consist in living up to your ideal as nearly as possible, telling your friends of our location and reporting all backsliders, and in order that you keep posted we advise your calling daily, otherwise you should read our ads, every day for 99 years, but no longer as it costs lots of money to shuffle in these big "$250 UNJUST TAX" sales, but we are shuffling and have honed and ground our meat axe to a hair-splitting edge, and every department has caught the flash of the glittering blade and felt the sting of its razor edge.

The mills and factories of this proud land of ours have made contracts with the Great Eastern Stock Company as distributors to dispose of all remnants and mill ends, and through their contracts we are able to place before you Merchandise at prices that ordinarily would seem impossible, and through this combination we can and do make you prices on standard Merchandise that if other firms would attempt to equal would mean commercial suicide for them.

And we bid you welcome to come and see the big sale and the unlimited lines. Stacks and counters full of bright, new fresh Merchandise, this great sale will make history for the Great Eastern Stock Company and write their name high upon the mercantile scroll of fame, not only in Belleville but in adjoining counties.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

While the Orchestra Plays.

"I do wish the woman back of me would stop kicking my chair," sighed a woman at the theater the other evening. "Ever since the overture began she has been keeping time with her feet, and besides all that she is fanning the back of my neck and trying to hum a tune she doesn't know. Isn't it strange how some people act when there's any music about? Now, just look at that little woman in the second row jumping all the fingers of one hand against her forehead. She's unconscious of it too. And there's another woman over there in the box who seems to think she is leading the orchestra with her fan. The men are just as bad too. Just look around and see the number of men who are keeping time with their heads, their hands or their feet. Then there is always some creature who makes a nuisance of himself by whistling through his teeth all the time the orchestra is playing. Even you, my dear"—this to her husband—"are keeping time with your programme while I'm lecturing about other people's misconduct."

Moon Worship in Britain.

Lunar superstitions lingered until a late period in the British islands. A writer of the seventeenth century says: "In Yorkshire, etc., northward, some country people doe worship the new moon on their bare knees, kneeling on an earthfast stone. And the people of Kent, in the highlands of Scotland, doe worship the new moon." Speaking of the Irish, he continues, "Whether or no they worship the moon I know not, but when they first see her after the change they commonly bow the knee and say the Lord's Prayer and neer the wane address themselves to her with a loud voice after this manner, 'Leave us as well as thou foundest.'"

Sylvester O'Halloran, the Irish historian, remarks that the corresponding customs of the Phœnicians and Irish, adds: "Their deities were the same. They both adored Bel (or the sun), the moon and the stars. The house of Rimmon, which the Phœnicians worshiped in (like our temples of Flechta de Meath), were sacred to the moon."

The Modesty of Brahma.

At an interesting dinner party given by Joachim, at which were present also his friends, Professor Dorn of Naples and Von Hernogenberg, the composer, an amusingly characteristic scene occured. Joachim in a few well chosen words was asking us not to lose the opportunity of drinking the health of the greatest composer, when before he could say the name Brahms bounded to his feet, glass in hand, and called out: "Quite right! Here's Mozart's health!" and walked round, clinking glasses with us all. His old hatred of personal eulogy was never more prettily expressed.—Leisure Hour.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Did you ever see the clouds so leaky at this time of year?

The snowbanks were not so much this morning.

Of course we like to see the snow go down, but not from a roof on top of people's heads.

The great problem for the next couple of weeks will be how to keep your feet dry.

How would it do to get out an injunction against the weather man, to keep him from sending us any more rain?

Midland and Peterboro may have to switch to ping-pong.

Though the shell game or three card monte would suit the Petes best, perhaps.

Providing, of course, they were allowed to do the manipulation.

This "donner and blitzen" business is getting a little too frequent. Thunder and lightning three times this week so far must presage something. Will it be great European war, the smashing of the O.H.A. or the "fixing" of the old g.s.b.c.?

The cisterns are full and now it's up to the cellars. Soon they won't keep us waiting long if this kind of weather keeps on.

However, the coal bins are empty enough to make things balance. Mark these early autumn adjusts matters in this world?

And all this is spoiled sometimes when foolish man, trying to assist nature, gets full himself.

There was less pneumonia in February than in January. Let us hope there will be less in March than in either.

Mr. Hugh Clarke, M.P.P. for Centre Hruce, has taken steps to put an end to the take-off practice, which for some time has been a scandal to Ontario politics. It is to be hoped that Mr. Clarke's efforts will be seconded by the men of both parties.

Mr. Barlow Cumberland accuses Goldwin Smith of making statements which show "either ignorance or but intentional evil." Hard words, but the Sage of the Grange doesn't mind them. He's been meeting accusations of that kind for over half a century.

The report that all Japanese horses are unserviceable probably comes through U.S. source. The Yankees would like to get the Japs to buy their mules.

What do the judges do with all the white gloves they receive from the Sheriff of this law-abiding County of Hastings?

A weather prophet stakes his reputation on the assertion that we will have no more below zero weather this winter. His name is withheld for reasons of prudence. People are in no mood to be trifled with.

Good shipping cattle sold at about 4½c per lb.; ordinary medimes at 3½c to 4c per lb., and inferior cattle at 3c per lb. There were a number of milkmen's stock cows offered for sale, which sold at prices ranging from 40c per lb. The calves were mostly young veals, which sold at from $2.25 to $4.50 each. A lot of 15 sheep were sold at Point St. Charles for $60. A lot of 15 sheep, averaging 144 lbs., were sold at 3½c per lb. Lambs sold at about 4½c per lb. Good lots of fat hogs sold at about 5½c per lb.

ONTARIO'S PRIDE.

Magnificent Pile in Queen's Park, Toronto, Narrowly Escapes D struction.

Toronto, March 3.—The magnificent pile in Queen's Park, the pride of the Ontario Legislature, had the narrowest possible escape from destruction early this morning, as a result of the heavy thunderstorm which broke over the city shortly after midnight.

A blaze of fire leaped up the wires running from the telegraph station at the east corner of the great rotunda and ascended to the second storey. It is believed lightning was responsible for the blaze. The fire flew up out and everything inside was in an hour. Smoke penetrated to the chamber, but no harm has been done to the rich decorations. The sum of $500 will probably cover the actual damage sustained.

Great Britain's Answer to Thibet.

Paris, March 3.—The Liberte yesterday published a despatch from St. Petersburg, saying that the British Ambassador, Sir Charles Scott, had transmitted to Foreign Minister Lamsdorff the answer of Great Britain to the Russian protest against Colonel Younghusband's expedition to Thibet, with the further announcement that Great Britain had bound herself not to menace the independence of Thibet, and that Russia had given a like assurance.

Eye Strain and Civilization

In a lecture recently delivered on the above subject before the Cleveland Academy of Medicine, Dr. M. Gould, B.M., M.D., he says, on the point of "Dangers of Eyestrain": "Without the least doubt, and weighing well what I say, I am sure that no discovery of modern medicine, except vaccination and the germ theory, is of so great importance as that of eye strain. Directly and indirectly it is the cause of more suffering than all the organic diseases combined. Most of all the headache in the world, and of sick headache, is absolutely due to that cause. A very large part of the neurasthenia, and of the hysteria also springs from it; and of 'biliousness,' 'nervousness' etc., it is one of the most active of all causes. And if all the modern professors of a general lowering of vitality none is more frequent and persistant than eyestrain." We make a specialty of these obscure cases. No charge for consultation.—

BY CARLTON DAWE.

once more he smiled, but i naa a misgiving as to the correct reading of that smile. If Kung was the father of evil, I verily believed that Koon-Si was his own son.

And so for some little time we watched each other in silence. Silence seemed a peculiarity of these people, and under such conditions it was really nothing less than a species of torture rendered still more oppressive. It gave one time to think when thought was least welcome. But eventually Kung waved his hand, and one of the attendants immediately disappeared. Shortly after the patter of bare feet was heard, and presently two men, leading a third between them, entered the chamber, and my heart gave a great thump. Was it Jim?

His head was enveloped in a cloth of some description, but as soon as he was fastened in a collar like mine the cloth was removed, and it was Jim's face; but, oh, so dreadfully pale and emaciated. He blinked at the light for a little while, and then his gaze went slowly round the room. As his eyes met mine his face brightened up, and he exclaimed, for all the world as sincerely and earnestly as if we had been alive:

"Still alive, my boy! Thank God!"

"Why do you thank God?" said Kung in excellent English, for as the only occupant of the chair proved in very truth to be. "What has he done for you?"

It was a very pertinent question and one which it was not easy to answer offhandedly with any degree of conviction, but Jim replied somewhat dogmatically. "Because we are still alive!"

"Truly that is something—a small matter, but something. Tell me to who am I indebted for the honor of this visit? How is it I find your exalted excellency thus condescending to honor with your illustrious presence my contemptible abode?"

"Who do you that asks?" said Jim.

"I am known by many names in many provinces," replied the coolly, with a curious smile, "but I have reason to believe that Kung is the best known of them all."

"So you are Kung?"

"You seem to know the name."

"I know only good of it."

"And yet you take all the trouble to come from England for my sake?

I can see except to pay me a visit. Strange people, you English. So good and confiding! It is a real pleasure to deal with you. My estimable friend,"—and here he nodded toward the decapenter, "has amused me greatly with a relation of your meeting and your travels. Your cause, I believe, will be charitable intention of killing Kung! Well, let me congratulate you on the excellent chance you have of accomplishing your work."

He smiled most affably, and Koon-Si, taking his cue from his master, smiled decorously.

"I admit," said Jim calmly, "that we have lost both time and, but the game is not finished yet."

Kung smiled. "For you I think it is. I never yet knew a man win a game once that collar was round his throat.

My heart gave a great thump. Was it Jim?

It handicaps him dreadfully. But no doubt, since you are so venturesome, you are a man who has been accustomed to giving long odds. I fear, though, that you are overmatched this time. My good friend Lovell," here he nodded once more toward the carpenter, "however, depicts you as a resolute fellow. Believe me, I cordially welcome such, especially when they prove, as you have proved, to be the possessors of no ordinary intelligence."

Jim passed this taunt. He was in no position to handy words with Kung, and he held the privileged post of master of the situation. But his eyes went toward the carpenter, and I saw the first real shade of anger darken his face.

"Who is that dog?" he said.

Kung smiled again, an oily, effusive smile that was sickeningly exasperating. Koon-Si heard the remark and took a step forward, but with a wave of his hand Kung restrained him.

"A very excellent fellow, and one who has served me with a devotion beyond all praise. His illustrious father is Loo-Hi, and his revered father was Chi-Li of patriotic memory. For certain reasons, which I will explain to you on occasion, the name of Koon-Si, a very excellent carpenter who, indeed, has done much work for me recently, a fate which overtakes so many people who will not listen to the dictates of reason. It therefore became necessary to fill his place, for he had been a man of some consequence in his day, and as unfortunately the lamented carpenter had an uncommon left nostril I was forced to slit the lamented gentleman's nose. But be bore it bravely. It was all for the good of the cause. And now, having explained so much, I should really like to know who you are and what debt it is you owe for your kindness, and exact such heavy payment?"

"My name is Carter," said Jim.

"And mine Gray."

"Carter—Gray," repeated Kung, hovering on the sibilants fearfully and wonderous. I have many very dear English friends," this with a particularly sinister smile, "but I don't seem to recollect either name. Are you sure that you remember rightly, that terrors has not dimmed your intellect?"

"Quite sure."

"Nevertheless it is very strange. At a rule, I know my guests, either personally or by reputation, and I usually have them with open arms. I have the reputation of a warm embrace, and, as you know, mean a man to sustain a reputation that is in any way singular he constantly strives to live up to it. However, I am pleased to be in the least fallen short of that hospitality. Koon-Si, you will see that refreshments, I shall strive manfully to atone for it later, on. There is some one coming! Ah, yes, the good Wu with his personality ye unknown to me. He will repair any little omissions of mine." He rose as he spoke, and suddenly and again. "Oh, by the way, it is some little time since the carpenter and I learned of his ancestors! May I ask who you, have told you of him?"

"None one," said Jim, "who remembers that Kung is mortal like the rest of us."

"Aye, to be sure. Only with this difference, Kung is well served. Still, it matters not. At the present I speak of soob be here. Once I know for certain who my guests are, trust me to treat them as they deserve."

He rose again, and this time the heavy curtains fell before him. Then the lights were extinguished, a pattering of feet followed, and Jim and I stood alone in the darkness.

"You are there, Jim?"

"Yes, Ied."

Then there was a silence between us for many minutes, and I peered eagerly through the darkness, hoping to catch a glimpse of him, but the gloom was too profound, only the occasional rattling of his chains, the moving from foot to foot and the hard breathing coming to tell me that I was not alone. Jim, poor lad, darkly thought and bitter regret were mine, and I knew enough of Jim fully to appreciate his state of mind. We had played and lost, and I, now more fatalistic than ever, could only hope that he would not have done other. It was easy now to see the madness of it, and with implicitly to the carpenter, yet not to trust would have rendered all our efforts futile. Who would have believed the man was leagued with the society? By my father's direction we had sought out Koon-Si, and his welcome was such as to raise in us hopes of success. He had testified all we have led to expect, even to his physical mutilation, and although we might have been more cefcumspect, I failed to see now the end could have been altered.

Presently Jim's voice reached me out of the gloom.

"Can you sit at all?"

"No."

"Come with me. Forgive me, Davie!"

"Dear Jim."

"Lad, this is terrible. Pray God the end may be swift."

A low moan came from the far corner of the chamber, and mingling with it, as it were, was the voice of Kung.

"Fear not. The end shall be very swift."

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE WRITING OF KUNG.

For a long time neither of us spoke, for we feared that some one might be listening, and pride forbade a display either of fear or of regret. We had staked, and we had lost, and now the end was come. But deeply mortifying was the thought that we had walked so easily into the trap. Before setting out we had duly calculated the chances of success and defeat, and even with the latter staring us full in the face we had resolved to go under fighting. But to be gooped, chained in this manner, without a chance hope of escape or fight, plunged us into the utmost depths of despondency. It was our own fault. Well, does that knowledge make misfortune any easier to bear?

With a refinement of cruelty thoroughly Chinese we were so tired up that it was impossible to move the head either way for more than a foot or two without experiencing a bite of the merciless collar. To sit down, to kneel, to rest ever so slightly, was utterly out of the question, and, as I have said, I knew that if my strength failed me and I fainted or otherwise sank down I should suffer from a most horrible death from strangulation.

What was the intention of our enemies of course we knew not, but after enduring for some hours the agony of this most torturing position I was overcome with a light and making direct for Jim unfastened his chain and led me to the wall, on which he laid one end for a dog.

"I don't know what this means, lad," he said, "but if it's the end, goodby. You forgive me?"

"There is nothing to forgive."

"Much—much," he muttered brokenly. And then as they dragged him through the door I heard him gasp a last "God bless you."

Then I was alone once more with my thoughts, and the gloom seemed to have taken to itself a gloomier hue, while the awful stillness grew more profound. The presence of Jim, even though I could not see him, had something of warmth and consolation. I could speak, I could hear him speak, and, though the latter had had to say precious little of the softness of death, it was good to hear the sound of a voice I loved.

For a full hour or more they left me thus alone, and gradually my brain was beginning to reason my limbs to refuse the task allotted them of supporting me. Visions of strangulation and the sharp writhing of iron teeth into soft flesh began to haunt me, when of a sudden the same two coolies who had dragged Jim off entered the chamber. Without speaking to me or to each other one of the men cut the bonds which held my arms, while the other loosened the collar chain, thus enabling me to collapse upon the floor. Then they placed water and food within my reach and without a word departed as silently as they had come.

For the first few minutes a joyous satisfaction was mine, for I had fully believed that the intention of Kung was to have me stand there until my legs absolutely refused longer to fulfill their functions, when strangulation would of necessity ensue. But this was not to be, though my momentary joy was almost immediately clouded by a darker misgiving. If Kung spared now, it was but to prolong the torture.

Once the circulation had returned to my arms, the pain of which was in itself acute agony, I, having carefully marked in my mind the exact position of the food and water, stretched out my hand to them, and, though I knew not if either was poisoned, I cared but little. If so, an end would be made of me once and for all. But this was not Kung's way. The water and the food, the food palatable, and, having eaten and drunk, I felt inconceivably refreshed.

What happened then I know not; but, wearied out, I must have fallen asleep, and for aught I knew I may have slept for hours. However, out of that sleep I was suddenly awakened by the sound of a gong, and when I looked up I was astonished to see the chamber in a flare of light and the multilipped Kung seated in his chair of authority, supported by the diabolical Koon-Si and two other men.

Presently the door opened through which I had last seen them drag my uncle, and, to my inexpressible relief, I saw Jim led to within a few feet of me, looking pale and emaciated, his blue eyes shining with a sad sort of light, but when he saw me a glad look brightened his face. However, he did not speak, and I had nothing to say. I was sunk in a state bordering on infinite satisfaction. But we understood each other, Jim and I. We were still alive.

He was quickly trieed up to his old position against the wall, and then Kung rose immediately after there entered through the same door a man bearing a burning brazier, which he placed between Kung and me and turned the irons with a malicious amusement, stared at the glowing coals spellbound, horrified. Was the wretch going to torture us in this manner, and so be smiled. Without a doubt he read my thoughts.

Then a long and painful silence followed, broken only by an occasional low crackle of the fire. At last Kung, the horror of whose presence was intensified by the extraordinary silence they invariably maintained and by the secrecy of their movements. But presently Kung spoke.

"I presume you have seen the writing of Kung?" he said.

Seen it! Heaven, but it had come between me and my sleep for many years! Now I was to feel it upon my forehead.

"It is written in many ways," he continued suavely, "though we always use the ideographic form for illustrious society, of which I am the unworthy chief. If you look you will see it on the wall behind you. It is a mark we sometimes place upon the dishonored dead after we have taken their head as a token of our work. It is a very interesting operation. I promise that you shall take part in it." He turned suddenly to the carpenter with an easiness which in some indefinable way proclaimed that he could do and seemed content.

"Koon-Si, you hear? I answered, and at our obstinacy he smiled more darkly still, while at the same time the corners of his mouth curled with unmistakable scorn.

"Mr. Carter and Mr. Gray," he said, mocking our names and titles, but, your movements are not. You arrived from Australia by the steamer Ballarat, and have your residence at the Hongkong hotel. From there you went to Shanghai, where the worthy carpenter who crossed our path and is no more. But being unable to discover his whereabouts, which is a matter much wiser men, you called in the aid of one Ah Yon, who quickly enabled you to find Koon-Si. Strange, is it not? And yet not strange. Ah Yon, being a member of the secret society, and you rendered it comparatively easy for the one to play into the hands of the other. You sent out to match yourselves against me, you were not thoroughly equipped for the encounter."

For the first time I was almost conscious of a feeling of contempt for Kung. Surely we had been trapped. Of course Ah Yon was worthy to rank with the best of his countrymen, but he had liked him and had treated him with the utmost consideration and attention. Indeed I had almost grown to fancy that he in turn had conceived something of the same feeling for myself and Jim. Of these yellow men, they were horrible beyond all imagining.

"Ah Yon," continued Kung, "has been an invaluable aid to our organization, but unfortunately his fatal fondness for those feelings have at last brought him under my displeasure. Weaknesses of this description must be checked."

He nodded, and some one ran to the door and presently Ah Yon was conducted between two guards, a prisoner he somewhat was. He had been stripped, his dress disarranged, and his face, especially when he saw the brazier in the middle of the floor, took on the look of a look of the most abject terror.

"This man," said Kung, "worked well to begin with, but he was not proof against kindness, and it is our intention to make examples of those with our weakness. Gratitude is a commendable quality and one with which we are much in sympathy, but when that loyalty to the cause is the first principle of existence. This man has not been loyal, and he must be punished."

"In what has he offended?" asked Jim.

"We believe it is through no fault of his own," said Kung, "that you were to make our acquaintance under these most auspicious circumstances. It is through no fault of his own that you and Koon-Si was enabled to carry out our wishes. It is believed that an more than one occasion he sought to warn you. That is a crime for which he must be punished. We do not usually view with indifference the presence of a traitor in the camp."

Then he spoke to Ah Yon in Chinese. His face changed from grave amiability to that of intense malevolence, and he harangued the unhappy Yon with a volubleness which was positively terrible. Yon replied in a quavering, pitiful tone, denying his guilt, but the judge was implacable as death and remained deaf ear to the appeals for mercy. With a sign he beckoned to the men who had entered Yon into the chamber, who immediately seized the latter and flung him forward on the face. The terrified shriek that escaped the unhappy man resounded throughout the chamber.

"You shall see now," said the fend, turning to us, "how the writing of Kung is made."

Ah Yon still continued to shriek for mercy, struggling and raging like a wild beast in the hands of his captors, but with arms bound he was entirely in their power, and with but little trouble they stripped off his jacket and shirt, and then, while one pinned his shoulders to the ground, a second knelt on his legs, while a third withdrew a redhot iron from the brazier. At the sight of the fatal instrument of his society, for such it was, wrought in iron in the form of a dragon, and despite the treatment to which he had been subjected his voice was clear and firm.

"Why do you call?" he said. "You recognize that the game is up. We played the fool and must pay for our folly. I were not afraid to die, but hither. We are not afraid to go hence."

Bravely spoken, my brave Chinese chief. It is inexpressibly pleasing to know that our guests are men of such undaunted courage. I would I had met you earlier."

"It is not my fault," said Jim. "If you remember, I asked you to do so, but your courage was only equal to murdering women and old men."

Ah Yon's face was not an actor. Why should he be? He could not have hoped to succeed so easily.

"Have you wrong me somewhat and do not rightly consider all the circumstances. Why are you here? You do not answer. I will tell you. To kill Kung and me. Why? Because, forsooth, you are agreeing your sister (her husband met their death. It is very natural. I have no doubt in the slightest degree. My father was befriended to death, and I pursued the murderer. What is natural to one is unnatural to another."

The calmness of this man, the calmness of them all, was amazing. It was very odd to think that this individual, with his pale robe, who condescended to argue so politely with his enemy, was the same man who murdered my uncle and walked up our garden path that awful day at Windsor, who had died with a smile on his face which all always be a part of me. Wooching, the implacable yellow man, the murderer of my uncle, so many dreams. I could scarcely realize, though standing in the face with him, that the polite little gentleman was the fiend who had wrought such horror to me and mine. He was a quite confounding study, and, strange as it may seem, his dreadful presence now awakened in me a strong sense of courtesy than of terror, even though I knew that death out of his eyes was staring me in the face.

As Jim did not answer Wooching turned to Ah Yon and smiled. And still it was impossible to realize that these two men, so quiet, so polite, should exist in such terrible surpassive Kung, with the thin, curling lips, the unsmiling eyes, the passive face, who could be the man who willed a crime in China and had it executed in a country two days' journey? There was no sign of power, nothing to impress one, as it were, and yet his sign was a sure as death itself.

I fear our illustrious guests realize this force of government," said Jim, "and by means make the best chief.

A HEALTHY OLD AGE

The Goal of Every Man's Ambition

THOUSANDS of human beings are suffering under the burden of a sickly, premature old age, because of diseased kidneys. These organs once diseased give us all sorts of the body's deadly slow-acting poison. The face loses its color, the eye its lustre, the brain its nimbleness, and the muscles their energy, and many of the most troublesome ailments take hold.

Bu-Ju cures all forms of kidney trouble, and brings back youth and vigor by routing out the evil. It is a never-failing cure for every form of kidney ailment. It cures rheumatism by eradicating the cause of rheumatism, kidney disorders. If you are suffering from any form of kidney trouble, commence taking Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, at once. You cannot afford to neglect the many symptoms that point to diseased kidneys.

Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont.

Gentlemen:—I had suffered almost continually for seven years from kidney trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills was unable to attend to my farm duties. Now Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, advertised and procured a box from my druggist. After taking the first few pills I felt much relieved and after taking half a box was able to do a full day's work. I know one box of Bu-Ju saved me $40 doctor bills, and think they are the finest pill made. I give this testimonial freely.
Yours very truly, JAMES ABBOTT.

For The Weak Men and Women

With back pains, rheumatism, nerve weakness, indigestion, constipation, liver, kidney or bladder troubles are all cured by nature's remedy, electricity properly applied. Don't mistake and think the Gilmour Electric Belt anything like other so called Electric Belts, which are charged by vinegar and water or acid. Our belt is charged by a battery which furnishes any current, mild or strong. When you purchase one we give you what you buy, Electricity. Every appliance guaranteed, no fake, we do business in a legitimate way. When you state your trouble, if we think our belt will not help you, we will not take your money. We don't say this cures everybody and everything, but simply tell the plain truth. Come and get a free treatment or write for book.

WASTED INDUSTRY.

A Mouse Task That Failed Because of a Lack of Ingenuity.

A number of white footed mice which I had in captivity, says a writer in Country Life in America, escaped from their cage to a cupboard in the kitchen, and thence through a hole in the plaster and between the laths to the walls of the house. Every night they came out for food. One evening I saw a mouse come out of the cupboard. He found a hickory nut on the floor and attempted to carry it up the wall twelve inches to the hole in the plaster, but, alas, the crack between the laths was too narrow, and after fumbling with the burden for a minute or two he dropped it to the floor. Next he tried to push it in ahead of him, and, failing in that, he went in himself, turned round and attempted to pull it in after him. Occasionally it would slip out of his paws and roll upon the kitchen floor, and then out he would come and repeat the whole performance. He tried it again and again, but with no better success. He kept at it until far into the night, and when I awoke at 7 o'clock the next morning the first thing that I heard was that mouse or another one fumbling and dropping the hickory nut.

Since then I have kept them well supplied with nuts, and, although they still spend hours in carrying them to the crack in the laths and letting them fall, they are always forced in the end to eat them in the cupboard. There is plainly a lack of ingenuity, because ten minutes' gnawing would have solved the problem. But the apertures in either case been too narrow to admit the nuts, and the mice have not quickly widened it with their teeth, but to apply the same principle to get the nut themselves seemed to be the cause of reasoning entirely beyond them.

HISTORY OF THE COACH.

The First of These Vehicles Was Built in 1457.

As popular as coaching is in some parts of the country, but little reliable information has ever appeared in the public press respecting its history and development. In the town of Kotze, in Hungary, in 1457, the first coach was constructed. This vehicle soon afterward presented to Louis VII. at Paris. The first authentic record of a stagecoach in England shows that six of these vehicles were in use there in 1022. So popular did they become in that country that a few years later they were in general use on all the principal roads of the kingdom.

Steam railways have to a large extent done away with the use of the coach as a link in commercial chain, but as a means of furnishing the highest type of recreation the coach and four is as popular today in the British empire and in France as it was when this was practically the only means of locomotion in those countries.

Stagecoaching in America was almost contemporaneous with settlement of the colonies, and in the early history of the country there were few if any important lines that did not put on and welcome the sound of the coachman's horn as one of the fascinating incidents of pioneer life. As civilization pushed itself westward the stagecoach was among the lead of those agencies which blazed its pathway. These vehicles, as well as their equipments, were comparatively crude in their construction and unpretentious in their appointments, but they admirably served the purpose for which they were intended and laid the foundation for the popularity of coaching as a pleasurable pastime developed in later years.

Coaching parties had been popular in England and France for several generations before they were introduced in this country, yet the sport is so wholesome and enjoyable that it cannot be doubted that in time it will become as popular here as it is across the Atlantic.

Zola and Dreyfus' Book.

The editor of a Paris paper, recalling what Zola had done for Dreyfus, called upon the novelist to have him review the unfortunate captain's book, the history of his misfortunes. Minister Zola hum at the big table in his library, doing his day's work. "Review Captain Dreyfus' book?" he repeated when the proposition was made to him. He got up and ambled round the table—a short man, with a stomach and no presence—grunting at intervals. Finally he said: "Why should I review his book? He never even read mine."

The Digger the Better.

A Scottish parish minister was one day talking to one of his parishioners, who ventured the opinion that ministers ought to be better paid.

"I am glad to hear you say that," said the minister. "I am pleased that you think so much of the clergy. And so you think we should have bigger stipends?"

"Aye," said the old man, "To see, we'd get a better class of men."

The Retort Unexpected.

"Yes," she said with sarcastic bitterness, "I believe it is true that a man is always thinking before proposing, but he pays he keeps."

"No doubt," he smilingly replied, "I remember that I kept company with you for fully four years."

The Criminal Escaped.

Jack—You've heard about the escaping criminal who stepped on a slot machine and got a weigh? Mack—Yes; that's old. Jack—Well, even the bloodhounds couldn't get his cent.

Keep on trimming your lamps, filling your soil, tugging and pegging away. You can never tell when the unexpected of success will come.

A MILLIONAIRE'S SYMPATHY

Refused Old Friend Loan of $5, but Started Him Anew In Life.

"A man whom I knew well, one who had once been a prosperous business man in St. Louis, but who had met reverses, walked into the office of one of our western millionaires and asked the loan of $5," said a Missouri excongressman.

"The man seeking the favor had been a close friend of the millionaire before he had become immensely rich. The unfortunate one went to the other in fear and trembling, demanding to be turned down, for he knew that the news of his taking to drink had reached the ears of his old friend.

"He was greeted with cordiality, however, and plucked up heart to ask for the money. Immediately the millionaire's demeanor changed. 'No,' said he, 'I can't let you have $5.'

"'I hardly expected you would,' replied the suppliant, 'but thought that maybe for our former friendship you might do me that little favor. However, it does not matter. When a man's luck deserts him he can get no assistance from any quarter,' and with an air of absolute dejection he turned to leave the office.

"'No, I won't give you what you want, but wait here a few minutes,' and the millionaire went into his private room and held a brief conversation with one of his employes. In a quarter of an hour the clerk returned and held out a big, fat envelope to the miserable being. The latter, hardly realizing that any one should send him a communication, broke the cover and inside found one brand new $100 bills and a railway ticket to St. Louis, with berth or parlor car. On seeing these and realizing that the man whom he supposed would not let him have $5 had been his benefactor, the recipient of this unexpected generosity broke down and cried like a child.

"There is not much more to the story except that with the money the man went to his old home and started up a small business, out of which he derives a comfortable living. The moral, if there is one, is that millionaires are often as sympathetic as ordinary mortals. This particular one I know to be the possessor of a big heart, and yet he has the best reasons for never talking about his acts of charity."

WAYS OF FAILURE.

The selfish mortal who never considers any one but himself.

The young man who always spends his money before he gets it.

The lazy person who dishonestly appropriates praise or commendation belonging to another.

The lazy young man who gets to the office late, leaves early, grumbles continually at the firm that employs him.

The lazy woman who shirks her tasks, whether as wife, mother or wage earner, and slips through life as easily as possible.

The lazy man who allows his faculties to rust, doing as little as possible, allowing ambition, energy and self respect to go up, literally and figuratively, in smoke.

The lazy young woman who arranges her hair, manicures her finger nails, gossips continually, but who has a languid and haughty interest in the wants of the customers.

Knew the Formula.

For Quanah, an intelligent and popular Comanche chief, the cattlemen around Fort Worth, Tex., built a house and furnished it. They were rather puzzled when he told them that the first article of furniture he wanted was a roller desk. "What can you do with a roller desk, Quanah?" they asked. "You can't write."

"Oh, I want 'em," said Quanah. "You see, I make deal, an' I sit down in my chair, an' I put my feet up on desk, an' I light my segar, an' I buf' newspaper up front of me, like this—ashe? Then white man come in, an' he knock at door, an' he say, 'Quanah, I wan' talk t' you a minute.' And I turn roun' in my chair an' puff lot of smoke in his face, an' I say: 'Go 'way! I vey busy t'day!'"

A Prime Minister's Mistake.

Lord John Russell, when British prime minister many years ago, had the acquaintance of the late Earl of Stair, then Lord Dalrymple, at a country house and was immensely taken with his amiable manners. "I am very pleased to make your acquaintance," he said, shaking him warmly by the hand. "You must come into the house of commons and support me there." "I have been doing that for the last ten years," was the quiet rejoinder.

The Lady Dentist.

I do not think I could reconcile myself to the ministrations of a lady dentist. The sensitive nerve of a tooth is, I should say, the job of all others that requires a masculine touch. There may be "the feminine," as Artemus Ward called them, who possess this qualification, but it will not be acquired by training. The lady dentist must be born, not made.—London Truth.

His Purpose.

"Bluffy told me he was going out every day this week to see if he couldn't find work."

"Yes, and he was successful."

"That so?"

"Yes. He couldn't find it."

Only Bad.

"What am I ever going to do with such a bad, bad boy?" sighed the fond mother.

"Oh, you leave me alone," replied the young hopeful. "I am not half as bad as I can be."

There is an Individuality

About our decorating that you will not find elsewhere

THERE IS originality in our decorating—we do not find it necessary to reproduce your drawing room in your neighbors home. We prefer to give each a change and we have the werewithal to produce that change.

HAVE Firstly the ideas, a most necessary adjunct to healthy art.

HAVE Secondly the materials, the correct papers, the correct mouldings, the styles the new things with which to work out a decorative scheme.

HAVE Thirdly The workmen—men experienced in there several branches of workmanship—skilled artisans and craftsmen who can follow mechanically and artistically the drawings and ideas of our decorator.

And there is no mistake about it we are doing today a far superior class of decorating than has before ever been done in Belleville and vicinity.

Just watch the interiors of the best ones in the city if you care to observe our decorative work.

(The case of Purdy vs. G.T.R. Company, an action to recover damages for the death of Miss Purdy, is also alleged that negligence on the part of the company caused her death, occupied the attention of the court yesterday and the greater portion of to-day. This morning was occupied in hearing the addresses of counsel, namely, Mr. J. R. Johnston, K.C., for the plaintiff, and Mr. W. B. Riddell, K.C., for the defendants. His Lordship summed up the case in an impartial manner. The case was given to the jury at 2.40 this afternoon.

The jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff, damages $500.

Smallpox in Mild Form.

It having been reported that there were some cases of smallpox in the adjoining village of Canifton, the matter has been thoroughly investigated by the local Medical Health Officer. There are six mild cases of the disease, confined in two houses, and everything possible is being done to check the disease. The two houses have been quarantined. The precaution has been taken will, in the opinion of the authorities, prevent any further spread of the disease. We have also been informed that both houses have been temporarily closed up.

OBITUARY.

SUSANNA LANE.

Mrs. Susanna Lane, widow of the late B. M. Lane, died yesterday at the residence of her son, Sylvester, who resides in Sidney township. The deceased was born and lived all her life in that township. She was in her 77th year. Although Mrs. Lane had been ailing for some time, her death was hastened by a severe fall she received two weeks ago. Deceased was a lady who had many friends. For upwards of half a century she had been a member of the Methodist Church, taking an active interest in church work. The remaining members of the family are two sons, Sylvester, who resides on the homestead, and Wilmot, who is a resident of this city.

Government Will Hereafter Secure Rights to Use Extracts.

Destruction of Orchards Under the San Jose Scale Act Discussed—A Good Thing For Hunters and Grafters—Premier Ross Says Sir Wilfrid Laurier Has Not Absolutely Refused a Dominion Subsidy to the Temiskaming Railway.

Toronto, March 3.—The Imperial Copyright Act, and the question of the selection of extracts for school readers were discussed in the Legislature yesterday, on a motion of Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, who asked the House to affirm the principle that the act should be so amended as to permit selections from an author to be used in the authorized Public School text books in any part of the Empire. The motion, after discussion, was withdrawn, the doctor being assured by the Premier that when the next series of readers is published the Government will have secured the right to publish the extracts at a reasonable figure before the publishers are asked to bid on the work.

Destruction of Orchards.

Mr. Lee moved for a return showing all payments under the San Jose Scale Act. He referred to the act passed in 1898 for the destruction of the scale, saying quite a number of farmers lost all their orchards, while other orchards, where the scale had got as far as trees saved through a change in the act. The Government had no right to destroy these orchards without giving reasonable compensation. It was a big destruction of business on the part of the Government, and it was in this that way. The San Jose Scale Inspector, Mr. Fisher, after two or three years, was able to find a mixture that would succeed in destroying the scale. It had been found that whale oil, lime and sulphur and several other mixtures were fatal scale. The destruction of trees had cost a lot of money, but it had succeeded in stamping out the scale in two different spots where infected trees had been recently planted. Under the present law infected nursery trees were destroyed without any compensation.

Good Thing For Hunters.

Dr. Jessop reminded the House he opposed the action of the Government in destroying the trees. After a lot of heckers had come down to tell the Minister of Agriculture how to destroy the scale, 100 boys were immediately started out. Ten much of the amount voted by the Government was eaten up by inspectors. He thought if legislation would destroy the scale it should not be necessary to destroy nursery trees. Nursery men should be compensated against loss. The doctor objected to the employment of inspectors, as the fruit growers of Lincoln were intelligent enough to spray the trees without instruction.

Mr. Lee said they were all fighting shy of the main question, which was the question of compensation. Before the destruction of trees was ordered there were reports of successful spraying in other places. He had sent a petition to the Premier on the subject, but in some way or other it was lost.

Mr. Ivy, said Mr. Whitney, He had asked the Premier to pay the farmers, but he said it cost too much money. The money did not belong to the Premier, but to the people of the province.

The order was granted.

Subsidy For Temiskaming.

Mr. Sutherland moved for a return of correspondence between the Government and the Dominion Government relating to applications for a subsidy to the Temiskaming Railway.

The Premier said there was no correspondence, but he had set out three interviews with Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the subject, and up to that moment had received no satisfactory reply. He would move a return containing all the Dominion Government on the question.

Colonel Matheson moved to have the papers re. the Sou payments referred to the Public Accounts Committee. The latter agreed to the. Col. Matheson also asked that the extension of the Temiskaming Railway be referred to the Railway Committee with power to take evidence upon oath respecting the location, construction and expenditure in connection with the railway.

The accounts will go to the public accounts on the suggestion of the Premier.

Mr. Gamey's Question.

In reply to Mr. Gamey, the Attorney-General replied that there were no general regulations on the question of permitting registrars to engage in business outside of their official duties, and the Government was not aware that Mr. Abrey, registrar East Huron, was acting as valuator for loan companies.

A number of bills were introduced.

Third Reading.

Bill to confirm a certain bylaw of the village of Ottawa East (Township) to confirm bylaw 271 of the city of Hamilton.

Electric Act Amended.

Mr. Powell's bill to amend the Election Act was taken up at the evening sitting. The object of the bill is to make special provision for taking the vote of railway employees on the day before the regular polling day.

The Attorney-General said the bill would give rise to much confusion, expense and dissatisfaction generally.

Mr. Whitney said it was well known that interference of the most direct kind was very often made with the liberty of railway employes. The plea of expense could not apply, the bill was of secondary importance in considering the question of giving any class of people the opportunity to vote. If the bill was defective an honest effort should be made to remedy the condition of affairs.

The Premier remarked that the great difficulty was in framing machinery that would be effective. Perhaps some simpler method could be devised.

The bill was declared lost on division.

Mr. McKay's bill respecting the inspection of steam boilers, and steam engines and machines, was read a second time.

To Punish Personators.

Mr. Macdiarmid moved the second reading of the bill to amend the election law by providing for punishment of election offenders and for the disqualification of persons who have been found guilty of offence from holding office as returning officers. The present act provides for the prosecution of personators in cities or towns only, and Mr. Macdiarmid wanted it to apply to rural municipalities as well.

The Attorney-General thought the Legal Committee might be able to evolve something from the bill, and the bill was referred.

A second reading was given a bill by Mr. Cameron (Lincoln) to amend the law respecting noxious weeds, and Mr. Brown's bill to amend the Ontario Factories Act, to permit a tenant to throw up a lease in provinces of the Dominion fails to make improvements required by the Inspector, was referred to the Attorney-General pointed out its bad features.

Mr. Smyth's (Algoma) bill, respecting voters' lists in unorganized territories was referred to committee.

A good deal of opposition was offered to Mr. Graham's bill, calling on engineers of stationary engines to pass a qualifying examination. It was pointed out that it would be a protection to life and property. The bill was referred to a special committee.

Other bills were read a second time as follows: Respecting the City of St. Catharines (Jessop); respecting the City of London (Ellber); to consolidate the debt of the Village of Sterling (Carey); respecting the Canadian Casualty and Boiler Insurance Company (Graham); to incorporate the Brantford and Erie Railway Company (Litle); respecting the Shedden Railway (Ermatinger); Amherstburg Railway (Auld).

The Speaker's dinner takes place to-night, and there will be no session of the House.

Beauty on Next Sugar.

Hugh Blain, Toronto; J. W. Garland, T. E. Bradburn, Dunnville; R. A. Gordon, Wallaceburg, and C. E. Hagenberg, Berlin, represented the beet sugar industry, waited on Premier Ross and asked that the bounty on sugar be continued for the next three years.

The deputation representing the Huntsville and Lake of Bays Transportation Company, Sir Alex. C. Rankine Rose yesterday and asked for a subsidy for a mile of railway connecting Peninsula Lake and Lake of Bays.

CANADIAN MINING INSTITUTE.

Toronto, March 3.—The death of B. T. A. Bell, the secretary of the Canadian Mining Institute, cast a gloom over the opening of the annual meeting yesterday afternoon. Eugene Coste, M. E., the president, paid a tribute to the memory of the late secretary, and a resolution expressing the profound regret of the Institute and the deep sympathy of its members with Mrs. Bell and family, was passed on the motion of Treasurer Stevenson and Professor Miller. The report of the committee shows 435 members on the roll, a slight decrease on the previous year, explained by removals. The meeting will next year be removed to Ottawa. An index of authors and subjects of the proceedings of the Institute from 1891 had been prepared by the late secretary, and was circulated at the meeting. In the students' competition the cash of $25 was given to Mr. Ellis, of Kingright for a paper on the "Geology of the Eastern Part of the Madoc-Marmora Hills Anticline." Norman W. Parke in the mining section received the same amount for a paper on "Rock Drilling and Blasting." The receipts for the year were $6,001.30, and the disbursements $4,831.63.

Mr. Coste urged the establishment of a thoroughly organized Geological Survey and Mining Department at Ottawa, under a Minister of the interior or of mining. The branches which this department would embrace were stated to be administrative, geological survey, mineralogical and botanical, geographical and topographical, mining, metallurgical, ceramic, engineering, statistical, economic and commercial. Assistant Director Ells read a number of technical papers were read and the meeting adjourned till this morning.

SKYSCRAPER COLLAPSE

Structure Was Swarming With Workers When Frame Fell.

Fourteen Persons Were Killed, Ten Are Missing and a Score of Others Are Badly Injured—Criminal Carelessness Is Chargeable to Somebody, as Repeated "Violations" Had Been Filed Against the Building.

New York, March 3.—Fourteen persons were killed, about a score injured, and eight or ten, all of whom are believed to be dead, are missing, through the collapse yesterday afternoon of the steel skeleton of the Hotel Darlington, a thirteen story apartment in course of erection at 57 West Forty-Sixth street.

The steel framework had been erected as far as the eleventh floor, and the structure was swarming with iron workers, masons and laborers, when, without an instant's warning, the upper floor sagged and collapsed and the whole structure fell with a crash that was heard for blocks, and which shook all the buildings in the vicinity.

A portion of steel frame fell upon the rear of the Hotel Parkhurst, on West Forty-Seventh street, crashing in the wall of the dining-room, and killing Mrs. Ella Lacey Storrs, the wife of Frank Storrs, a wealthy resident of Rye, West Chester County, as she was sitting at luncheon with her son, Lacey Storrs, Miss Savage, Mrs. Savage escaped injury.

The cause of the disaster was the overloading of the floors.

Foreman James Halpin, in charge of the iron workers, stated that there was a large quantity of cement and other building material on the fifth floor, and that on the ninth floor were eighty-three beams, which were to have been used in constructing the remaining floors of the building.

Apparently criminal carelessness is chargeable to somebody, as the new building department had placed repeated "violations" against the building. The last one being filed yesterday, because "the side walls were more than one foot above the balance of the front walls, and the floor beams were not properly bolted and tied."

Jumped to His Death.

Leamington, March 3.—Well about 11 o'clock Tuesday night John Walker, an inmate of the Home for Incurable, committed suicide by jumping from the top balcony, a distance of forty feet, striking upon the pavement, his head on the frozen ground, causing almost instant death.

Mistake Caused Death.

London, March 3.—Mrs. Lucy Ann Edwards of this city took oxalic acid in mistake for salts, and died within ten minutes.

COST OF NAVY DEFENCE.

Colonies Shirk Their Part According to British Statesmen—Devlin Asks "What Has Navy Done For Canada?"

London, March 3.—(C.A.P.)—The debate in the House of Commons on the navy estimates brought out an interesting discussion on the matter of colonial contributions to the navy. Sir James C. Colomb, M.P., for Yarmouth, (Conservative), raised the question of the absence of any substantial contributions by the colonies to the cost of naval defence. He pointed out that the revenue of Australia actually exceeded the revenue of Japan, yet Japan was able to maintain a fairly competent to dispose of the navy of Japan, whereas Australia paid only a small fraction of the cost of the British Navy, which protected the Australian defence. There was also danger that this country, and consequently all the colonies, should imagine that the Empire of the sea demanded any very great outlay of personnel. Reserve men were of supreme importance to the army, but the navy reserve was less important because naval warfare itself created its reserve.

T. Gibson Bowles, M.P., (Conservative), thought it would be a bad time before England got any substantial contribution from the colonies toward the navy. The whole of the colonies at present subscribed only a paltry sum of £1,200,000, and we could not expect anything from them, as in the case of India.

Charles Devlin (Nationalist), M. P. for Galway, said Canada had not asked for one penny piece to the maintenance of the navy. He thought the navy does not know that she should be obliged to contribute. The object of the navy was to defend the commerce of the United Kingdom, and whatever trade was done between Britain and Canada was carried in English vessels. Canada came to the aid of England in her hour of trouble and now Canada was treated with absolute scorn.

Lost in the Steerage.

London, March 3.—The steamer Lake Manitoba Tuesday sailed for Canada with over a thousand steerage passengers, 700 of whom were continental emigrants, Italians, Austrians, Hungarians, Russians and Galatians. The balance include one hundred young men who are emigrating under the auspices of the Canadian Farmers' Help Society.

What's in the Wind?

Washington, March 3.—General Hernandez, the Venezuelan Minister to this country, has been informed that President Castro desires him to return home for a conference "upon certain matters which it is easier to talk about than to write about."

Killed Sixty of Them.

Winnipeg, March 3.—Smallpox among the western Indians has killed sixty of them.

Carried Big Insurance.

Ottawa, March 3.—The late B. T. A. Bell carried $30,000 life insurance.

AN OKLAHOMA HORROR.

Fire Sweeps 3,000 Square Miles of Prairie —Five Are Dead, and Hundreds Are Now Homeless.

Lawton, Okla., March 6.—Reports indicate that five persons have been burned to death and 3,000 square miles of territory on the Kiowa and Comanche Counties swept by prairie fires. Hundreds of people are homeless, and it is impossible to estimate accurately the financial loss. A. W. Crawford, Mrs. Henderson and two daughters, living near Lawton, were seriously burned, one of the daughters probably fatal. More fatalities are expected, as reports from some districts are meagre.

At Hobart, the county seat of Kiowa County, the fire approached from the east, destroying several stables, fifteen residences, two business houses and various small buildings. Spreading to the southwest, the fire swept 75,000 acres of Government military and timber reserve and Indian school reserve, destroying several Indian houses and 40 head of Government cattle.

Spreading westward, the flames covered miles of the homestead district, destroying houses, barns and stock. It was in this district that five persons are reported to have perished. In this district Dock and John Harmon, brothers, and a man named Fisher perished. Two others, women, also were killed.

Late at night the fire began moving southward towards this city. At midnight 7,000 people of the city were battling with the approaching flames. The advance line of the fire was fully two miles in length. A thousand men turned their efforts to checking the fire at the grass borders. Water from every source, carried in every conceivable way, was distributed along the line. This served the purpose of checking the advance lines of fire, but was of little avail in hindering the continual rolling of fire brands into the streets of the city.

In more than 100 places flames arose from dwellings, barns and outbuildings. Wherever a blaze grew men were put to quench it with water. As a result of the cool judgment of the fire fighters the city's loss was only $10,000. Families left out on the prairies throughout the freezing night until the storm had passed with thin clothes on. Hundreds of people are destitute and suffering intensely from the cold.

LANDED IN COREA THREE JAP ARMIES

60,000 of the Mikado's Troops at Wonsan 15,000 at Chinampo.

Land Battle Expected at the End of March—Eye-Witnesses of Naval Battle at Port Arthur Tell of Alleged Jap Losses—Quite a Loss to Japan if the Zero Do Tree—Russian Troops Are Badly Equipped.

London, March 4.—The general idea among correspondents in the Far East appears to be that no important land battle is expected before the end of March.

A despatch to The Daily Express from Chemulpo, dated March 3, says that 15,000 Japanese troops have landed at Chinampo and gone to Pingang.

A Harbin correspondent of The Daily Chronicle gives a rumor that 60,000 Japanese have landed at Wonsan.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Telegraph asserts that three separate Japanese armies have landed in Corea, and the Paris edition of The New York Herald publishes a report from Che Foo to the effect that six Japanese cruisers, escorting 10 transports, have been seen steaming in the direction of the Gulf of Liaotung.

Nothing in any of these reports is improbable, but it is evident that Japan is maintaining strict secrecy as to her plans.

Japan Controls the Sea.

Under date of March 3 a Che Foo correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says that, although Japan has lost a small cruiser and the machinery of two of her warships have been damaged, these probably have been fully repaired, and in any event Japan has complete command of the sea and will resume her naval movements, the landing of Japanese troops at the best strategic positions and the occupation of territory near Port Dalny as soon as the winter moderates. He predicts that having crossed the Yalu River the Japanese will threaten Kirin, cutting the railroads and menacing Vladivostock, while a second force under the Liaoyang divisions.

According to the Che Foo correspondent of The Morning Post, a Japanese battleship has run aground near Chemulpo.

Russians Badly Equipped.

"Refugees from Port Arthur," the Nagasaki correspondent of The Times cables, "believe that there were 80,000 troops there the middle of February. They report that the 10,000 Russian troops who were despatched to Corea the beginning of February were so ill-equipped with transport and supplies that it was thought they would be compelled to return.

"They say also that the Russians treated the Japanese at Port Arthur so brutally that they fled to the seashore, embarked in small harbor boats and endeavored to reach Port Dalny. Several were drowned."

Jap Steamer Sunk.

Vladivostock, March 4.—It is reported here that a Japanese steamer, the name of which is not known, was sunk in the Sea of Japan, on Feb. 25, while on her way to Wonsan with a load of rice.

Eye-witnesses of the naval fight at Port Arthur have just arrived here. They declare that the losses of the Japanese up to Feb. 25 were greater than has been admitted in foreign newspapers.

In addition to five steamers sunk they say that five torpedo boat destroyers, one gunboat and two torpedo boats were put out of action, and several others so damaged that they will require extensive repairs.

Martial Law at Seoul.

Tokio, March 4.—Gen. Hegiye, the Japanese Commander at Seoul, Corea, with the consent of the Corean Government, has issued an order corresponding with the proclamation of martial law.

Russians Leave Yinkow.

Yinkow, March 4.—The Russo-Chinese Bank is closing, preparatory to removing to Mukden. Women and children are preparing to leave Yinkow in anticipation of the arrival of a Japanese fleet, which is expected when the river opens, probably a fortnight hence. The mainmast of the Russian gunboat Korietz was cut off; this would indicate that she is being dismantled, but otherwise she would appear to be clearing for action.

On account of the impossibility of defending the coast of Yinkow until such time as a thaw permits the construction of entrenchments and forts, the Russians have prepared to retire up the main railroad line. There are practically no defences here and although shifting and re-shifting of troops and artillery to the small forts at the mouth of the Liao River have the appearance of an intention to defend Yinkow, the military authorities depend upon an inland engagement to put a stop to the Japanese advance.

Compelling the Coreans.

Seoul, March 4.—The Russian forces at Anju are compelling the Coreans to supply them with rice, fodder and fuel. The Russians are fortifying Antung heavily with the apparent intention of preventing the Japanese from crossing the Yalu River.

On the Watch.

Berlin, March 4.—Advices from St. Petersburg yesterday say that new orders have been sent to Admiral Wirenius to keep his squadron in the Red Sea to watch passing war vessels and to capture vessels carrying contraband of war.

Rebellion is Reported.

Shanghai, March 4.—A despatch from Chungchow, the prefecture of Kaochow, China, announces that a rebellion has broken out against the Boxer indemnity tax. The Prefect's residence was looted Wednesday.

Russian Fleet's Chief Mission.

St. Petersburg, March 4.—The naval organ says the chief strategical mission of the Russian fleet at Port Arthur is to prevent the Japanese from landing an army in the Gulf of Liaotung, thus protecting the right flank and rear of the forces in Manchuria from the Japanese army.

Suez Canal Blocked.

Port Said, Egypt, March 4.—As a result of a collision here a Russian torpedo boat and an Egyptian steamer collided in the Suez Canal, the latter was sunk. The Russians saved the crew of the cutter. The canal is blocked for at least twenty-four hours.

Three of the four Russian torpedo boats, which returned here Wednesday after having sailed ostensibly for Algiers, were considerably weather-beaten. They were refused an opportunity to apply coal and ordered to leave port.

The Russian ships at Port Said and the Suez Canal repeatedly overstay their time limit, in spite of the protests of the Government.

Serf's Anniversary.

St. Petersburg, March 4.—For the first time since the emancipation of the serfs in 1861, the anniversary yesterday was officially observed throughout the Empire as a general holiday, and with special service in the churches. The newspapers declared the present celebrations may be regarded as a turning point in Russian history, marking the recognition of a wider freedom in national life. At the big Central Market of St. Petersburg, thousands stood in the open air, uncovered, joining in the chanting of a te Deum.

SENATE NOW LIBERAL.

Globe's Ottawa Correspondent Figures Out a Majority of 9.

Ottawa, March 4.—(Globe Special).—When the present four vacancies in the Senate have been filled the following will be the political standing of the parties in the Senate:

	Liberals.	Conservatives.
Ontario	13	11
Quebec	11	10
Nova Scotia	6	4
New Brunswick	7	3
Prince Ed. Island	2	2
Manitoba	2	2
British Columbia	1	2
Northwest Territories	0	1
Totals	42	36

This gives a Government majority of 9. There are two Senators to be appointed for the Northwest, which would increase the Ministerial strength to 47 and raise the majority to 11.

It is understood that Mr. Wm. Mitchell of Drummondville, in the Eastern Townships, will be appointed to the vacancy in the Senate caused by the late Senator Cochrane's death.

Nominations in Quebec.

Montreal, March 4.—This was nomination day in four counties where elections take the Quebec Legislature. will take place a week hence. In Shefford there is an interesting fight. Dr. A. Mathieu of Granby, a straight Liberal; A. E. Imbergo of Waterloo as independent Liberal, backed by the Conservatives and supporting the Parent Government, and P. Robert of Waterloo, as farmers' candidate, also a Liberal. In Maskinonge the candidates are J. L. Desaulniers, Liberal, and George Lafontaine, Conservative. The candidates in Berthier are Victor Allard, ex-M.P.P., Conservative, and Joseph Lafontaine, Liberal. While in Portneuf, Charles Deguise was nominated by the supporters of the Parent Government, and Louis Naud of the Opposition.

Tried to Break Jail.

London, March 4.—Harris, or "Texas" Burdel, the associate of Burglar Doyle, made a determined attempt to escape from the county jail Wednesday afternoon. He tore a piece of iron from a bench and used it in digging away bricks and was almost free when discovered.

NEW LIBERAL METHODS.

It is a significant fact nowadays that the most outspoken opponents of the Ross Government are not the out-and-out Conservative papers, but the papers which profess to lean to neither side, and whack evil-doers, of whatever stripe, with refreshing impartiality. One of the best and most ably edited of these independent papers is the Woodstock Express, which, in a recent issue, thus flagellates the Ross faction and their methods:

"There is something reminiscent of the South Oxford election trial in the somewhat startling disclosures of political methods revealed at Osgoods Hall recently in the course of a motion to dismiss the petition to unseat Mr. A. E. Dunlop, local member for North Renfrew. In support of the allegation by the Conservatives that the petitioners were induced by fraud to sign the petition, affidavits of the three petitioners were read by Mr. Helmuth. One petitioner swore that at the time of signing the petition he was partially intoxicated and unable to understand the nature of his act. Another swore that he could not read or write, and did not know what he was signing, and the third said that he lacked the proper qualification of a petitioner. The history of protest cases in Ontario teems with instances of this sort. Evidence is bought, taken or manufactured, false oaths are taken and perjury is considered a necessary attribute to the securing of a conviction. All this is frequently done in case of a candidate who has pursued a perfectly honorable course. Yet, because of the cupidity of political grafters and hangers-on, he has to stand by and witness the nefarious means that are being taken to color his character the same dark hue as his persecutors. It must have caused a blush to the shades of Donald Sutherland when he realized that he had been up against such opponents as J. R. Jackson, who is now enjoying the fruits of his work in South Oxford by drawing a good salary as trade commissioner in Leeds. From the loathsome details above, it would appear as if the South Oxford trial did not stand alone in the shady methods of its prosecution."

HOW POOR TOM SCOTT WAS BRUTALLY MURDERED.

STARTLING STORY TOLD BY AN EYE-WITNESS—BODY SHAME-FULLY USED.

We are requested to publish the following article, which was contributed to the Kingston Whig by Mr. J. N. Dingman a short time ago:

Sir,—If Tuesday's issue of the Whig appeared an article under the heading of "Secret Out," relative to the disposal of the remains of poor Tom Scott, so brutally murdered by the fanatic Riel, at Fort Garry in 1870. The secret, if such, may be news to the majority of the present generation and so far as it goes, is mainly true, but it has been no secret to me for the past thirty-three years and over.

I was paymaster-sergeant of the 1st Ontario Rifles that went out in 1870 under Col., now Lord Wolseley. Capt. J. F. H. Meade was paymaster. On our arrival at Fort Garry a room was allotted to us which as office in the main building of the fort, which Riel had occupied and so recently vacated in fact, the room was the one which Riel used as a bedroom. After getting settled, and owing to so many conflicting rumors, it was decided to get permission to dig up the box in which Scott was supposed to have been buried within the fort. This permission was no easy thing to get, the request being met with much opposition by the Hudson Bay officials, especially by the then acting governor of the company, John McTavish, Jr., and Lieut. Gov Archibald. This opposition to so reasonable a request, simply "fired" the men of the battalion to a determination to know the truth, with or without permission, and, if the remains were found "in the box, to give them a decent Christian burial.

The time was set, and the work would have been carried out, when permission was reluctantly granted on the understanding that Gov. Archibald should have a guard of two companies of the 1st Battalion placed in and about his house in case of an uprising.

Rev. Geo. Young, Methodist minister, was heart-and-hand with the boys because he realized that only success would never be obtained, and possibly disturbance of a very serious character ensued, if the men were not allowed to proceed in the way they wanted to. Accordingly the day was set, the two companies were detailed to guard the governor's house. Pick-axes, crowbars, sledges and shovels were procured, when Mr. Young stepped out and with his cane marked out a spot under which he said "he had no doubt we would find underneath the box in which Scott's body was placed, but he was afraid we would not find the body in it now."

The reverend gentleman made a short, impassioned address to the men, exhorting them to calmness and moderation no matter what the result of their search might be, and then said "boys, dig." You may well imagine the intense excitement that existed, as the digging went on. The sentries left their post, the two companies supposed to be guarding the Lieutenant-Governor's house left it to take care of itself and the Governor. Every man in and around the fort was as near to the spot where the boys were digging as they could possibly get, many a man was perched on the shoulders of comrades, and all were eager to have a hand in throwing out the dirt. I will venture to say that never was a hole of such dimensions, in such hard earth, made by man, ever dug so quickly. At last about six feet from the surface the top of the box was exposed with about one-quarter of the cover off.

The silence was most painful. For a full minute we all stood unnerved, when Rev. Mr. Young said, "Boys off with that cover and end once for all this horrible suspense."

No quicker said than done, only to find the box full of earth and shavings of some kind. It was carefully lifted out and moved to be a fruit tree box about five feet eight inches long. Blood could plainly be seen on the sides of one end of it, especially at the head, and the bullet hole made by the shooting by Sergeant Goulet, at the request of Scott, when he was crammed in the box in the southeast tower of the fort.

It will be remembered that Scott was not killed by the firing party outside the fort, but was carried in alive, shucked in this box, and, on coming to his senses, observed standing by Goulet, whom he asked "for God's sake to blow my brains out, and end my suffering." Goulet placed his revolver to Scott's right temple and fired, but the bullet merely glanced around the skull and went into the bottom of the box, thus adding to instead of lessening Scott's pain.

This information—with more to follow—I and Capt. Morrice got from a little half-caste servant girl in the service of John McTavish, the night before the box was dug up. She told us she had seen the whole tragedy from start to finish; being a little small waif, I suppose no notice was taken of her. The affair made her sick and when she thought she was going to die, told Mr. McTavish what she had seen. He told her she must not breathe it to a soul, or Riel would use her as he had Scott; now that Riel had run away and the soldiers were there, she was not so afraid, but begged us to never tell Mr. McTavish.

But the worst thing the child told us was this: They shot Scott, after lifting him from the coffin, from head to feet with chains, and shot and dragged him down to the Assiniboine river, near where the south end of the Broadway bridge strikes the shore. While they were cutting a hole in the ice, Riel went down and made them put more weights on, then they dumped the man into the hole, and he still alive.

If this is true, and I have no reason in the world to think it is not, was it not absolute sacrilege to allow that man Riel to remain on top of earth, to foment another rebellion, be elected to Parliament, and lastly put the country to thousands of dollars expense before they hanged him. To my mind the man should have been shot off hand the day Col. Wolseley entered the fort, and passed through with his detachment of regulars, and fired a salute in honor of taking the fort, while Riel, with Lieut. Lepine, sat on their horses over in St. Boniface, waving their hats at Tommy Atkins.

Of course the thing is all past and gone, and that country is one of the greatest on earth, but might it not have been much sooner accomplished had not so much leniency been shown, and the country put to millions of dollars expense, and the loss of many valuable lives.

He Had Money Before.

Colonel Tabor was traveling in New Mexico once, when he ran into a party consisting of Senator Tabor and his friends. It was only a few months after Tabor had "struck it rich." Prior to that event he had possessed scarcely enough to buy a postage stamp, but he was making up for lost time.

Carr had lost his watch key and began inquiring for one. Mr. Tabor thought this a great joke. "The idea of a man wanting a watch key in the nineteenth century!" he said. After chuckling over it for some time he turned to Carr and asked an explanation. "I want to understand it—a watch key! And a man as up to date as you?"

"Well, the fact is," responded the colonel, "I had enough money to buy a watch before stem winders came into fashion."

It was a center shot and was greeted by a roar from the entire car. Tabor got off by buying champagne for the crowd.

TOLEDO BLADES.

Those of Modern Make Not Comparable With the Ancient Ones.

Toledo blades are still made in the government weapon factory, but those of modern production do not compare with the ancient work. It seems to be a lost art. The genuine Toledo blades, made by the Moors, were so elastic and tough that they could be curled up like a watch spring. You can see them in the armory at Madrid, but only ordinary swords and bayonets for the army are made there today. The secret seems to have been forgotten. The steel came from England. It is the same as is used for ordinary purposes, and, as in Japan, where the art reached an equal degree of superiority, the difference in the product lay in the skill of the armorer and the process he used.

In the secondhand shops of Toledo and of the bric-a-brac dealers you can buy old swords for reasonable prices, but genuine ones, made before the sixteenth century, when the best were produced and the art began to decline, are very rare and are promptly picked up by connoisseurs whenever they are offered. The names of the old makers are as well known as those of the painters of great pictures, and a sword made by Nicholas or Diego or Don Islo or Correntes in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries is worth several times its weight in gold.

Each armorer of Toledo in ancient times, as in Japan, had his cipher, which is to be found on his blades, and there was as much rivalry among them as there is today among the opera singers. Julian del Rei, the most famous of the Moorish swordmakers, always cut the figure of a dog on the blades of his swords near the hilt, and Morrilo, who was also famous, used a wolf for his coat of arms. The swordmakers of Toledo had a guild for mutual protection, but they worked separately. Each had his own secrets for refining and tempering steel, which he concealed from his rivals, but transmitted to his children, who inherited the business.

Saved His Friend.

This little story is told of two Scotch laddies who, while fishing in strictly preserved water, for which only one was provided with a permit, were suddenly confronted by the bailiff. One of them quickly collected his tackle and ran his might across the field, the bailiff in quick pursuit. After covering a large tract of country the angler sat down completely exhausted and swalled the panting and enraged pursuer.

"Do you know that you should not fish in that water without permission?" asked the irate man.

"Yes," said the lad, "but I have permission. I've got an order."

"What made you run then, you young scoundrel?"

"Oh, just to let the other lad away—he hadn't got one."

First Comedian—No, you're wrong. It wasn't on either of us. It was on my wife. There wasn't any money in my pockets to begin with!

What Did He Want?

A certain professor is a very absent-minded man. He was busily engaged in solving some scientific problem. The servant hastily opened the door of his studio and announced a great family event.

"Eh?"

"It is a little boy."

"Little boy! Well, ask him what he wants."—London Standard.

CHIFFON VELVET.

The New and Supple Weave Which Has Become So Fashionable.

Chiffon velvet has almost entirely supplanted the ordinary make of this material, for it is so supple and so lustrous that even the best silk velvet looks cheap by its side.

At almost any smart function this winter chiffon velvet dresses prevail. They are made in elaborate tailor fashion and are worn with handsome stoles of fur and much beplumed toques.

The most fashionable color seems to be gun metal gray, and the luster of this is toned down in spots by masses of embroidery and deep gray and white fringe.

Next in popularity comes an odd, rather silvery shade of brown, which goes particularly well with sables or silver fox.

In one of New York's most fashionable tea rooms recently no fewer than eight beautiful costumes in chiffon velvet of this shade were to be seen.

There are also very smart gowns of black chiffon velvet trimmed with rich Irish lace and black chenille, but these are worn by older women.

The dressy tailor made may be of gray cloth or velvet, made with a bit of fringe or dyed lace and some pretty buttons. A white or gray lace waist may accompany this and a large gray and white plumed hat.

In millinery chiffon velvet is positively unequaled, for it is light in weight and lends itself to intricate manipulation.

The illustration shows a hat of this velvet in a fawn shade. It is trimmed with a brown and green wing.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SMART BOLEROS.

Changes in the Cut of Waists and Small Coats.

Three-quarter length cloth costumes are seen for general utility wear. For dressier occasions, however, the short bolero with the wide belt is to be preferred. This bolero is made in double and triple effects, and often the overhanging part is bordered with fringe.

The outline of the figure is lost in many of the new bodices, they are so befrilled. Berths effects, and especially deep ones, are very smart, especially for evening toilets. Fullness is not only seen in the front, but also in the back, where it is fulled in to a wide, tight waistband.

Silk fringe with a deep network is one of the most fashionable trimmings possible, and it is much used on crepe de chine and velling gowns.

The pouch front is less assertive than formerly, but it still remains in a modified form.

Blouses of heavy lace are made with a thin lining of chiffon and a wide folded belt.

Velvet blouses are prepared for wearing with coat and skirt costumes, and the pin spotted velvets are most attractive when lightly trimmed with a few motifs of lace or made with a small V shaped yoke and collar of lace. Ornaments of chenille and silk are freely used on bodices and blouses, and lace is decorated with disks of velvet or with stitched bands and borders.

Will offer for sale this stock in small or large quantities. Life membership in the firm or stock company is yours. Price of membership will be "good citizenship," "attending all our bargain day sales and our annual dinner if convenient." No further dues or assessments, and no liabilities. Your further duties consist in living up to your ideal as nearly as possible, telling your friends of our location and reporting all backsliders, and in order that you keep posted we advise your calling daily, otherwise you should read our ads, every day for 99 years, but no longer as it costs lots of money to shuffle in these big "$250 UNJUST TAX" sales, but we are shuffling and have honed and ground our meat axe to a hair-splitting edge, and every department has caught the flash of the glittering blade and felt the sting of its razor edge.

The mills and factories of this proud land of ours have made contracts with the Great Eastern Stock Company as distributors to dispose of all remnants and mill ends, and through their contracts we are able to place before you Merchandise at prices that ordinarily would seem impossible, and through this combination we can and do make you prices on standard Merchandise that if other firms would attempt to equal would mean commercial suicide for them.

And we bid you welcome to come and see the big sale and the unlimited lines. Stacks and counters full of bright, new fresh Merchandise, this great sale will make history for the Great Eastern Stock Company and write their name high upon the mercantile scroll of fame, not only in Belleville but in adjoining counties.

Mr. Deepe—I want you to sit right down and write to Mrs. Jenks inviting her to view the parade from our house.

Mrs. Deepe—I thought you said the route was almost sure to be changed, so that our house will be cut out?

Mr. Deepe—It will be changed, and the parade will pass her house then.

THE GREAT CONDOR.

It Is the Most Difficult Bird in the World to Trap.

Probably the great condor is the most difficult bird in the world to trap. One of the great vultures, it inhabits lofty peaks of the Andes, hardly accessible to man. It builds its nest among the topmost crags, often on a ledge of some precipice with an almost perpendicular drop of many hundred feet.

An extremely wary bird, it shares with its congeners the proverbial "eagle eye" and is thus able to see the smallest objects while yet unseen by man. Its wings have a spread of twelve feet, and, though its flight is heavy, it can sustain itself for long periods in the air.

To trap it one must ascend to its haunts and shoot some animal of considerable size. This is skinned, and a man lies down by the carcass under the skin and waits, perhaps for hours. Soon condors come flocking round until one settles on the skin, when the man below grips its legs, flings the skin over it and stabs it to death.

The strength of these birds is enormous, and the condor hunters often have their arms broken by strokes from their powerful wings.

The Offending Handkerchief.

It is in fact a grave sanitary question whether the handkerchief does not do more harm than good as it is ordinarily used. When we assume that the foul matter in the nose is trapped, we take a reasonably broad proposition as to the danger of the handkerchief as a disease propagator. Most nasal catarrhs are of an infectious character, notably those of grip origin.

Contrary to a general law of asepsis, the handkerchief saturated with disease germs; instead of being promptly washed, is stowed for hours in the pocket, with a result that can be easily imagined. Is it any wonder then that catarrh is constantly fostered by a system of auto infection?

Daily Intelligencer.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The backbone of winter still appears to be as firm as the average alderman's.

A Front St. merchant says that the last two weeks business has been the poorest of any he ever knew in Belleville. Bad roads did it.

However, our friends the "sturdy yeomen," as the politicians love to call them, will have more money to spend hye-and-hye. So it's a broad ill it's long.

The immense quantity of snow which fell this winter, it is said, will make vegetation unusually prolific next summer. So a man, after a hard struggle with the snow shovel this winter, can look forward to a still more strenuous time with his lawn mower next summer, and still we wonder at crime!

Our friend Mr. Wm. Johnson left for New York last night, en route to Jerusalem. The Tories man is pleased to state he has arranged for a series of wireless messages from Mr. Johnson, which will, we are sure, be read with interest.

"A Citizen" writes:

"Dear Sir.—As a property-owner and taxpayer, I would like to ask whose duty it is to see that the hydrants are kept in such a condition that in case of fire they can be used? In some parts of the city, were a fire to occur at night, it would require a brigade to locate the hydrants owing to the snow banks which surround them. This condition of affairs has existed since the severe storm of Sunday last."

One would think that the instinct of self-preservation would urge people to see that the hydrants are kept free from obstructions. Some citizens, however, like to throw all the expense they can on the Public Works department and then wonder where the money goes.

Lectures being just now, the order of the day, perhaps some talented orator might favor us with a discourse on "Microscopic Life of the Water Found in Belleville Cellars at Present," or something like that.

Gimpsey is the latest place to want a Richland regiment. Why can't Belleville have one? There are plenty of sturdy Scots in our midst, and Abd. Sinclair, with kilts on, would make Bonny Prince Charlie look like thirty bawbees.

PERMANENCE OF CURE.

THE CHIEF MERIT.

Many so called pill remedies will afford the user relief, temporary relief, and the paucity of sufferers do not expect more than that. Women especially, after having tried every preparation recommended for the cure of pilles have come to the conclusion that there is no cure except by an operation. And this is rightly viewed with dread, because of the shock to the delicate nervous system of women, and many of those afflicted, have resigned themselves to the situation with never a thought that there is any help in sight for them.

We invite the attention of all such to the experience of the lady whose address is given below.

"I feel it my duty to recommend the Pyramid Pile Cure, for after suffering ten years with the most distressing form of piles I am now entirely cured, thanks to this remedy. Anyone consulting this can write to Margaret Brady, 150 Whitman street, Cleveland, Ohio."

Then another lady also writes: "I am glad to say that I am still perfectly free from piles, and have not had the slightest trouble since I first used your remedy. I am now well known in Cleveland and have advertised Pyramid Pile Cure extensively here. I take pleasure in doing so as it saved me from an operation, which I always dreaded, and you are assured the remedy can have no firmer advocate than myself."

Testimony like this should convince the most skeptical that Pyramid Pile Cure not only cures, but cures to stay cured. It is in the form of a suppository; can be applied in the privacy of the home, directly to the parts affected, and does its work quickly and painlessly.

Druggists sell this famous remedy for 50c a package, and we advise all sufferers to buy a package now and give it a trial to-night. Accept no substitute.

Write Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., for a little book on the causes and cure of piles which is sent free for the asking.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900, By Paul R. Reynolds.

CHAPTER XXIX.

OF AH YON AND KUNG AND A PAGODA.

I almost shrieked aloud with joy. Why? A moment's reflection gave me pause. Truly it was Ah Yon, but for what purpose? He had been false to Kung once, and his punishment was such that he was little likely to offend again. Yet his unexpected advent, coming at the psychological moment, was answerable for my great revulsion of feeling.

"Yes, Ah Yon," said Jim, "we are here. What for you makee come?"

"Makee set free," replied the Chinaman excitedly. "No 'tave time to lose. In 10, 20 minute Kung Wooching, come, makee you die. Kung no 'tand you belong dead men. No can tell. Makee you die, makee tortures. Sometime kill. Kung no 'tare love for you. Wooching 'tevil clief also. My 'tave come makee help you."

"You think we have a chance?"

"No can tell. Perhaps. Suppose no 'tave got chance, my 'tave belong die. My t'ink 'tave chance suppose you belong blave men."

"Try us," said Jim.

As he spoke Yon kept hopping from one to the other, his hands still more reassuring excitedly to himself. Then he seized the brazier and, using it as a light, investigated the chains and found them comparatively slender. Then he selected the brazier and, using it as a hammer, began to pound away at the staple of each of the manacles. Sometimes he struck Jim's wrist, sometimes mine, sometimes his own, but he was not to be denied. Some time

AS TO NICKNAMES.

Given Often For Absurd Reasons, and Generally They Stick!

"Wonderful how names stick to a person," said the observant man. "There were two nice little women in our village who came on me one evening, and we offered them popcorn which the children had just brought in from the kitchen. They refused, but not so emphatically as to keep us from giving them two heaping plates of the corn. They kept crunching all the evening. That was enough to know about it that I called them 'The Popcorn Ladies,' and the name has stuck to them so that the whole village knows them by it.

"I once knew a man who called incessantly in a high pitched voice, and a bright girl dubbed him 'The Chirper.' The name was quickly passed around among the young people, and now the greater part of his friends know him by that name. A disgusted young woman of my acquaintance goes by the name of 'Whoof' to this day because when she was a little girl she used to call herself 'Mrs. Whoof' when she played grown-up ladies, and the family picked it up. She simply can't shake the absurd name.

"Mere than one red haired man is known by the name of 'Pink' and philosophically accepts the title. I have an acquaintance who holds a responsible position who is known by the name of 'Dotty.' I met a woman but one day a mischievous girl discovered that he had three prominent dimples. She promptly dubbed him 'Dotty' from that time on, and he is known to all his associates as 'Dotty.' Another man of my acquaintance is called 'Cockeyed' because he has such a white and thin skin that if he does not shave daily his beard makes him look unkempt. That name, too, came through a woman's quick wit.

"In a certain household a very feminine little woman is still called 'The Chinch Bug.' A spread was given, the girl she went through a serious illness which made it necessary to cut her hair off, and when she was able to be about she 'the boy' of the family, and the dainty lady is still called by that absurd name.

"An effeminate man was once called 'viola' by one of my friends, and he has got angry at first, he has cheerfully accepted the name and wears it.

"Our bookkeeper is always putting in his oar when it is not at all necessary, and I think now he will be known until the end of time as 'General Butts.' A friend of mine who is always called 'Chub' does not know what it means. He called that because his friends believe he has a cheerful disposition because they consider him a cheerful idiot. But, at any rate, he can't shake the name."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Beaconsfield's "Dodge."

An inquiring and aspiring person once asked Beaconsfield to tell him the secret of success. Beaconsfield, discuss the authorship of the 'Letters of Junius,' " was the reply.

Beaconsfield's biographer, Mr. Wilfrid Meynell, adds something positive to this witty negative rule for getting on in the world. Beaconsfield, as a member of parliament begged the Victorian statesman to tell his young son something to remember, something that would help to make him an agreeable and popular member of society.

Beaconsfield hedged. "Model yourself after your father," he said to the lad.

This was not altogether satisfactory, and the M. P. insisted upon a definite rule of conduct.

"Well, my boy," said Beaconsfield, "be amusing. Never tell unkind stories. Above all, never tell long ones."

A Large Fish.

An Englishman visiting Lake Tahoe asked a native if there was any good fishing in the lake.

"Oh, yes, stranger."

"What kind of fish do you catch here?"

"Oh, all kinds, stranger."

"What is the weight of the largest fish you ever caught?"

"Weal, stranger, we don't take weights and measures when we go a-fishing, and I am an honest man and wouldn't like to say how much that last trout I caught would weigh. But I tell you, stranger, that when I pulled that fish out of the water the lake went down a foot."—Birmingham Post.

Pessimistic View.

Sentimental Wife (reading from a novel)—"And, clasping the beautiful girl to his heart, the hero pressed his burning lips to her snowy brow."

Practical Husband—Yes, and I'll bet a dollar to a doughnut he'll be down with pneumonia in the next chapter.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Severely Practical.

"Don't you sometimes wish you could write your name on the sweat of fame?"

"I'm not worrying about that," answered Senator Sorghum. "The scroll of fame isn't the book that the bank cashier turns to when you want a check certified."—Washington Star.

Hold Out Your Chest.

Nowadays we are told, "Hold out your chest" and not "Throw back your shoulders." The shoulders will take care of themselves if the chest is held well up.—Maxwell's Talisman.

The Flue.

"Did Stitcher's house catch fire from a defective flue?"

"No; an effective one. He had it insured for twice its real value."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Don't contest a will if it is a woman's.—Lowell Citizen.

THEY LOVED CHILDREN.

Great Writers Who Won the Hearts of the Youngsters.

It is one of the most notable traits in many of our greatest writers, that they are as skilful in winning the hearts of little children as in captivating the minds of their parents.

Was there ever a great man who did not love children? If there was, we have never heard or read of him, his greatness by so much the less. Even Sam Johnson relaxed his grimness into smiles of pleasure when Boswell's baby daughter held out her arms to him and pulled his hair when he was not sufficiently attentive to her.

Byron, whose own child life had been so saddened and imbittered by a loveless mother, worshipped his little daughter Ada with all his passionate soul, and history has no sweeter picture than that of Scott delighting his child to sleep as he paced the floor with his "little burden of love" in his arms.

Lamb's great heart had many a warm corner for his child friends—all the heart, in fact, that his sister Mary did not fill—and when he took his daily walk through Edmonton it was the signal for all the little children to flock to him for a kiss, a kind word, or, better than all, to take his hands or coat tails and accompany him on his homeward way.

It is little wonder that Charles Dickens, "the great hearted one," was idolized by his little readers. His interest was a more entertaining companion or one who could better "make himself a child again" for children's delight. There are many staid men and women of today who remember with pleasure and regret the romps they used to have with "Boz" in the famous nursery at Gadshill.

Among great men of later days Mr. Lewis Carroll must be counted "king of the children's hearts." That jolly, tearly, lovable "mixture of a man," who was wedded to mathematics and to children, had few pleasures apart from one or the other. His study at Christchurch was a spread mystery, its corners and cupboards stuffed with toys and sweets and all that appeals to a child's heart, and here or on a river picnic, surrounded by swarms of his young friends, the mathematical professor was always a boy, as full of fun and as ripe for mischief as the youngest of the guests. May has ever been a sweet, this chief of children's loves!

Oliver Wendell Holmes, poet, antocrat of "autocrats of the breakfast table," of children and could "skip back several years" at a moment's notice into a child's bidding. Could anything be sweeter than the letter he wrote accompanying a birthday poem when he sent his little girl friends? "May those lips," he wrote, "speak what is pure and true; may those eyes see only what is good, and may those eyes always reflect a soul as beautiful as themselves."

Dodging a Lion Hunter.

The fondness that some people have for contact with notables is not always shared by the notables themselves. It is said of the late Baron Huddleston that he once tried to obtain a seat next to a duke at the table d'hote in a hotel where they were guests. That this proximity to the great man might be brought about the duke gave to the waiter a sovereign. The servant proved a traitor, and, an explanation being demanded, he confessed that the duke had given him two sovereigns not to give the baron the coveted seat.

Mexican Ruins.

Mexico has many ancient ruins, particularly in the states of Oaxaca, Chiapas, Yucatan and Morelos. Those of Mitla, in Oaxaca; Palenque, in Chiapas; Uxmal, in Yucatan, and Xochicalco, in Morelos, are the most famous and interesting. Some of them represent whole cities and are supposed to be from two to three thousand years old. They all show the most elaborate carvings, which closely resemble the Egyptian hieroglyphics.

It All Depends.

He—There is nothing that interests a woman so much as a man in love.

She—Oh, I don't know. Sometimes there is nothing so disinteresting. He—For instance? She—When he happens to be in love with some other woman.

Daily Guide.

When a man asks you how old you think he is, guess at least fifteen years younger than you are absolutely positive he can't help noticing, and you have gained a friend for life.

What Bothered Him.

Physician (to patient)—Now, don't you be dead yet. Patient—That's what bothers me. If I were dead, I shouldn't have to trouble myself about your bill.

The truest wisdom in general is a resolute determination.—Napoleon.

Kissing as an Assault.

For pitching his sweetheart's little boy in the street a Birmingham (England) man has been fined $10 or one month's hard labor for assault.

An Odd Legacy.

Among strange legacies may be classed that of a Vermont man, who left $500 to his cousin, on the income to be used in sweeping the snow off the church pavement and in strewing ashes and sawdust on the slippery places.

Cossacks.

The Cossacks are a peculiarly prominent feature in the Russian military organization. They give their military services for fifteen years in return for which they pay no taxes.

TWEED,

William Knight, an old resident of Tweed, died on Friday morning last after an illness of three years. The remains were taken to Belleville by C.P.R. on Saturday for interment.

Francis Trudeaux, a highly respected resident of Hungerford township, died suddenly on Sunday morning at his home in the 9th concession. He leaves a large family to mourn his loss. The funeral will be held on Tuesday at St. Edmond's Church, Tweed.

James Falconer has sold his premises on Front street to David Donderson.

W. J. Howell has sold the old post office building and lot to G. Lafountain. Handsome prizes are being secured for real estate here. Also for fuel.

There is not a vacant house in Tweed, and a great many watch every prospective vacancy.

The election on Sunday morning played havoc with some of the instruments in the electric light plant and as a consequence there was no light on Sunday evening.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Owing to the snow blockade, no Peterboro papers were received this week until last night. We learn from our northern contemporaries that the news of Belleville's disqualification and Peterboro's reinstatement in the running was received in Strattonville with a great deal of "pleased surprise." No doubt. With more accent on "pleased" than on "surprise." The surprise we do not waste any sympathy on Belleville. Quotations are made from The Intelligencer in regard the McMillan case, but both papers studiously refrain from quoting anything which would let their readers see that Belleville had any preference. Which would appear to indicate that both papers and club have an understanding and duly secretly agreed to "boost" Peterboro. Which would appear to indicate that both papers and club have an understanding and duly secretly agreed to "boost" Peterboro. Now the Ottawa papers are complaining of the Montreal Wanderers' rough play. What would have become of the Ottawa Hockey Club if not the Wanderers instead of Ottawa?

Kingston Whig: The Belleville hockey team has resumed practise, the town has every hopeful. But it will be of no use. Before the O.H. A. gives in to Belleville, it will declare the intermediate series adjourned sine die.

The Montreal Herald gives the following account of the recent Stanley cup match, which ought to have had the Russ-Jap war beaten in a walk:

"The first game between the Wanderers and the Ottawas for the custody in the Federal League of the Stanley Cup resulted in a win for the Montrealers in a draw of 5 goals each. The Stanley Cup is a valuable trophy, but it should be settled on a from competition altogether if it is going to result in such games as took the Arena saw last night. By no stretch of imagination could such a game be considered other than disgraceful. Three minutes after the blow of the whistle the referee had complete control of the men on the ice, and there never was a better exhibition of slugging such as the rink has never seen before. The referee seemed to be so afraid to play clean hockey. The give and take policy was in full force, and the referee appeared to go on the principle that one good deserved another. Thirty-six minutes were ruled off during the game, and if the referee had been competent ten more might have been added to the glorious record. The players seemed to make an effort to outdo themselves, and man after man dropped to the ice laid out by some well directed blow. The Ottawas, with two of their regular men still, succeeded in making up for the deficiency, while the Wanderers were almost equally to blame for the character of the work done. With deliciful frankness the management of both teams kewled out substitutes from the side to "take him off" "take him off" "take him off"

Washington, March 4.—Attorneys for the Protestants in the Senate investigation yesterday said they expected to prove that the defendant is associated with a hierarchy which practices polygamy and connives at violations of the law and that, his very vote as a Senator of the United States is subject to the wish and command of the Mormon Church. President Joseph Smith confessed that he himself had continued to cohabite with his plural family since the manifesto of 1890, and that he realized fully that he was violating State laws. President Smith also identified that Reed Smoot, had to get the consent of his associated apostles in the church before he could become a candidate for Senator.

The confession of President Smith was the sensation of the proceedings yesterday before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections. Mr. Smith said that the manifesto of 1890 had left him and others with plural families in the unfortunate situation of being compelled to defy the law or desert their families. For himself he had preferred to "take chances with the law," rather than to disgrace himself and degrade his family by abandoning his wives and the children they had borne him. He admitted that he had had children by all of his five wives since the manifesto, and said he had acknowledged them openly without interposing or distortance from the people of Utah, whom he characterized as liberal and broadminded. The defence will take the witness to-day.

Dreyfus's Appeal Begins.

Paris, March 4.—The Court of Cassation began its noon yesterday the consideration of the appeal of Alfred Dreyfus for a revision of a trial. The court was crowded. Former Col. Picquart was present. Dreyfus was not present, his intercath being in the hands of Lawyer Mornard. M. Bard, reporter of the court, read his report, in which he presented the two new facts upon which the Minister of Justice, M. Valle, recommended a revision of the case.

REASON FOR SIDETRACK

Preference Offer From Colonies Needs More Examination.

Lord Lansdowne Tells the House of Lords Why the Overture of Self-Governing Colonies in Part of the Government's Program Yet—Lord Rosebery Says the Offer Was Only a "Pious" Opinion.

London, March 4.—(C. A. P.)—The House of Lords spent two hours yesterday in the discussion of colonial preference. Lord Beauchamp raised the point of Mr. Chamberlain's allegation, that the self-governing colonies had made a definite substantial offer which Britain would be criminal, and it would be dangerous, to refuse. Not more important than the attitude of the colonial Premiers disclosed in the blue book referring to the conference of 1902 was the attitude of the colonial Parliaments since Mr. Chamberlain's Birmingham scheme. Canada's trade since the preference had increased 38 per cent., while her exports to Germany had increased in the same period 109 per cent.

The Duke of Marlborough, Under Secretary for the Colonies, replying for the Government, said that the colonies in general had not made any definite offer, but they in a practical manner incited us to enter into reciprocal relations by giving as a token of their goodwill a preferential treatment neither inconsiderable nor by any means valueless. He quoted from the resolutions passed at the Premiers' conference and at the Boards of Trade of Montreal, Toronto, London, St. John, and other cities. Preferences had already been granted by South Africa and New Zealand and there were preference leanings shown by Australia. Canada not speaking in favor of a colonial preference, but to show that Mr. Chamberlain was correct in stating there was an offer of colonial support.

Lord Rosebery declared that the alleged offer of the colonies, supposed to be contained in the conference resolution, was only a pious opinion. Mr. Chamberlain had called the result of Canada's preference altogether disappointing. Lord Rosebery would have laid more importance on the Australian Premier's declaration in favor of an Imperial preference if the latter had been returned to Parliament by a substantial majority at his back. There was no reason for disturbing our fiscal system in order to meet the preferential tariffs of the colonies. He quoted Sir Wilfrid Laurier's statement, that the Canadian preference was given not as a matter of bargain but as a matter of goodwill. He thought that as a matter of gratitude to the colonies might give us a preference because of the at least equivalent received and enabled them by supporting the whole burden of the naval defence of the Empire.

Lord Onslow, President of the Board of Agriculture, said the Government was not contemplating inviting the country to carry out Mr. Chamberlain's scheme, but he deprecied the attempt being made to cast ridicule on the colonial propositions so solemnly made.

Lord Brassey said that protectionist countries would never lower their duties on British goods until ejected from a speech by the Canadian Minister of Agriculture that preferential tariffs would interfere with the purchasing power of England would be a shock to Canada.

Lord Goschen said the great bulk of the British people were in favor of some closer tie between the Motherland and the colonies.

Lord Lansdowne said the proceedings of the colonial conference constituted something which could hardly be called an offer or at any rate an overture from the colonies. The matter needed examination, and for that reason the Government did not include in their policy the proposals associated with the name of Mr. Chamberlain.

Lord Spencer, Liberal leader, insisted that a preference was impossible without protection, meaning thereby a reversal of the fiscal policy of the country.

Premier Deakin Prepared.

London, March 4.—(C.A.P.)—In the Commonwealth House of Representatives Premier Deakin stated that the Government was prepared to alter the present tariff in favor of Britain by making the sacrifice necessary to secure reciprocal preferences with the Motherland.

What Balfour said.

London, March 4.—Premier Balfour aroused both cheers and derisive laughter by the statement in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that he had never advocated protection either in or outside the Cabinet.

The assertion was elicited by a request of Mr. MacNeil (Nationalist) that Mr. Balfour give the public an opportunity of reading his pamphlet advocating protection, presented to the Cabinet. Mr. Balfour declared that no such pamphlet was in existence, and added the above intimation that he was not a protectionist.

St. Kitts Factories Flooded.

St. Catharines, March 4.—For the second time this winter the Kenilcth paper mill, the power house at lock three, and the Welland Vale woolen suffered damage by flood yesterday. Considerable damage was also done to residences in the lower sections of the city.

Montreal, March 4.—Alf. Garneau, chief translator of the Senate, is dead.

Charged With Perjury.

Brantford, March 4.—J. Clayton Drummond, who figured prominently as a witness for the defence in the Kennedy murder trial last week, was arrested yesterday on the charge of perjury in connection with his evidence at the trial. In his testimony Drummond stated he was caretaker at the local Y.M.C.A. at the time of the crime in April, 1901, last. He said that in the afternoon Kennedy was in the reading-room of the building from 12.30 to 2 engaged in writing a letter. Drummond, in his prior testimony that they saw Kennedy near "The Willows" at that time. The Y.M.C.A. was a long place to go to in 30, but none of the many people there can remember seeing Kennedy.

Editor Levelers Hurt.

St. Catharines, March 4.—E. J. Lovelace, editor of The Liberal and Liberal candidate for the House of Commons, were injured by the accidental discharge of his rifle yesterday morning. He was going to the barn to shoot rats when he slipped, discharging the weapon. The bullet lodged in his arm and efforts to extract it so far have failed.

Medas Vivanti Passes.

St. John, Nfld., March 4.—The Lower Branch of the Colonial Legislature yesterday passed unanimously the Anglo-French modus vivendi, regarding the French shore fishery for the current year.

Shot While Hunting.

Morrisburg, March 4.—James Frontenac, accidentally shot himself while fox hunting Wednesday night. He was 18.

A Love Superstition.

An old way of interrogating fate in love affairs is to write an apple in two with a sharp knife. If this can be done without cutting the seed the wish of the heart will be fulfilled.

The Eyeball.

The eyeball is white because its blood vessels are so small that they do not admit the red corpuscles.

Birds' Nests.

Birds, in the construction of their nests, almost without exception, avoid bright colored materials, which might possibly lead to the discovery of their place of abode by an enemy.

Hats.

Hats are curiously constructed. The heart's action is aided by the rhythmic contraction of the veins in the wings.

Red Hair Is Again.

In Spain a woman with red hair is so seldom seen as to be considered a great beauty, no matter what her complexion, face shape of her nose or the tone of her voice.

Harrogate's Baths.

Harrogate, England, makes $7,500 a year from its baths and mineral springs.

Greasy Collars.

To remove the grease from a coat collar lay a piece of blotting paper over the collar and press with a warm iron. The grease will be absorbed by the blotting paper.

It is said that women criminals have smaller hands and feet than average women.

Alcoholic Drinks.

Powerful alcoholic beverages are distilled from bananas, the stalk of certain nuts, rice and peas. The Japanese distill spirit from plums, peaches and the flower of the mulberry tree. The Chinese make an alcoholic drink from plums.

Meat In Ireland.

Ireland produces 250 pounds of meat yearly for each head of her population, which is three times greater than England's production per head.

Divorce In Burma.

If a Burmese man and wife wish to become divorced they buy two candles, especially made for the purpose. These they light simultaneously. The one whose candle goes out first leaves the house forever, and the one whose candle burns the longer keeps the house and all the property.

FARM RENTED FOR $300

Unloaded at a High Figure Upon the Government.

Province Paid $25,000 For 235 Acres of Sand and Bog Land 16 Add to the London Asylum Grounds—A Knotty Question That Mr. Harcourt, As Minister of Crown Lands, Could Not Answer—Routine Work.

Toronto, March 4.—The Legislature spent the greater part of yesterday afternoon discussing the estimates. A lively debate was indulged in when the item for maintenance of public institutions were under review. Mr. Hanna precipitated the discussion by questioning the value of the farm land added to the London asylum grounds last year. For the 235 acres the province paid $25,000. It was shown that the property had been under rental for a number of years at $300 a year, and the Opposition were able to show that the late owner of the property would be glad to rent it well if he sold it for $13,000 or $15,000. Moreover, Mr. Beck, who has followed closely on many an occasion over the very spot, was able to show that the land is sand and bog and worth at the most half what was given for it. Mr. Ross and other Ministers rushed to defend the deal, but they were-pretty fairly cornered by the critics.

Helped a Quebec School.

Mr. Hagel, who is looking for the control of educational affairs, had a hard question for the Minister of Education, but the estimates under that department were looked over. The province assisted the normal school at Norway Beach, and Mr. Hagel thought it was a little out place on the map of Norway Beach. Mr. Harcourt admitted he was not posted, but thought the case for North Ontario subsequently made the discovery that "Ox" was in the County of Ontario, Que.

The estimates for legislation, administration of justice and education were passed after the Opposition had a chance to point out a few things that required to be attended to.

The Temperance B'k.

Just before the House adjourned the Premier gave out the information that the Liquor Bill might be brought down in the House this week. He would not have gressed this much if Mr. Whitney had not put the question to him. The Liquor Bill he brought down on Tuesday? "Yes." "Now" with emphasis and then added the statement already given.

Bills in Committee.

In committee the following bills were passed after a little debate respecting the security of public affairs: The Separate Schools Act (Harcourt); to amend the act respecting boards of education in certain cities (Harcourt).

A number of bills were introduced and read a first time.

Repairing Fire Damage.

A staff of carpenters and plasterers is at work repairing the damage caused by Thursday morning's electric fire in the house. The repairing of the building will not involve an expenditure of more than $500 or $100. The magnificent oil portrait on the entrance to the Chamber escaped altogether, except that of the late C. F. Spencer, which is slightly spotted by water.

Perth May Not Buy.

By a vote of 28 to 11 the private bills committee of the Legislature postponed for the session consideration of the bill of the Perth Electric Railway, providing for the purchase of the Perth Electric Co.

Deepen the Welland Canal.

Kingston, March 4.—The Dominion Transportation Commission, consisting of Hon. Mr. Bertram, Toronto, and Robert Reford, Montreal met in the Kingston Council chamber to hear evidence as to the grain carrying facilities of Montreal and Portland by seaboard. Much information along this line was given by various witnesses. The general opinion was urged that the greatest thing required to improve the transportation route from Port William to Montreal was the enlarging and deepening of the Welland Canal.

The Mining Engineers.

Toronto, March 4.—The sessions of the Canadian Mining Institute are continued yesterday. Some very interesting technical papers were read, and Prof. Belleman suggested that surveyors should be equipped to test ores for gold. Hon. E. J. Davis reviewed what the Government had done to meet the wants of mine owners, brokers and workers.

Loyalty of French-Canadians.

Toronto, March 4.—Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Inland Revenue, proclaimed the grandeur of real patriotism before the Empire Club yesterday. Incidentally he showed how loyal French-Canadians were to Great Britain.

War Office Quick Change.

London, March 5.—Replying to F. Wilson, M.P., Bromley Davenport, Thursday announced that the new service rifle is being fitted with a wind-guage sliding bar, to ensure greater accuracy in marksmanship. Thus the advent of Mr. Arnold-Forster to the War Office, continues to make itself felt. Less than a year ago Lord Stanley assured Mr. Wilson in the House that the question of a sliding bar on the sight had been fully considered, but such an arrangement was found unsuitable for service conditions.

Naval Officer Disappears.

Victoria, B. C., March 5.—The master-at-arms of H.M.S. Flora has decamped, taking with him a considerable sum which should have been paid as wages to members of the ship's crew. He escaped on the Seattle steamer from here last Tuesday, and his whereabouts is now unknown.

Brantford, March 5.—J. C. Drummond, defence witness in Kennedy's case, was yesterday at the police court, charged with perjury in his evidence given at the Kennedy murder trial. He pleaded not guilty. Four witnesses, J. T. Hewitt, clerk of the spring assizes; Chief Vaughan, Mr. Jessop, secretary Y. M. C. A., and press reporters were examined, after which the case was adjourned till next week.

G.T.R. HALF YEAR REPORT

Gross Receipts Were £3,138,468, an Increase of £326,590.

Railway Has a Surplus on Revenue Account of £398,800.—The Total Increased Expenditure Was £232,185, Owing to Greater Cost of Material and High Wages £404,300 Available For Dividends, and Permits 4 Per Cent.

London, March 5.—(C.A.P.)—The Grand Trunk Railway report was issued yesterday. The directors' statement of accounts for the half year ending Dec. 31 shows that the gross receipts were £3,138,468, an increase of £326,590. The passengers carried numbered 5,139,673, an increase of 451,422, while the weights of freight and live stock totalled 6,788,702 tons, an increase of 590,172. The working expenses, including a special charge of £300,000 on bridge renewal account amounted to £2,314,084, the net receipts being £924,000. There were no revenue charges for the half year.

Less the credits of £25,000 the balance of revenue is £398,400, to which has to be added the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee surplus for the half year of £400, making the surplus on revenue account £798,800. For maintenance and equipment there is an increase of £52,485; in cost of transportation an increase of £179,616, due to the increased price of materials of all descriptions, and the higher wages affecting all the railroads on the North America continent. The total increased expenditure is £232,261. To the surplus of £398,800 is added the balance of £5,500 from June last, which makes the total amount of £404,300 available for dividends. This permits of payment in full of the dividends for the half year of 4 per cent. on the guaranteed stock, and of the dividends in the first and second preference stocks and the declaration of a first dividend for the year for third preference stockholders, leaving a balance of about £2,800 to be carried forward.

Most Satisfactory Statement.

The Financial News says that the half-yearly report of the G.T.R. is the most satisfactory statement in many respects. Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson and his colleagues have ever been able to present. In eight years there has been a gross expansion of £827,000, or 50 per cent., which speak volumes for the industrial progress made in the Dominion, and the ability and vigor with which G. T. R. affairs are handled.

The Financial Times praises the development of the short distance traffic of the G.T.R. The earnings per train mile jumped from 91 pence to 7 pence. The increased cost of transportation, chiefly due to the £90,000 additional price paid for fuel, was neutralized by many minor economies.

Great Western Railway.

London, March 5.—(C.A.P.)—The accounts of the Great Western Railway Company for the half year to Dec. 31 show a surplus of £2,300 carried forward to the current half year.

Row in the Cabinet.

London, March 5.—(C.A.P.)—Lord George Hamilton, M.P., late Secretary of State for India (Conservative Free Trader), asked if he still adhere to his statement that Premier Balfour submitted to the Cabinet two separate pamphlets on fiscal reform, wired in answer that "the statement I made at Ealing is correct," and that on Monday Mr. Balfour will be asked to give the House a full account of the Cabinet resignations.

Send Doctors to Parliament.

London, March 5.—(C.A.P.)—A large section of British medical men want a Minister of Health, and concur in urging that a fund be raised to send doctors to Parliament to give attention to the nation's health, food and physical culture. Sir Frederick Treves is suggested as Minister.

Sir Joseph Trutch Dead.

London, March 5.—(C.A.P.)—Sir Joseph William Trutch, K.C., M.G., Governor of British Columbia from 1875 to 1876, is dead. He was born at Ashcot, Somerset, in 1826, and was by profession a civil engineer. Sir Joseph was a member of the Legislature and Executive Council of British Columbia, and was Surveyor-General and Chief Commissioner of Lands from 1864 to 1875. For twelve years, from 1876, he was agent for the Dominion in London.

100,000 JAPS IN COREA

Forty Transports Have Been Doing Heavy Work Recently.

Port Arthur Harbor Blocked By Retrian—Passage Only Easy For Cruisers—Japanese Foresight in Collecting Stores of Coal—War is Better For—Ninety-Eight Jap Sailors Land at Tongshan From Sunken Vessel.

Vladivostock, March 5.—According to information received here, 40 Japanese transports, escorted by the entire naval fleet, have been energetically landing troops in Corea, at Fusan and Chemulpo. It is estimated that fully 100,000 men have disembarked, and it is supposed that an immediate advance into North Corea is contemplated. From the fact that the Japanese fleet is thus employed it is felt that the immediate attack on Vladivostock or Port Arthur will be made. The reported landing of 2,500 Japanese at Cungchin, Plaksin Bay, on the east coast of Corea, has been confirmed.

Japs Push in Corea.

London, March 5.—Little change in the Far Eastern situation is reported this morning. It is apparent that the Japanese are being engaged in transporting their forces into Corea, and this work is being facilitated by the enforced inactivity of the navy.

According to the Schtatspol correspondent of The Daily Graphic, Admiral Skrydloff has parted peacefully from Port Arthur that the Russian battleship Retvizan lies in such a position as to block effectually the exit of the battleships from the harbor, the passage being practicable only for cruisers. The correspondent adds that Russia's battleships now building on the Baltic will not be ready for active consideration before the end of August.

Sir Claude's Foresight.

The Japanese official who has charge of Japan's financial and commercial interests in England declares that his Government foresaw the possibility of coal being declared contraband of war, and that it has been collecting large stores of Welsh steam coal for years, so that now it has a supply sufficient for the needs of the navy for years to come.

The recent Japanese elections resulted rather favorably to the Militarialists, without greatly changing the strength of political parties there. The returns are approximately 120 Constitutionalists, 95 Progressives, 30 without party and 83 members from small groups.

War Is no Picnic Here.

According to the Tokio correspondent of The Standard, the Mikado has sent a personal message to the Emperor of Corea, assuring him that war was declared solely with the view of securing permanent peace, and expressing the sincere wish that the recently confirmed Japanese-Corean protocol should increase the intimacy of the two countries.

On the strength of a statement made by a missionary, the Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Chronicle sends in a doubtful report that 56 Japanese sailors have landed at Tongchan, saying that their vessel had sunk, as the result of an encounter with Russian warships which also was sunk, down. No Russians were saved, but 200 Japanese were rescued by Chinese junks. This action is reported to have occurred between Port Arthur and the Miaoto Islands.

Jap Cruiser Sunk.

St. Petersburg, March 5.—The following despatch, dated March 3, has been received from Major-General Pflug, commanding the Russian forces at Port Arthur:

"All is quiet at Port Arthur and Kinkow. According to information given by eye-witnesses, a Japanese cruiser having three funnels lies near Pemulpo, between islands, having recently sunk there."

All Quiet at Vladivostock.

Vladivostock, March 5.—All is quiet here. 36 Japanese warships have been seen since Feb. 25, when ten ships were sighted on the horizon, but soon disappeared. The inhabitants continue to leave Vladivostock for Nikolsk, Khabarovsk or Europe.

Great Britain's Neutrality.

London, March 5.—The Russian Ambassador, Count Benckendorff, who returned to London from St. Petersburg on Wednesday, yesterday visited King Edward and presented His Majesty with an autograph letter from the Czar. This was in answer to a letter sent by King Edward, in which, in the most friendly terms, he emphasized Great Britain's complete neutrality during the war in the Far East. Britain will not move unless compelled so to do by the entrance into Far East affairs of a third power.

The Winter Squadron.

Port Said, March 5.—Admiral Wirenius' squadron of Russian warships leaves here today for Arabic, Spain. The torpedo boat destroyers will remain in the Mediterranean until June, awaiting the arrival of the Baltic squadron.

Commercial Suicide.

Lorne, March 5.—William Hill, aged 42, formerly of Thedford, for the past five years head cooper with the Lucan Milling Company of this village, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at 5.30 in his home by taking a large dose of carbolic acid.

AFFAIRS AT THE SOO.

It will be remembered that the announcement was made the other day that, in order to aid the work of reorganizing the industries at the Soo, the Ross Government has decided to guarantee a "small" loan of $2,000,000 in the Soo company. The official announcement declares that "Mr. Shields speaks gleefully of the prospects of the reconstructed concern." (The cause the Guelph Herald, which is edited by Mr. Joseph Downey, M.P.P., to remark: "We have the authority of Mr. Shields' assurance that when the plants were closed down they were earning $1,000,000 a year, and that they would pay about 7 per cent. on $40,000,000 in two years' time. There is material foundation for the optimism of Mr. Shields. Even when the cash box was empty and the unpaid workmen were on the eve of riot, Mr. Shields was not permitted to suffer. His salary from the company was $30,000 per year, and the Ontario Government on Oct. 5th paid him his wages—$2,500 for August, $2,500 for September, and $1,500 for October. It is of little moment that the tradesmen of the province, who, on Mr. Shields' solicitation, supplied the corporation with goods when it was on the verge of collapse, were allowed to go without a dollar. They could stand it. They were not Yankee promoters or capitalists in distress and far from home. They were Canadian business men, who could afford to grin and bear it and help pay Mr. Shields his back wages at the rate of $30,000 per year. Casting his memories after such a fortuitous escape personally from what proved to many Canadians a disastrous wreck, it is no wonder that Mr. Shields discovers the star of prosperity shining effulgently over Sault Ste. Marie.

(The people of Ontario are not likely to display much enthusiasm for an industrial revival in which a loan of $2,000,000 from their Government is an important factor. It was said when the crash came that the Soo industries would be reorganized on a Gompers basis. We find from the official statement that the Speyer claim is to be wiped out for $5,500,000 and that the capital stock of the new concern is to be $40,000,000. The assets, it must be remembered, are said to be worth $100,000,000. If it is impossible to finance the enterprise now when the way is clear to get down to rock bottom, without Government assistance, we are not sanguine for the enduring success of the industry. The Soo boom had a good deal of forced, hot house growth about it. Cleveon was a promoter and a dreamer. The difficulty of reducing his imposing creations to a working basis is proven in the disastrous records of the recent failure. That chapter of Soo history is now closed. A new chapter is about to be written. Is it not time for the people of Ontario to insist on the Soo industries, for better or worse, standing on their own merits. There is no town or city in the whole province that has not experienced the distress arising out of an industrial collapse and the need for such assistance as is now proffered to the new company at Sault Ste. Marie. Why should they not be treated in the same way? If the cement industry or the sugar beet industry should collapse will the Government follow the precedent to be established at the Soo, and guarantee them a loan? But, there is ample security for the loan, we shall be told. The security is ample the money can be obtained without the assistance of the Government. Many lenders are always prepared to do business on a business basis. But the value of the security does not effect the principle involved. The Soo could be treated in a far more right to guarantee a loan to the company at the Soo than it has to any other private corporation in the province."

A SIGNIFICANT FACT.

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

According to Bradstreet's, 84 per cent. of the merchants who failed in 1903 did not advertise in the newspapers.

The Graduates' Club furnish delightful evenings for literary and cultured people, but it is to be feared that they will never find their seating capacity taxed to the limit till they introduce some sort of cake walks. Alas! for the decadence of the popular taste. 'Twas not always thus in Belleville.

The Intelligencer begs to congratulate the local Graduates' Club on the programme provided by local talent last evening. It is doubtful if, in a city the size of Belleville, it could be excelled, or even equalled, in Canada.

STOPPING THE PAPER.

(Manson, Iowa, Democrat.)

"I've stopped my paper, yes, I bey; I didn't like to do it,
But the editor he got too smart
And I allers he'll put it.
I am a man as pays his debts,
And I won't be insulted.
So when the editor gets smart,
I want to be consulted.
I took his paper 'leven years,
An' helped him all I could, sir,
But when it comes to dunnin' me,
I didn't think he would, sir;
But that he did and you kin bet
It made me hot as thunder,
Says I, I'll stop that sheet, I will,
If the cussed thing goes under!
I hunted up the measley whelp
An' for his cussing caper
I paid him 'leven years an' quit!
Yes, sir, I've stopped his paper!"

Canada wants money if she puts it into an army of defence. If Russia attacked her, the United States would have something to say about such a proceeding right away.

The King's cold is reported as no better. His Majesty should try onion gruel at once.

The Japs will attack in a new quarter, and by so doing they hope to make the Russians look like 15 cents.

Sleet and rain to-morrow, says the prols. See the fair weather Christians smile!

An at present unpunished punster gets off this: "The Japs know where to go, and Togo knows where the Russians go, and the Russians don't know where to go, because they might run up against Togo. So if the Japs stick together, and to Togo, they are sure of victory."

The Czar, according to to-day's despatches, is looking for miracles. And he rules one of the most powerful nations in the world in the Twentieth century!

It was in Petersboro, England, that potato was sold for £80. They are pretty small potatoes in Peterboro, Canada.

So the Mormons are coming to Canada. Well, they needn't think they can introduce polygamy here. One wife is quite enough for any Canadian.

The people are now asking what is this Laxative Phenix. Here is your answer; It is a vegetable soup. It is a soft, fine powder made originally in France. It cleanses more quickly than soap, bleaches perfectly, leaves the fibre of fabrics intact, and what the most important of all—leaves no residue in the linen. Soap contains grease and caustic soda, and linen and woolens washed with soap always contain a trace of these. When touched by a hot iron the fabric turns yellow. Laxative Phenix cleanses quickly and perfectly. One pound costs you 5 cents and will wash eighteen hundred collars. 5-3t

Brockville Recorder: A card from Mr. W. Spencer Jones, dated Riverside, California, Feb. 24, reached the Recorder office this morning, in which he states that he had that day been picking off the trees oranges for the table, also roses and violets, and had driven through some of the prettiest scenery he ever saw. He expected to go to Santa Barbara next day and would sail from San Francisco for Australia on the following Thursday.

LITTLE JAPAN AND HER UP-TO-DATE ARMY

CONSUL-GENERAL NOSSE TELLS OF ITS ORGANIZATION AND CHARACTERISTICS.

(Montreal Gazette.)

Hon. T. Nosse, the Japanese consul-general, described yesterday the military system of his country and under what conditions those who go to face the Big Bear will be obliged to act. The army of Japan has its own characteristics and is in many respects conducted quite differently from the armies of some of the European nations.

"We have the conscript system," said the Consul-General, "similar to that of Germany. Strictness is one of its strong points. Any regulations and discipline must be obeyed and thus far in our history no difficulty has been experienced in securing obedience. Conscript methods be it, is one or two countries, been the seeds of dissatisfaction and many youths have left their native lands for foreign shores to escape military service. The Japanese, however, have never dissented from this branch of the law. They look upon training in arms as a good means of getting an education, while at the same time becoming efficient in the practice of warfare. Practically our whole male population, therefore, over the age of twenty years are skilled in field manoeuvres and in the use of guns.

"Every young man is enlisted at the age of twenty, unless he is exempted on account of studies in a University, being needed at home to support his parents, or is disqualified in stature. Those taken are trained for three years in active service. The succeeding three years they spend in what is known as the first reserves. After this they are placed in the second reserves and there pass four years, making ten years in all. Those who wish to follow a military life may attend a college or university and prepare for whatever department they wish to follow. During the three years of connection with the army steady drill is enforced. Some days being about the only leisure, unless, of course, a leave of absence is granted.

"The height necessary for soldiers were below those of many armies, Hon. Mr. Nosse said. The minimum in each case was 5 feet 2 inches for infantry, 5 feet 4 inches for cavalry and 5 feet 6 inches for artillery. Men had to be physically adapted otherwise also. The Japs, though short and small were hardy, patient and capable of marching twenty-five miles a day.

Speaking of the army equipment Hon. Mr. Nosse said:

"We have one color for the uniforms of all our soldiers, no matter whether they belong to infantry, cavalry, artillery or engineers. Dark blue is worn by everyone. The distinguishing marks for officers and non-commissioned officers consist in different colors of braid, shoulder straps, etc. Men on foot wear red braid and straps, men on horse are given green; artillerymen are marked by yellow; and engineers have blue. The uniforms are all made by the Government at a comparatively low cost. The absence of elaborate and many colored uniforms makes the expense of maintaining our forces very moderate."

A HEALTHY OLD AGE

The Goal of Every Man's Ambition

THOUSANDS of human beings are suffering under the burden of a sickly, premature old age, because of diseased kidneys. These organs once diseased, give out to all parts of the body a deadly slow-acting poison. The face loses its color, the eyes fix luster, the brain its ambition, and the muscles their energy, and many of the most troublesome ailments result.

Bu-Ju cures all forms of kidney trouble, and brings back youth and vigor by rooting out the evil. It is a never-failing cure for every form of kidney ailment. It cures rheumatism by eradicating the cause of rheumatism, kidney disorders. If you are suffering from any form of kidney trouble, commence taking Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, at once. You cannot afford to neglect the many symptoms that point to diseased kidneys.

Gentlemen:—I had suffered almost continually for seven years from kidney trouble. Could scarcely walk and was unable to attend to my farm duties. Before I had taken one box of Bu-Ju I felt much relieved and after taking half a box was able to do a full day's work. I know one box of Bu-Ju saved me 50 doctor bills, and think they are the finest pill made. I give this testimonial freely.

A GRASSHOPPER RACE.

Mackay Won It Because the Professor Got the Wrong Bottles.

John W. Mackay was in early riser, a hard worker, and, although exceedingly hospitable, was himself abstemious and could seldom be induced to play cards for money, and then for only nominal stakes. The only game that seemed to attract him was the "grasshopper races" with which the visiting superintendents on the Comstock beguiled a portion of the noon hour while waiting for luncheon at the big range company boarding house. Boys caught grasshoppers and sold them to the players at 25 to 50 cents each. Each player paid a fixed stake, ranging from $1 to $20, into the pool, and the man whose hopper made the longest jump captured the pool. On the day before Christmas it was agreed to celebrate that holiday with a pool the stakes in which were to be $100 for each player. The terms were "play or pay," and at the instance of a German professor who was a superintendent of a leading mine each man was allowed to use any means that he might devise to stimulate his grasshopper. The professor was so full of his scheme to scientifically capture the $1,000 pool—for there were ten entries—that he communicated it to a young assayer who was not a grasshopper plunger. The professor had experimented and ascertained that a grasshopper that was touched by a feather dipped in a weak solution of cocaine immediately would jump for his life. The young man also experimented, and as a result he filled a bottle of the same size and appearance with cyanide of potassium and managed to substitute it for the other in the professor's laboratory. The next day, when the professor after much boasting about his scientific attainments dipped a feather in the substituted bottle and touched his insect with it the grasshopper turned over as dead as a salt mackerel, amid the roars of the crowd. Mackay's hopper won the big pool, and two widows, whose husbands had been killed in the Yellow Jacket mine, received a gift of $500 each from an unknown source.

Eating Worms.

All nations are the worshipers of Buddha eat the flesh of animals. Even the lowest and most disgusting to eye and palate find a home where they are welcomed. Worms and insects must furnish food and grace the tables not only of the poor, but of the rich. Think of the gourmet who praises the luscious weasel-pie, and still more the black mass from the inside that he carefully places on his toast and eats with a feeling akin to veneration! He is eating the worms that live in the snipe's intestines. Of equal value is the famous palm worm of the West Indies, which forms one of the best dishes of luxurious diners. Its near relative, the grugru worm of Java, is said to be richer still and more delicate. Nor do costly silkworms escape the fate of all that is eatable. Breed from their cocoons and subsequently drained they are lightly pried and largely swallowed by the people of Madagascar.

The Cob Pipe.

Corncob pipes are as old as the settlement of this country, and the probabilities are that the pilgrim fathers found the Indians sucking hollowed out cobs through rough root stems. There is a historical warrant for saying that Andrew Jackson smoked red pipes and was fond of them. Tradition has it that after that famous dinner of sweet potatoes General Francis Marion proffered the British officer who was his guest a corncob pipe and a mole-skin pouch of sun cured leaf tobacco.

Y.M.C.A. Notes.

The first game contest of the season, held in the rooms last night was well attended. Rivalry was keen and some good playing held groups of interested members round the game boards. The bowlers in ping-pong went to Morrice Hartman, O.B.C., while Harry Thompson, a Belleville boy, won from all comers at carroms. Next Friday we expect a larger attendance and keener competition at our second tournament.

To-morrow Dr. J. T. Reid, M.D., gives a special address on "The Religion of the Doukhobor" at 4.15. The doctor has spent years among these people and for this reason his address will be very interesting.

The boys of B.B.C. will be the guests of the Association at a meeting of the "Strangers' Fellowship Club" in the Secretary's room at the close of the meeting.—Com.

Tillson's Pan-dried Oats

Consolidation of Rural Schools.

One of the most important tendencies of to-day, makes for the extension into rural districts of the special conveniences and advantages hitherto associated with urban life. Thus we begin to find farm houses more frequently equipped with modern furnaces and bathrooms, and with similar appliances. Telephone systems and electric car lines begin to radiate from the towns, and rural mail delivery routes are established. In another and even more important field this tendency manifests itself in the creation of public libraries, and in improved educational facilities.

One means towards those improved educational facilities which has been tried in various portions of this continent, and, as a rule, successfully, has been the consolidation of rural school districts. Adjoining districts have united to maintain a single school, to which pupils are driven in a vehicle hired by the school authorities.

The object in view has been to secure the advantage of graded schools, better teachers, better equipment, more regular attendance, and, if possible, a reduction in the necessary taxation. In addition it is hoped to facilitate the creation of public libraries, of night schools, and of centres of social life.

Literary Notes.

A FINE PUBLICATION.

In the Canadian Magazine a periodical which has already established a high character, Canadian history and life are discussed and illuminated. Forty Canadian teachers went to South Africa and their experiences are commemorated in an article in the March number. Dr. Canadian doctor, Beattie Crozier, living in London, makes contributions to philosophical thought, hence Arnold Haultain's article on "A Search for an Ideal." Next month, for the regeneration of criminals are being tried, hence an article by J. J. Kelso. Several newspaper men come same near losing their positions because they wrongly reported Sir William Van Horne, hence G. F. Paul writes of "the Discredited Interview." Canada's treaty-making powers are termed inadequate, and Thomas Hodgins explains why this should be changed. W. L. Grant points out where the teaching of history is weak in our educational system.

The leading illustrated article in the Methodist Review for March is one on Allison University, Sackville, N.B. It has eighteen excellent cuts and a descriptive paper of marked literary flavor. Other well illustrated papers are "The Argentine Republic," "Recent Progress in Japan," and "The Editor's Letter." Toronto: William Briggs. Montreal: C. W. Coates. Halifax: S. F. Huestis. $2.00 a year; $1.00 for six months.

"Disturbers" and distributors of Underprice Merchandise WITHOUT RESERVE.

Will offer for sale this stock in small or large quantities. Life membership in the firm's stock company is yours. Price of membership will be "good citizenship," "attending all our bargain day sales and our annual dinner if convenient." No further dues or assessments, and no liabilities. Your further duties consist in living up to your ideal as nearly as possible, telling your friends of our location and reporting all backsliders, and in order that you keep posted we advise your calling daily, otherwise you should read our ads, every day for 99 years, but no longer as it costs lots of money to shuffle in these big "$250 UNJUST" sales, but we are shuffling and have honed and ground our meat axe to a hair-splitting edge, and every department has caught the flash of the glittering blade and felt the sting of its razor edge.

The mills and factories of this proud land of ours have made contracts with the Great Eastern Stock Company as distributors to dispose of all remnants and mill ends, and through their contracts we are able to place before you Merchandise at prices that ordinarily would seem impossible, and through this combination we can and do make you prices on standard Merchandise that if other firms would attempt to equal would mean commercial suicide for them.

And we bid you welcome to come and see the big sale and the unlimited lines. Stacks and counters full of bright, now fresh Merchandise, this great sale will make history for the Great Eastern Stock Company and write their name high upon the mercantile scroll of fame, not only in Belleville but in adjoining counties.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76. Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

Plain Truth

Our perferences are always in strict accordance with the promise made in our "ads." We believe in the SUBLIMITY of PLAIN TRUTH. We are not in the business for purely philanthropic motives, but for the purpose of keeping our capital active, our mind and body employed, and making a few dollars for the benefit of ourselves. But we exercise a just consideration of our customers.

The Whole Story in a letter:

Pain-Killer (PERRY DAVIS')

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 7, 1903.
Dear Sirs,—My little girl, aged 5 years, was badly burned on the face, neck and arms by the explosion of a lamp. Nothing seemed to relieve the pain until I applied Perry Davis' Pain-Killer, which gave instant relief. In a few days she was entirely healed. I have no hesitation in saying that Pain-Killer is the best remedy to have near at hand.
Yours truly, (Mrs.) E. Morgan.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Hon. J. Israel Tarte will be the orator for Kingston Irishmen on St. Patrick's day. The first initial of his name will probably stand for Jerry after that.

To-morrow is Bible Sunday, when all denominations will discuss a common topic—the Book of Books. Go to church and fill a seat which has been vacant too many times this winter.

Belleville had better enter a team for the curling championship next winter. You never heard of curlers being bounced for professionalism or anything else. So long as a man can talk with the correct accent and carry his proper load he's never bothered by anybody.

"Finance," in the Mail and Empire, wants the ballot abolished. It might be a blessing, but think of the hymns of praise which would arise if the ballot and the "Financier" were both abolished!

The bens, we are told, are beginning to lay a little more liberal to their contributions. But they'll hardly be working up to form till the snow has gone.

This is the 47th time we have called attention to the fact that it's about time somebody began to hustle in connection with the proposed Old Boys' Reunion. And still there's nothing doing!

They say that when the O.H.A. executive met last Saturday night Abe Shalman said: "Are you ready to 'soak' Belleville, gentlemen?" And the members responded: "Reddy, aye Reddy."

There's a funny thing, now. Since somebody complained that patent medicine contained a lot of alcohol, the sales of the cure-alls have gone up considerably. Did the patent medicine makers start the story?

Russia is indebted to France $1,600,000,000. This explains the show of sympathy France is now extending to Russia.

Ottawa, March 5.—The Telephone Committee of the City Council at a meeting last night decided to recommend that the franchise be given the Canadian Telephone Company. F. Swanke of Scranton, Pa.; F. J. Leonard, New York, representing the company were present. The city is offered $25 and $20 respectively, for cash a year and 10 free phones. The company also offers a cash guarantee of $5,000 that it means business.

British Minister at St. Petersburg.

London, March 5.—King Edward has approved the selection of Hon. Charles Harding (Assistant Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs), and brother of Viscount Harding), to succeed Sir Charles Scott as British Ambassador at St. Petersburg. Sir Charles retires at the end of April. Sir Edion Gorst (finance adviser to the Egyptian Government) will replace Sir Harding in the Foreign Office.

Result of Courier Labor.

Kingston, March 5.—A stone wall in the Protestant chapel in the penitentiary gave way Thursday, smashing many benches. Five tons of debris fell by the hour. Had this occurred during service, many men would have been killed. The wall was put up imperfectly by convicts.

Downey and Hanna.

Kingston, March 5.—A political rally was held here last night under the auspices of the Macdonald Club. Mayor Bell presided and the principal speakers were J. J. Downey, M.P.P., South Wellington, and A. J. Hanna, West Lambton.

RHEUMATISM CURED.

I WILL REFUND YOUR MONEY IF IT FAILS TO CURE.

I want every sufferer from Rheumatism to write me immediately. I know that I can cure it will positively cure Rheumatism in any part of the body. I know it cures sharp shooting pains in the Arms, Legs, Side, Back or Breast and Rheumatic Swelling or Soreness of any part of the body in a few hours.

I have found a speedy and permanent cure for all forms of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, or pain in the back, Lameness, Stiff and Swollen Joints, and all pains in hips and loins. This remedy does not rot the disease to stay, but drives it from the system. It neutralizes the acid and makes it impossible for it to return.

THE YELLOW MAN.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900. By Paul R. Reynolds.

implacable enemy. This, too, seemed a thing which it was scarcely possible to realize.

Hour after hour as the boat sped swiftly down the great river it had not thought of what had been, of the terror that had so long hung over me. And it was ended. Was it? We were still in China, and but half of our work was complete. "Woocbing must die. You must kill Chang." So my father had written long ago. Well, Kung was gone—gone the way of all oppressors, smitten by the hand of a mere child. All powerful and skilled in the reading of men, he had yet failed to read aright the heart of You, because forsooth a servant like You was to be beaten for disobedience and then forgotten.

You's regaining of grace was told in a few words. After his branding, though his heart was full of revenge, he feigned repentance, and Kung, careless in his might, forgot that a coolie may have a soul. So in time You was permitted once more to be of use. Then he thought out the plan by which he might forward his revenge.

Well, Kung was gone, but his lieutenant was still alive, and notwithstanding You's belief that Woocbing would let us rest I was doubtful, knowing the pertinacity of that dreadful man.

Well, we reached Shanghai without mishap and after staying there for two days took ship for Hongkong, intending to take our way back to Melbourne with all dispatch. You was to accompany us as far as Hongkong, where we had promised him sufficient remuneration to set him up for the rest of his life. Indeed Jim wished to take him across at the great water, but You conceded in dissuading him of the idea. You was a most excellent fellow in a pagoda or on a river, but just a little too violent for a peaceful English home.

Though he traveled with us as our servant, he nevertheless slept forward with the other coolly passengers, and on the morning of the second day out on the captain came to Jim and on the quiet cabin saying that there had been a row among the coolies and that one servant was seriously injured. Of course my thoughts naturally flew to the society, and, begging the skipper to show us the way, we hurried forward.

You was still alive, and that was all that could be said of him. His eyes were glazed, and I don't think he recognized us, but, though it may only have been my fancy, just before he died I thought he turned to Jim and smiled. Then the doctor drew a covering over his poor face.

"Dreadful row," said the doctor. "Sudden quarrel for no apparent reason. Knives—and two dead men."

"May we see the other body?"

"Certainly. Come this way."

For some half dozen steps he led us along the passage, stopping before a door on the right, which, extracting a key from his pocket, he unlocked. I entered after him, trembling with excitement. The body was stretched on a low bunk still dressed in its coolie clothes, which here and there were slashed and sodden with blood. A coarse towel was flung, carelessly across the face.

Upon this being removed a most horrible sight presented itself, for You's knife had struck when and where it could, but cut and dead and awful as he was I instantly recognized the features of Woocbing.

Without speaking I looked at Jim, and he looked at me.

"It is horrible," I said as we turned away.

And that was the last of the yellow man Woocbing.

* * * * *

Many years have passed since then, and the girl of my heart has long been the wife of my bosom. Once more we live in fancied security, as, injuring no one, fearing no one, for, as my father had prophesied, the death of Woocbing and Kung our persecution ceased, though it was long before I could bring myself to believe it. I said to this day I can never look upon a yellow face without a shudder.

Jim, I am glad to say, is getting quite rosy again and only now needs a good wife to make him supremely blessed. But he eschews matrimony with a zeal worthy of a better cause. And yet he has confessed that a woman like Cecil might tempt him to the direful deed. But as there is only one Cecil I have no hope for Jim.

But he always stays with us when he is at home, and on days he is Uncle Jim, just as he was to me—and sometimes when all the house is quiet he and I sit over a glass of whisky and a pipe and talk of the awful days that have gone, never to return; of Kung, the Society of the Golden Meaning and of Woocbing, the yellow man.

THE END.

Safety For Your Children.

When a mother finds it necessary to give her little one medicine she thinks she can be careful as to the remedy employed. The so-called "soothing" medicines always contain poisonous opiates, and no child should ever be given to a child. Strong cathartic and harsh purgatives should also be avoided. An ideal medicine for young children is Baby's Own Tablets, which cure all the minor ills of childhood, and the mother has the guarantee of one of the most foremost analysts of Canada that this medicine contains no opiate. Milton L. Hersey, M.A. Sc., demonstrator in chemistry, McGill University says:—"I hereby certify that I have made a careful analysis of Baby's Own Tablets which I personally purchased in a drug store in Montreal, and said analysis has failed to detect the presence of morphine or narcotics in them." Analysis is proof, therefore mothers know that in giving their little ones Baby's Own Tablets they are giving them an absolutely safe medicine. Sold by all druggists or mailed at 25c a box by writing to Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Brother to a Novelist.

Mr. George B. Brasme, an old music teacher, who died in a Toronto hospital a few weeks ago, was a brother of Charles G. Brasme, who has the most prolific novelist of the nineteenth century. His first commenced to write for The Family Herald, the popular British periodical, under the initials "R. O.," a friend of her own. An American pirate publishing took her novels, and published them in book form, conferring on the unknown writer the name Bertha M. Clay, which was considered a stroke of piratical genius. Mrs. Brasme then resumed her old identity, and signed her own name to her work thereafter. The late Mr. Brasme, who was a man of individual views, had a great affection for his sister, but took no pride in her literary achievements.

Every man has at times in his mind the ideal of what he should be, but is not.

The First American Directory.

The first American directory was issued at Philadelphia in 1785 by Francis White. It comprised eighty-three pages, with 3,550 names, and was sold at half a dollar.

Tame Tigers.

Seleucus Nicator, the king of Syria, used to drive a four-in-hand team of tame tigers, and his successor, Antiochus, had a pet she tiger that often was taken along on his journeys and had been taught to mount an elephant without making use of her formidable claws.

Newfoundland Fishers.

More than one-fourth of the inhabitants of Newfoundland are engaged in catching and curing fish for a livelihood.

Eddystone Lighthouse.

The smallest inhabited island in the world is that on which the Eddystone lighthouse stands. At low water it is thirty feet in diameter; at high water the base of the lighthouse, the diameter of which is twenty-eight and three-quarter feet, is completely covered by the waves.

Sick Convicts.

One hundred and fifty-four out of every 10,000 English convicts are constantly in hospital.

A Cheerful Custom.

In certain back country districts of England on Jan. 1, which is called Childermas, every child is soundly spanked before breakfast. The data is supposed to be the anniversary of the actual day upon which Herod slew the innocents. Therefore, to keep the memory of the slaughter fresh in the minds of the rising generation, subscribers to the ancient custom use holden to whip their children before they rise on the morning of that day.

AT LIFE'S EVENING.

To those well along in years, those approaching to the condition of the system, their measure of living, Ayer's Pills are young at 70, while others are old at 40.

Elderly people who once use Dr. Leonhardi's Anti-Pill "d that is the marvelous po. to relieve them of the tro...ssolving agonious stones.

ANTI-PILL.

Sold in Belleville by J. S. McKeown.

He Liked Young People.

In his last work, "Facts and Comments," Herbert Spencer gives a curious bit of self revelation. He confesses that, though he particularly liked the society of young people, it bored him to an unendurable extent if they worried him with unintelligent chatter, and that to avoid this it was his custom to ask them some question which could not be answered without a good deal of thought. He was accustomed to tone his judgment of their intellects upon the answers returned, and we can well imagine that those who were suddenly confronted with some such problem as "Why is the sea salt?" must have regretfully retired with the great philosopher as something of an ordeal. —London Globe.

A Lawyer.

"The man I am looking for," said the mature looking spinster sentimentally, "must be utterly unselfish, brave as a lion, generous to the last day, industrious, intelligent, thoughtful, of distinguished presence and one who never drinks, smokes, gambles or uses profane language. I shall not mind if he is poor—but will not marry for money."

"Not a bit," remarked the damsel's cynical old father grimly. "He'd have to be poor—but will not marry for money, my dear."

"How so, papa?"

"Why, they'd give a fortune for a man like that in a show."

Preacher and Kabeeter.

There was an old darky preacher in Virginia who, after he became too ordained, but was content to remain just as he was, and who was rather strange to some of his congregation, and one day they asked him about it. "Well, it's just this way," he said. "When you's a preacher, you's gotter have a tex' an' stick right close to it, but if you's only a workeh you kin branch."

The Original Ones.

Butler—But do you remember all you read?

Baker—I hope not. If I did I shouldn't enjoy the original writings of some of my friends, you know.—Boston Transcript.

Flattery was formerly considered a vice, but it is now grown into a custom.—Syrus.

Christmas Bells.

The practice of ringing the church bells to announce the coming of Christmas originated no doubt with the old rule of the Catholic church in having first mass of the festival at midnight.

Church Advertisements.

In Taranaki, Australia, is a church labeled in big letters on the outside walls with the names and trades of a grocer, a draper, a painter and a miller. These tradesmen built the church in return for the advertisement they obtain.

Ocean Trout.

Trout are believed to be exclusively fresh water fish. It happens, however, occasionally that some are caught with the herring in the German ocean.

The test of a heating system is the warmth of the halls in the early morning. A hot water system will keep comfortable, even temperature all over the house day and night. Getting-up time finds great comfort all over the house. The is the highest development of hot water heating. Other makers cannot come near as they can or dare to the Oxford idea. That is the standard they try to reach. If you prefer the Oxford idea, insist that you get it in the original not the imitation. This illustration shows the utility of the grate construction. The ash base front is easily removed, repairs made to base and returned to its place, without the assistance of a specialist.

YOUR DAILY MEALS.

A Little Sermon on What to Eat and When to Eat It.

If you eat a hearty dinner at the close of each day's work, a dinner made up of food choices which have a distinct to build up the body during the night's rest, then you should eat a light lunch fast, so that your new energy may go into your morning's work instead of being all used up in digesting your morning meal.

But if you have not eaten the proper quantity and kind of food for breakfast you must eat a hearty breakfast, or else feel faint from undernourishment.

You should not eat meat for breakfast, for meat should only be eaten at a time when complete rest can be taken. If you feel the need of meat eat eggs instead or nuts.

You should eat a well cooked cereal, but know this: The cereals which can be cooked in three minutes are hardly worth the eating, because they have so little nourishment in them. Oatmeal that has been cooked several hours is very good. Half cooked oatmeal is so poor a food that it is almost a poison. Cornmeal must also be well cooked, too. If it is to do its best work for the human body—and soul.

And if you will eat bread for breakfast eat the German rye bread, crisp rolls or brown toast. Hot bread and cakes clog your system and will make you cross and uncomfortable before noon.

Coffee could be a healthful drink if it were properly made and not boiled until it is bitter with tannin. Clear coffee, one cup of it, may have no ill effects on your nerves. But coffee with cream, two or three cups, will make you bilious.

But, wherever else you eat or drink, eat fruit and a great deal of fruit, for breakfast. If you want a fruit tonic drink the juice of an orange and also a lemon. If you want fruit for a food eat apples or bananas. Eat these or eat super-ripe fruit, but eat apple sauce, cooked prunes, cooked canned fruit.

WHY HE DID NOT GET ON.

He had low ideals.
He did not dare to take chances.
He had too many irons in the fire.
He was never a whole man at anything.
He thought a good business should run itself.
He did not appreciate the value of appearances.
He did not know how to husband himself in others.
He let gruff, indifferent clerks drive away his business.
He trusted incompetent friends with responsible positions.
He would not change fairly good methods for better ones.
He did things over and over again because he had no system.
He thought he knew all there was to know about his business.
He tried to economize by cutting down his advertising appropriation.
He was a good, honest man, but he did not do business in a business way. —Success.

A Horse Which Thought.

Instances of great intelligence in horses are on record in numerous as the horses themselves, but there are few which make prettier stories than is related in the country by a Parisian.

At Vincennes, in my childhood, he writes, we had two very well trained horses of fine blood. One day while one of them, Prunelle, was passing by Luyer's door he noticed that the door on her back the child slipped and rolled ed between the horse's feet.

Prunelle stopped instantly and held one blind foot in air. She seemed to fear to move the foot for fear of the step on the child. There was no room for the horse to turn nor for a man to pass in.

In that uncomfortable position, with lifted foot, however, the horse deftly patted the child as attendant crawled between her forefeet and rescued the child.

Field's Fleshing Touch.

Eugene Field was once visiting the house of Richard Henry Stoddard in New York. During the evening a certain well known physician dropped in. He was a serious man and a bit pompous. The talk turned on diet. "Doctor," said Stoddard, "I've heard that you eat two eggs at breakfast every morning the year round." "Yes," said the doctor emphatically. "No. On the contrary," said Field, interrupting the wizard. "What's the contrary of eating two eggs?" "Laying two eggs," came in deep, solemn tones from Field.

Caution.

"Do you mean to say you didn't give that horse thief a trial by-jury?"

"We didn't dare," answered Broncho Bob. "If anything had occurred as a trial took place the whole town 'ud turn out to see it, and some one would be sure to sneak in and steal some more horses."—Exchange.

Quite Pure.

Housekeeper—You claim to sell pure milk.

Milkman (obsetuindedly)—Yes'm, absolutely. Not a drop ever use in it. Second and germ proof.

Excluded.

Ascum—Well, well! I congratulate you, old man; and how is the baby to be named?

Popley—By my wife's people, I guess.—Exchange.

Mercenary.

"He's a mercenary wretch."

"What makes you think so?"

"He married Miss Goldie Rox, and I was trying to get her myself."—Chicago Post.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They effect the nerve centres and the blood so surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediate relief.

A long purpose makes a weary day.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into consumptive graves by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive in time they before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, Ont., says: I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive is up the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the Consumptive list. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and in time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I still keep it constantly in the house for colds and consumption."

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

No one can say that those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when troubled with Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Dizziness, Sallow Complexion, Pain in the side, Constipation, and disordered stomach.

The average watch represents but little more than cup of tea.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for Diarrhoea, Diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, and sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indigestion in eating a surfeit, incumbent, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one can offer cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Heads kill many more than Tails.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen:—Having been advised by others to use Burdock Blood Bitters, I did so, and am pleased to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. Mr. Cox was one of the worst of life kind. For three years he suffered from it, and my weight decreased from 200 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for three months was vomited up. I took Vegetable Discovery consisted of Pills. I am now entirely cured, and have regained my usual weight, and am healthier than I have been for years, feel like a new man. I have sold many thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to buy this medicine. I feel certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything in this letter, but am able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of confering others of as it has been of certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Suffered Agonies For 30 Hours.

New York, March 5.—After living more than thirty hours under a mass of steel beams and other debris of the collapsed Hotel Darlington, in West Forty-ninth street, Charles Latek, a cement worker, died early yesterday while being carried to Flower Hospital in an ambulance. This increases the known dead to fifteen.

C.P.R. Brakeman Hurt.

Tilbury, March 5.—J. W. Hamilton, a trainman on the C. P. R. freight going west, fell from the gangway of the engine, while passing through here yesterday morning. He was very badly injured, not having gained consciousness before being removed from here to St. Thomas Hospital.

Can You Beat This Strike Yet?

London, March 5.—The choir of the Wesleyan Church at Outram, Victoria, are striking because 13 re-instating laborers have been attached to the Church.

The Petticoat Hem.

Turning the hem of a petticoat on the right side does away with the catching of heels therein, thus tearing loose several inches of the hem. This may take a little longer at the time of making, as the seams at the bottom of the skirt have to be turned, but it will pay in the end.

Her Double Turn.

"Is there any foundation for the popular belief that the sentiments of man's body are renewed once every seven years?" inquired the female medical student.

"I do not know how it is with a man," replied the grumpy old professor, who does not approve of having women attend his lectures, "but I have read of a certain female whose body underwent two complete physical changes in the course of a very few minutes."

"How and when did such a wonderful thing happen?"

"It was Lot's wife. You remember, she turned to rubber and then almost at once turned to salt."

Security For the Future.

Wife—Darling, we dined at the Squatcom just one week ago to-day. Do you realize that we must make our dinner out? Husband—Suppose we don't. Wouldn't they like it? Wife—Why, they never would forgive us. I'm sure they would never ask us again. Husband—Good! Then we won't go.

What He Wanted to Say.

"So," demanded the cross-examining lawyer, "you desire to make a categorical denial of all these charges, do you?"

"No, sor," answered the witness, "but I'll say there ain't a worrud of truth in any of them."

THE PRESBYTERY AND ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

A PART OF THE PROCEEDINGS WHICH ARE OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO BELLEVILLE PEOPLE.

A Kingston correspondent writes: The action of the Presbytery of Kingston, at their meeting on March 1st, regarding St. Andrew's Church and the resignation of their minister, the Rev. Mr. Macleod, is apt to be misunderstood. From the report given to the press by one of the pastors, it would appear doubtless an intentional, that there was harmonious action on the part of the Presbytery and that the decision arrived at was unanimous. It was far otherwise. It is well, therefore, that full and correct information should be given, as the final issue has not yet been reached.

First of all, it was a very small meeting of the Presbytery, only twelve being present out of forty-two members. This no doubt owing to a snowstorm that prevailed. For the same reason perhaps the appointed representatives of St. Andrew's congregation failed, with the exception of one, to put in an appearance. This one, Mr. Hunt, secretary to the Board of Management, stood alone as the representative of the church; no elder being present, a most unusual thing, as the business was the resignation of their Moderator and the minister. After a service of thirty years, and now completely broken down in health.

It was learned from the representative that a congregational meeting had been held to consider what retiring allowance should be made to their minister, as long with them, and now compelled, through infirmity, to resign. It was further learnt that, as the result of several meetings and much discussion up and down, throughout the congregation, a canvass was made to make Mr. Macleod a parting present, and the sum of $600 or $700 was likely to be raised. It was on the strength of this the Presbytery was asked to accept Mr. Macleod's resignation.

Thereupon a discussion began which lasted for three hours and showed that the Presbytery were quite in doubt as to what was best to be done. Even Mr. Macleod himself began to doubt whether he had done rightly in resigning and felt tempted, as he said, to withdraw his resignation and give him time to himself and all parties to deal with the question wisely and fairly.

Early in the discussion the Rev. Dr. Mackie had moved, and seconded to the effect that the whole matter be referred back to the congregation for further discussion in the light of the mind of the church and the status of the ministry, and that meanwhile leave of absence be granted to Mr. Macleod, he providing supply satisfactory to the Presbytery. This resolution was seconded by Prof. Ross and supported by Prof. McComb. It was contended that St. Andrew's was an historic church with a prestige, and a congregation that would not knowingly do anything that would tend to reflect discredit on themselves or the ministry, and the Presbyterian Church in the land. It was believed that with the aid of wise counsel and calm conference it would be clearly understood that the General Assembly contemplates a retiring allowance for jaded and infirm ministers, and expects city churches especially, to make as ample provision as possible; and that also it would be made clear to the people that the minister has claims and rights which could not be easily set aside, were it considered prudent to prefer them.

Mr. Hunt, however, assured the Presbytery that the congregation had considered the whole matter in the fullest light, and when the vote was taken the resolution was lost.

Several things were then proposed by the Rev. Mr. Laird, of Cooke's Church, Kingston, and Mr. Binnie, of Deseronto, but were withdrawn. Finally Mr. Binnie, supported by the Rev. Dr. Macdonnell, moved that the congregation be earnestly asked to make their gift to Mr. Macleod at least a thousand dollars, and Mr. Macleod's resignation be accepted contingently.

Against this it was urged that the Presbytery could not, with any sense of propriety, name any sum to the congregation; that it was lowering the ministry to bring one of its members before a congregation in forms unseemly as it were, and that the acceptance of a resignation ought not, and could not, be made contingent on the congregation supplying with such a request.

The motion, however, on being put to the vote was carried there upon the Rev. Dr. Mackie and Prof. McComb lodged the following dissent: "We dissent from the action of the Presbytery, as in our judgment infringing on the rights of the ministry and dangerous to its dignity."

The Rev. T. Wilkins, clerk of the Presbytery, also lodged this dissent, but afterwards withdrew it, not being sure whether in such a position he could do it.

Until the last roll of 1903 Wall Paper is sold—and gone.

Of course it's policy to sell the old out but we have not much of it left.

We have tremendous quantities of New Papers in, and more coming each week We are showing Papers now from a stock second to none in Canada whether of Variety, Style, or Price.

Some dealers have been telling people that Ingrain Papers are out, this is the most absurd kind of a statement and must only come from ignorance or want of stock—About as much Ingrain used now as ever and when we tell you we have 48 shades to select from, you may understand decorative subjects.

No Such Thing As Luck In Successful Decorating

Successful decoration must be the outcome of study—of thought rather than of mere chance.

In the chance room there will surely be something wrong.

Possibly the color. Perchance Drawing. — Likely both.

Whether Chamber, Drawing Room, Living Room, Library or Den, the room must be treated with thought of surroundings, of furniture of complexion, of lighting, of size.

The environment of a room with North or East exposure must not be blue, while either West or Southern exposure may use blue to advantage

How about Crimsons, Greens and Brown—where may these colors be used—just ask your decorator, if he is worthy the name he can tell you.

We solicit your test of our ability on this or other decorative subjects.

A Talented Lady.

Miss Klugston, Grass and Times has this to say of Miss Sinclair, sister of Ald. Sinclair, of this city:

"Those who attended the morning service in Knox Church last Sunday could not fail to be very much impressed with the pleasing address of Miss Sinclair, late of Indore, Central India. For upwards of one hour the speaker held the rapt attention of the congregation as she directed each mind to that far away section of the British Empire. Possessing a refined and attractive personality with a gift of language that can hardly be excelled, the speaker prefaced her remarks with information relative to general existing conditions in that distant country, whose inhabitants comprise one fifth of the population of the whole world. She dwelt on missionary progress along educational and medical lines, made reference to the fact that Christian sentiment had so permeated the fifth life of India that in many places, where a few years ago an open Sunday was quite the custom, at the present time many of the business houses, educational institutions, etc., close down self Sunday in observed as a day of rest."

PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.

The great musical event of the season will be the concert by the Philharmonic Society in the City Hall, Thursday evening, March 17. Only a limited number of tickets can be sold and subscribers have first choice of seats. Particulars in advertisement.

The Market.

There was only a fair market today, owing to the bad condition of many roads leading into the city. Prices were rather high for all products offered for sale, being as follows: Butter 22 to 24c per pound, eggs 25c to 30c per dozen, chickens 70c to $1.00 per pair, ducks $1.50 per pair. Potatoes sold at 90c per bag.

CIVIC COMMITTEES IN REGULAR SESSION

New Assessor Will Be Appointed by Council on Monday Evening Next.

New Hose Recommended for Fire Brigade—The City Clerk's Telephone.

Shuffle in Police Court Duties—$300 Grant to the Hospital —Other Matters.

At the meeting of the various Civic Committees, held last evening, the business transacted was of a great extent of a routine nature. Mayor Chown and all the aldermen excepting Ald. Salman, were in attendance.

GAS WORKS.

Ald. Sinclair, Chairman, presided. The following accounts were recommended to be paid:

Pay Sheet No. 24	$128.00
Telephone Co.	2.25
M. Stor	1.00
Queen City Oil Co.	485.70

The matter of prices for oil was left in the hands of the chairman and manager.

Moved by the Mayor and resolved, that the treasurer be authorized to draw a cheque in favor of W. P. Hudson for $150 for insurance premium on gas plant.

PUBLIC WORKS.

In this Committee, presided over by the Chairman, Ald. McFee, the only account presented was the pay sheet, amounting to $154.12.

Ald. Painter called attention to Emily street, which was in a bad condition owing to the repairs following the walks and running into residences.

The Street Surveyor said that that locality was always in the same predicament every spring. He would endeavor to afford relief as soon as it was practicable.

WATER WORKS.

Ald. Reid (Victoria) presided over this Committee, in the absence of Ald. Salman. The passing of the following accounts was the only business transacted:

Pay Sheet	$9.98
Telegraph Co.	.60
F. D. Ford	3.71

FIRE.

Ald. Marsh, Chairman, presided. The accounts passed were:

J. Lewis & Co.	$10.08
J. S. McKeown	7.20

The Chairman called attention to the fact that Chief Campbell had asked for 500 feet of new hose.

A motion prevailed that the Chairman secure prices for that quantity of hose.

In the Light and Market Committees the only business transacted was the passing of two accounts, namely, Trenton Electric Company $339.63, and Downey Co. $40.50.

EXECUTIVE.

Ald. Painter, Chairman, presided over this Committee. The following accounts were passed:

Trenton Electric & Water Co.	$ 2 41
Chief Campbell	20.00
H. B. Hunt	75.00
T. Thomson	75.00

Some Telephone Talk.

An account of $12.50 from the Telephone Company caused some discussion. It was in regard to the yearly account for a telephone service at the City Clerk's residence.

Ald. Sinclair and McFee spoke against paying the account. The Clerk was in the office all day and could be seen if it was necessary.

Mayor Chown stated that the city paid that amount when Mr. Manson was collector in the City Hall, and it was sometimes convenient to call up the Clerk-Solicitor at his residence.

The Clerk stated that personally he did not care much whether there was a 'phone in his residence or not, but he would be willing to bear half the expense.

A motion of Ald. McFee that the matter be not entertained prevailed.

Grant to the Hospital.

A communication was read from Mrs. R. J. Hall, of the Hospital Board, asking for the annual grant of $900 to that institution, as the money was needed.

Mayor Chown moved that the request be granted.

Ald. Green, in speaking of the hospital, cited a case where a patient was paying $10 a week for treatment and at the end of the month was rated at $10 was added to the bill.

Mayor Chown — "Perhaps there were extra circumstances in the case."

The Mayor's motion was unanimously adopted.

Police Court Duties.

The following recommendation, signed by Judge Lazier and Police Magistrate Flint, as Police Commissioners, caused some discussion:

"That the sum of $50 be paid annually to the Chief of Police for performing the following duties: He is to attend the Police Court and give to the Police Court Clerk a return of names of parties in each, amount of fines and costs, and all necessary information required to be entered in the return book kept by the Police Court Clerk, as well as pay over to said Clerk all moneys received by him under warrants of Court or otherwise."

Ald. Green asked if this was new work.

Mayor Chown said it was new work and the Chief was not compelled to do it. The City Clerk is Police Court Clerk, but his duties were such that it was impossible for him to attend to the Court in every petty case which was brought up.

Ald. Gordon thought the Police Commissioners should instruct the Chief to do this work without extra salary.

Ald. McFee stated that the Chief attended the court every day and not much extra time would be taken up to do the work referred to. He moved that the recommendation from the Commissioners be not entertained.

Ald. Ketchabon thought that if extra duties were imposed on the Chief he should be remunerated.

Ald. Sinclair said that as the matter came from the Commissioners the Council could not do much. They were the controllers of the police department.

The Clerk made an explanation, stating that he was willing to attend the police court proceedings and did so when his services were required on behalf of the city. Often there were cases tried which took considerable time, and in the end there was scarcely anything in it for the city. He would in all probability have to neglect other important city matters if he were compelled to spend hours in the police court.

Ald. McFee's motion was defeated, and a motion that the Commissioners' recommendation be adopted prevailed.

Other Matters.

It was decided to introduce, at the Council meeting on Monday a by-law to appoint an assessor.

The question of procuring a vacant lot adjoining the hospital lot and leading on to Bear street was brought up.

Mayor Chown stated that the Government desired this lot so as to be able to drive to the drill shed, when it is erected, from Dundas street. It would prevent the parade ground from being cut up by vehicles. The lot in question was the property of The Sun and Hastings Savings and Loan Company; $400 was the amount asked upon it.

A number of the Aldermen spoke against paying such a sum, as they considered it was exorbitant. Some suggested that the city appropriate the property and leave it to arbitration.

Mayor Chown stated that $200 had been offered the company, but it was refused. To arbitrate might cost considerable.

A motion prevailed that $300 be offered to the company for the lot. This concluded the business and the committees adjourned.

LAID AWAY BY LOVING FRIENDS.

OBSEQUIES OF THE LATE MISS NELLIE CUNNINGHAM THIS AFTERNOON.

The funeral of the late Miss Marguerite Cunningham (Nellie) Cunningham took place this afternoon from the family residence, Yeomans street, and a large number of citizens expressed their sympathy with the bereaved family by attending the obsequies. Services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Wallace, pastor of the Bridge Church, and were very impressive. The bearers were Messrs. Percy Bird, Sills, Walter Luscombe, Frank Harden, Frank Gowsell, Henry Thompson. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, being contributed by the following relatives and friends:

Sister, Ajax—Family.

Pillow—Baptist Church and Sunday School.

Star—Miss Herbert.

Cross—Mr. Wills and Miss Emma.

Basket—The Bridge Church ladies' department, Walter Luscombe, Misses Lizzie and Mina Bryant, Frank Harden, Henry Thompson, Misses G. and P. Thompson, Bloor, Ont. and Falls, the Hitchen family, Mrs. Perk and family, Miss Proctor, Misses Vera and Wenzie Rice, Miss Alice McKeown. Misses M. and N. Symons, Moore Mountain, Miss Mary Ory, Miss Minnie Thompson, Miss Jennie Irvine, Miss Florence Backus and Mr. Henry Doyle.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Japanese Fleet Bombarded Port Arthur for Three Days—Cable From St. Petersburg Says Czar is in a Deplorable State of Mind and is Constantly Praying for Miracles.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

New York, March 5.—There has been a three days' bombardment by the Japanese off Port Arthur, according to a Herald despatch from Tien Tsin, timed at 8.30 this (Saturday) morning. The attack was kept up at intervals on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The Japanese ships attacking the town were in action first at a distance of nine and three-eighth miles from the forts and then they drew closer, their range being four and three-quarter miles.

New York, March 5.—The Czar and Czarina, according to a cable from St. Petersburg, are reduced to a deplorable state of mind by the war. The Czar is constantly praying with Father John of Cronstadt, the miracle worker, and the most influential personage from a religious standpoint, is the Greek shaman, said to be sending propitiatory offerings in all directions to all the famous shrines.

The Czar's condition is causing grave anxiety, as it is feared that his mind may give way.

DELIGHTFUL EVENING WITH GRADUATES' CLUB.

THREE ADMIRABLE PAPERS AND TUNEFUL MUSIC LAST NIGHT.

It is a pity, indeed, that more of our citizens do not take advantage of the literary and musical feasts provided by the Graduates' Club on Friday evening of each week in the lecture hall of St. Agnes' School. There was a fair audience present last night, but now here near, in view of the merits of the entertainment deserved. The programme was furnished entirely by local talent, being, however, none the less enjoyable on that account. Col. Ponton was chairman, and his felicitous remarks flowing as usual, very pleasantly.

The first number was a piano solo by Miss L. M. A. Thompson, played with the finish and charm for which that young lady is noted.

Then came a paper by Miss Gardiner, B.A., of Albert College, entitled "A Description of Rome." It was highly interesting, showing how the wonders and antiquities of Rome, as it appears to-day, impressed a descriptive, liberty-loving and keen-sighted Canadian visitor. Miss Gardiner's essay was listened to with rapt attention, and was brimful of interesting data and beautiful descriptive anecdote.

Mr. Luton followed with a paper on "The Literature of Ancient Rome and Greece," it being peculiarly apropos after the remarks of Miss Gardiner. The talented High School pedagogue showed a deep interest in and mastery of his subject, making it plain, by quotation and comparison of style, that the literature of the ancients had left a lasting and valuable effect on the greater poets of the Anglo-Saxon world, [illegible].

Mrs. Burrows followed with two tasteful violin selections, the last a dainty minuet, being played in fairy style. Mrs. (Col.) Campbell acted as accompanist.

Next came a paper by Miss Moodie, one of the faculty of the Collegiate School, whose subject was "The Relation of Expression to Literature," which she was a very able one. It was finished and scholarly essay. Miss Moodie showed the relation to utterance with the greater poets of ancient and modern times, her explanation, the hidden beauties of a theme were often brought to light. The fair essayist showed considerable dramatic power and a keen insight into human nature. Col. Ponton's remark, at the close of Miss Moodie's effort, that she was a worthy descendant of a distinguished and brilliant father, fittingly voiced the feelings of the audience, who were not slow in making those feelings known by liberal applause.

At the conclusion of the entertainment Mr. Morden moved, and Mr. E. G. Sills seconded a vote of thanks for the entertainers of the evening.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Tennis begins in earnest in Belleville! Hockey in Ontario is saved! E. Gene Porter, of Belleville, has withdrawn his name from the list of the O.H.A. executive. The high of relief that goes up from the hockey world resembles that breeze that did business around town on Monday night.

The Telegram runs a "Dreamers' Corner" for its millions of readers. Why doesn't it get its home dreamaker to make a new platform for little "Cully" Robertson, its infallible sport editor.

The Beechgrove-Listowel game has been postponed again. They may have to pull straws for the championship yet.

Montreal Wanderers refused trophies by the Shamrocks and Stanley Cup trustees, and the series is off. Looks as though the Wanderers were afraid of the Senators.

Midland beat Stratford last night by 11 to 8, and it would appear, judging by the score, that Stratford and Belleville are about in the same class, as they each beat at Midland by 3 goals. It is altogether likely that Stratford will more than even the score on the round on their own ice, and Belleville would have to have done the same had they been given the chance.

Mark how history repeats itself. The game with Belleville was said by Middleboro to be the greatest game of hockey ever played here. The game with Stratford is now said to be the same thing.

The Brandon hockey team is the latest to have home and go looking for trouble. The team is coming east to play the Ottawas for the Stanley cup, the games to be played in Montreal. It is safe to say the Senators will put their brand on the Brandoners.

Never in time more precious than when some member of the family is stricken down by an attack of bowel trouble. The doctor is distant, but if Perry Davis' Painkiller is near all danger is ended.

A new Catholic church, to cost $15,000, will be erected at Stratford, Ont.

A House of Refuge for the County of Victoria, will be erected at Lindsay. Messrs. M. Millar & Co., Toronto, are the architects.

DIED IN HIS CABIN.

C. Lee of Yorkton Shot Dead By His Brother.

Winnipeg, March 5.—The body of Silas Stanteete, an Alameda settler, was found in his cabin yesterday. He had not been seen for some days, and neighbors on visiting the farm made the discovery. Deceased was about 55 years of age, and came to Canada from Nottingham, England. C. Lee, a young man of Yorkton, while hunting with his brother Thursday, knelt down to fire at a deer ahead. The young brother also fired at the deer, and the latter received the full charge in his head, causing instant death.

C.P.R. EXPRESS DERAILED.

Accident at Forks Station, East of Chapleau—One Killed.

Fort William, March 5.—At two o'clock yesterday morning the westbound C.P.R. express left the track at Forks Station, about 100 miles east of Chapleau. One man named McGowan, who boarded the train at Biscotasing, is reported killed, and six people more or less injured. It is also reported that the colonist car was wrecked or burned. None of the passengers in the sleepers were hurt.

Revolution For Mexico.

New York, March 5.—The Herald says, Mexico is on the eve of a revolution, according to Col. H. H. Thompson, who has just returned from that country, prospective upon President Diaz' release of the reins of Government on Lincoln's inauguration Secretary of War, as Vice-President.

"Limantour is a sympathizer of the church," said Col. Thompson. "The belief prevails that Limantour will return to the church the lands which have been confiscated and this will be a signal for a revolution."

Mineral Lands Tied Up.

Toronto, March 5.—At the meeting of the Mining Institute last night President Coste said mineral lands are tied up by the greed of speculators, only one-half of one per cent. of 400,000 granted being developed. He proposed a work assessment of $5 an acre as the remedy, but the Institute divided sharply on the proposal, Director of Mines Gibson said that in the older portions of Ontario they could never hope to get coal of value, but peat briquetting had given great satisfaction.

O'Neil Found Guilty.

Toronto, March 5.—"Unanimously guilty" was the verdict of the jury at the sessions yesterday in the case of Michael O'Neil, the man charged with attempting to hold up the C.P.R. by making tar statement that he would fix the jury in the Dillon inquest. T. C. Robinette, K. C., put up a good defence for O'Neil, but Crown-Attorney Drayton had the evidence. Judge Winchester's charge was straight against the prisoner.

True Bills Returned.

Toronto, March 5.—The grand jury brought in true bills against A. W. The enquiry into the assessment branch of the investigation will be resumed this morning, before Judge Morgan.

Majesty Favor Treaty.

Paris, March 5.—La Presse has tabulated the responses it has received to a query addressed to members of the Chamber of Deputies, which show that 270 out of 333 of the members favor the treaty of alliance with Russia. Only 11 of the 63 members who were not in favor of that instrument expressed hostility to it.

How to Winter the Baby

A very important problem to which the answer is simple and obvious, viz: Clothe it warmly and feed it properly. Sounds easy, does it not? And yet it is safe to say that not one mother in a thousand understands the Baby's needs and how to feed it PROPERLY. In Baby the foundations of the future man or woman are being laid and everything depends on their being strong and secure. Every part must be developed; therefore, it is essential that the food given shall contain the elements necessary to produce good firm flesh, tough muscles, good hard bones, rich red blood and strong nerves. Then Baby's stomach must be considered. The food should be concentrated, palatable and easily digested. This is the ideal food and

3 MINISTERS RUFFLED

Hon. J. M. Gibson, Hon. J. R. Stratton and the Premier.

"Man From Manitoulin" Gives Reasons Why He Wants Papers Relating to Insurance Company and Uses Up "You" in Addressing the Provincial Secretary, Who Retorts in Kind—Premier Runs Into Deep Water.

Toronto, March 5.—The dull proceedings of the Legislature were unlivened yesterday afternoon by the man from Manitoulin, who made an attack on an insurance company of which the Provincial Secretary is president. Mr. Gamey moved for copies of Orders-in-Council authorizing an increase in the capital stock of the People's Life Insurance Company during the last two years, with all correspondence relating thereto.

Mr. Gamey said he had selected this company because the president of the company was also the Minister in charge of the department having control of the insurance companies. He quoted some figures from the report of the inspector of insurance, showing that in the year 1901 the People's Life Insurance Company sold debenture stock to the amount of $103,800, and allowed commission of $25,383 on the sale. In the year 1902 the company sold debenture stock to the amount of $104,440. He wanted to know who bought this stock and answered the question himself by saying that in 1901 T. P. Coffee bought $50,000, and J. Holland $50,000. In 1902 the debenture stock sold in 1902, Hon. J. R. Stratton bought $30,000, and C. Klosper $50,000.

In the report of 1901 Mr. Gamey showed the total premium income of the company was $30,720-48, and the total claims against it $14,329.97. The Premier's surplus figures were simplicity itself, compared with the statement of affairs of this company, for he found that the total expenditure for 1901 were $44,954.79, while the ordinary income was only $32,874.82. In 1902, showing a deficit for the year, leaving reserve and commission unpaid for sales of annuities, of $2,096.63.

In 1902 the premium income was $18,889.01, and the advances to shareholders $30,650.31; travelling expenses, $3,530.77, and agents' commissions, $9,506.96. The total income was $51,135.32, and the total expenditures, $79,317.63.

Secretary on Statistics.

There was a law on the statute book forbidding the payment of dividends out of capital account, and this company had been paying dividends, notwithstanding the excess of expenditure over income. The figures showed a very large amount as extraordinary, and the impairment of capital was such that he was constrained to call attention to the condition of affairs.

Mr. Gamey then quoted from an insurance journal, Money and Risks, which had said that the company would not be able to carry on business unless the inspector of insurance was partial to it.

Mr. Gamey had been informed that the People's Life Insurance Co. Insurance Company, that the reserve on figures of only $46,000, and paid advances to agents of $30,000.

Mr. Gibson Replies.

Mr. Gibson, Attorney-General, said the question was not whether the inspector of Insurance had some doing business for an insurance company, but was the inspector doing his duty. He had read the article referred to by Mr. Gamey, in which there was no reference to Mr. Hunter's sons. If anyone thought the Inspector of Insurance was showing any favoritism he should make a charge against him. The object of the motion was to attack the company of which the Provincial Secretary is treasurer, but he had no objection to the return asked for being brought down.

Question to Gamey.

The Provincial Secretary, as president of the People's Life Insurance Company, craved the indulgence of the House, and his first remark was that the beautiful character of the Hon. gentleman (Mr. Gamey) was exhibited here this afternoon. The People's Insurance Company, he said, was doing business under an act of the Legislature, and he showed that the statutes gave the company the right to issue debentures up to $250,000.

The directors of the company, he said, were C. Klosper of Guelph, D. W. Karn of Woodstock, T. H. Lennox, Frank Coffee, F. M. Holland and himself, none of whom were disbonorable men or who would be connected with a company that did not do a legitimate business.

The receipts of the company were $156,215, and expenses of management $31,474.

Mr. Gamey: Would you tell the House whether the receipts include the sale of debenture stock?

Mr. Stratton (smiling): You may tell the House what you like. I am making this speech.

He went on to say that it was a good showing for a company carrying $2,000,000!

It was well known that the hon. member for Manitoulin knew something about insurance companies, and had some experience in handling cash, but perhaps it was not so much the advantage of the policyholders that he was considering, but it was more a desire to call attention to something with which he could connect the president of the People's Life and the Provincial Secretary.

Gamey to Stratton.

Mr. Gamey said inspector motive had been attributed to him, but he wondered if the same feelings actuated the Insurance Journal. Money and Risk. He proceeded to question the Provincial Secretary and the Attorney-General, and spoke on one occasion directly across the floor, using the pronoun "You."

Premier Replies.

Mr. St. John: He's just as much in order as the Provincial Secretary was a few minutes ago.

Mr. Ross: They're both wrong.

Men just as competent as you are are saying that the Dominion Life Insurance is unfair," was Mr. Gamey's last assault. The motion passed without further ado.

A couple of bills were introduced and read a first time.

Mr. Tucker's bill to amend the Municipal Act by giving counties the same privileges as are enjoyed by towns and cities, to erect telephone lines, as well as his bill to increase the width of sleigh runners to four feet, was read a second time.

Mr. Lee's bill to reduce the number of jurors was likewise lost, a measure of the same member to amend the Public Schools Act, to compel townships and cities to contribute towards the fees of examiners, was sent to committee.

A number of private bills were read a second time.

Bounty on Sugar Beets.

The Premier replied to Mr. Hoyle: There is no record on the files of the Treasury Department concerning the closing up of the sugar beet factory at Wiarton. No portion of bounty for the last year's business has been paid as yet. It is reported in the sworn statement of the Wiarton Beet Sugar Company that the beets are "not yet all paid for." The Government's bounty is being withheld, pending further information as to the payment for the beets supplied by farmers.

In reply to Mr. Carscallen (Hamilton) the Premier said engineering would indicate that the rules of the House have not been rigidly enforced as to the production of maps according to scale.

FIRES.

$73,000 Goes Up in smoke at St. John's Ore.

St. John's, Que., March 5.—A serious conflagration, which originated in G. Normandin's fur store, at the north end of Richelieu street, has been burning since 7.30 last evening. The loss so far amounts to at least $75,000.

Dead Line at Halifax.

Halifax, March 5.—The worst conflagration that has occurred here this year broke out at 12.10 last night, at the corner of Duke and Granville streets. It spread to the lower floor of T. H. Carroll's fruit and commission merchant, and in less than 20 minutes the entire building was a mass of flames, and the brick block it was completely wiped out. The British American Hotel, south of the corner and on Duke street, was completely gutted, and the Commercial Hotel on Duke street, west of Carroll's, was also badly damaged. The loss, it is thought, will amount to about $25,000.

Fatally Burned.

Hamilton, March 5.—Thursday night Mrs. James Hall, 275 North Hughson street, was fatally burned by the explosion of a can of coal oil. She and her husband were playing cards when the lamp was upset. While the other members of the family were stamping the fire out, Mrs. Hall picked up some of the burning coals in her apron, and ran out into the yard. The husband and children did not know that her clothes were on fire, and they did not discover the fact until she was so badly burned that she died yesterday morning.

Three Persons Burned.

Oklahoma City, Ok., March 5.—Three persons perished in Wednesday's grass fire, and the financial loss by the fire and gale is estimated at half a million dollars. Further reports of loss by both fire and wind indicate that the first estimate was too low. The most from which reports of damage by wind come cover 100 miles square. The Little Town of Francis, west of Mangon, was destroyed by fire, but no particulars are obtainable.

Hurt in Mutiny at Sea.

London, March 5.—A despatch received by Lloyds yesterday from Bahia, Brazil, says that the British steamer Anistadon (Capt. Roberts, from New York, Feb. 12, for Montevideo, Buenos Ayres and Rosario) has arrived there and reported that a mutiny occurred on the vessel, in which the captain and four men were injured.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil now. Not next week or next month, but now. You need it to put fat on your bones and strength in your body to stand the cold and trying weather of the next few months.

Nine-tenths of the population would be benefited by taking Scott's Emulsion regularly three times a day for a month or more every fall to fortify and strengthen the system against the cold and constant changes that occur through the winter. The benefit is particularly marked with young, delicate children. No food that they can take begins to compare with Scott's Emulsion.

Pure cod liver oil is scarce but if you get Scott's Emulsion you'll be sure to get only the purest and best oil.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

THE KING ON THE WAR

Good Understanding With France Makes For Peace.

No Doubtful the Conflict and Hopes the Press Will Attenuate Difficulties Not Aggravate Them—But Should Complications Arise the Union Between France and England Will Be of Greatest Service.

Paris, March 7.—The Matin's London correspondent sends to his paper the report of a conversation held Saturday evening with a personage intimate with King Edward, who had just left the palace. This personage said the King spoke upon the subject of the war in the Far East and repeated His Majesty's words:

"I am much distressed at the Russo-Japanese war, which I consider a most deplorable event. On the other hand I consider that our good understanding with France has never been more useful than it is at present, and believe that it is likely to become more and more useful not only in the interest of France and Great Britain, but in the higher interest of general peace. Should complications arise, despite all efforts to prevent them, the union between France and England will render the greatest service. That union must be closely maintained for the good of all, whatever may happen. I hope the press of all countries, the English press included, will strive to attenuate difficulties rather than to aggravate them."

The correspondent adds that the interlocutor not only authorized a repetition of the King's words, but read the correspondent's despatch affirming that His Majesty's remarks were correctly rendered.

Russian Fleet Near Great Britain.

St. Petersburg, March 7.—Advices from Vladivostock say that the 2,000 Japanese troops who landed at Plaksin Bay (on the east coast of northern Corea) are advancing toward Wuson (218 miles from Gensan), with the intention of ultimately reaching Hunchun (on the left bank of the Tumen River, about 100 miles west of Vladivostock), and threatening the Russian flank. In order to checkmate this, a Russian outpost 100 strong, which crossed the Tumen, is advancing to occupy Koyrong, on the Tumen, a walled city commanding the trails along which the Japanese must pass.

The naval mobilization, foreshadowed in these despatches, was partially decided yesterday. Three eastern provinces of Eastern Russia, Viatka, Perm and Ufa, are included in the plan, the purpose stated being the strengthening of the crews of the Pacific squadron.

The Novosti prints a significant editorial, which is very conciliatory toward Great Britain. The paper argues that the understanding between the two countries with regard to an Asiatic policy will assure peace in Asia, without which the moral development of Russian and British interests there would be impossible. If Great Britain, The Novosti says, would agree to an outlet for Russia to the Indian Ocean Great Britain's possessions in India would be unconditionally guaranteed by Russia.

The Novoe Vremya also discussed the offices of British friendship, but with bad grace, saying: "John Bull believes he has a better chance to reaching the winning-post with Great Britain and Japan in double harness than with a trick including the American mustang."

Referring to the assistance rendered by the British cruiser Talbot to the Italian sailors at the battle of Chemulpo, The Novosti declares that all Russia respectfully acknowledges the noble and chivalrous conduct of the commander of the vessel—"conduct, the journal adds, "that does great honor to the British nation, which has always been a model of generosity and gallantry."

Paris, March 7.—The criminal chamber of the Court of Cassation has ordered that a complete investigation of the Dreyfus case shall be made before the united three chambers of the court. Awaiting a final decision, the court stands adjourned until the investigation shall have been concluded, which will probably be next July.

A Monster Meeting at Melbourne Enters Protest—Hon. Alfred Lyttelton Says Practical and Commercial Side Should Be Kept Well in View By Educational Institutions—Dr. Jameson and South Africa.

London, March 7.—(C. A. P.)—The labor organizations of Melbourne, at a meeting attended by 5,000 people, protested against the importation of Chinese into the Rand without its being sanctioned by a referendum vote.

Dr. Jameson Once More Comes.

London, March 7.—(C. A. P.)—The South African news says that Dr. Jameson's leadership will take a direction towards a not untried precipice. Patriotic men must choose between him and England.

Lyttelton on Education.

London, March 7.—(C.A.P.)—Right Hon. Alfred Lyttelton, M. P., Colonial Secretary, speaking at Liverpool University, spoke of the educational value of talking to one another on the stimulating subjects that were taught. Nobody had enjoyed those more than himself, but he thought in later years it had been a little overdone. He urged the desirability of keeping the practical and commercial side of education well in view.

Churches in Australia Reunited.

London, March 7.—(C. A. P.)—All the churches of Sydney are aroused by a scandal report of the New South Wales Commission, reporting that the practice of preventing marriages is common in all classes of the community, and that there is an alarming increase in the number of illegal operations.

Regina Trade With New Zealand.

London, March 7.—(C. A. P.)—Premier Seddon of New Zealand says that before the end of the year the working of the new preferential tariff will divert half a million pounds of New Zealand's trade to England.

No Chinese For Sudden.

London, March 7.—(C. A. P.)—Premier Seddon wants New Zealand to petition the King to veto the act of the Transvaal Legislature legalizing the importation of Chinese labor for the Rand mines.

A WOMAN'S AWFUL DEED.

Shoots Her Husband, Tries to Burn Herself and Son, then Poisons and Shoots.

Elgin, Ill., March 7.—After shooting her husband three times and trying to kill her seven-year-old son, Mrs. Gustav Stanson, locked her wounded husband out of doors and carried the boy to her bedroom, where she wrapped him in blankets, applied a match and then lay down to die with him when the fire spread.

The boy struggled, but finding his efforts to free himself in vain, crawled under blankets to keep from inhaling the smoke. Mrs. Stanson heard the police pounding on the door, and then to make sure she would die, swallowed carbolic acid and fired a bullet into her throat. She died Saturday afternoon. Stanson and his son will recover. Domestic differences caused the trouble.

Turkey Causes Unrest.

Berlin, March 7.—Considerable concern has been caused in Berlin by a telegram from Vienna to The Tageblatt announcing that the Sultan has rejected the plan of organization for the Macedonian gendarmerie. His Majesty has also refused to ratify the agreement with Bulgaria. The Austrian Government is said to be looking forward to developments in the Balkans in the coming spring with great anxiety. The Cologne Gazette further announces that Turkey is assembling a flying squadron and warships, and has ordered the mobilization of her torpedo flotilla.

King Edward Better.

London, March 7.—King Edward, who is suffering from a cold, is much better and will preside at a sitting of the Privy Council at Buckingham Palace to-day.

The King wanted to go to St. Paul's Saturday according to program, but his physician preferred that he remain indoors for a day or two.

Halifax, N. S., March 7.—(St. John, N. B., March 6.)—As the result of a fire which broke out early Saturday morning in an isolated farmhouse at Black River, five miles from Buctouche, three persons were burned to death and another fatally injured. The dead are: William Savoy, aged 22; J. Addus Savoy, aged 14, and Joseph Savoy, aged 12, sons of Louis Savoy. Alfred, who jumped from a window of the burning building, is so badly injured that he is not expected to recover.

Killed in Knife and Pistol Fight.

Winterset, Ia., March 7.—After a terrible fight, in which pistols and knives were used, John Thornborough shot and instantly killed Fred Peacock and perhaps fatally wounded Peacock's father, 60 years old. Thornborough is terribly gashed about the neck and face. He is charged with murder. Thornborough tried to induce his wife, from whom he had separated, to leave the Peacock house.

WHY WAS IT OMITTED?

The Winnipeg Tribune, a staunch Liberal paper of the old school, thus calls attention to an apparent piece of cowardice on the part of the Laurier Government:

"In the 190? tables of the Trade and Navigation returns, received from Ottawa A few days ago, we observe the omission of the interesting table showing the amount of customs duties paid per head of population. Surely this fact that Canadians to-day are paying more customs per head than ever before in the history of Canada, did not prompt the Government to purposely make the omission, though appearances are decidedly that way. We have the blue book before us and we guess it, we find ample space comparing it with the corresponding page in former years, for the missing column of figures.

"The amount of customs duties paid per head of population from 1896 to 1903 inclusive, is as follows:

1898	4.20
1899	4.56
1900	3.82
1901	3.94
1902	3.83
1903	4.22
1899	4.84
1900	5.10
1901	5.40
1902	5.94

"In 1895-96 we remember how the Conservatives were slated for having increased the customs taxation from $3.13 per head in 1878 to $4.84 in 1891. Where do the Liberals find themselves to-day, when an administration calling under Liberal colors has raised the Customs taxation to a point far beyond anything in the previous high tariff history of the country?"

TIMELY TOPICS.

Looks as though the deluge had begun.

The Buffalo Enquirer has this item which might well be noted by Bellevillians: "Because of a frozen hydrant there was nothing to do but let a house near Niagara Falls burn to the ground. That was just a hint; next time it may be a lesson."

Don't be in too big a hurry to put away your furs in such cold March is a mighty uncertain month.

"Advising young lawyers to rush into the political arena is as good a joke as introducing a duck to water," says the Stoney Lonesome philosopher.

"How can a workingman save anything these times?" says the man on the soap block. Times fluctuate and are as changeable as the weather. As eggs go down flour goes up, cut to position coal or wood." True enough, but most men will think themselves lucky if they come out even in the spring, after a winter like this has been.

It is interesting to note that a plan is under way to raise the sum of $100,000 as a permanent fund for the Grand Lodge Masons who from old age, illness or misfortune are in need of help. The 32,000 Masons in Canada are asked to contribute $1 a year each for three years, which with interest deposits would amount to the sum required. The interest on that sum would enable the Grand Lodge to bestow $200 each on twenty deserving members.

THE TORPEDO.
(Chicago Tribune.)

At its zone a small metal pin. Behind the small metal pin a little fulminate of mercury. Behind the fulminate of mercury, a wisp of dry gun cotton. Behind the wisp of dry gun cotton, a mass of wet gun cotton. Behind the wet gun cotton a braced chamber burning with compressed air. Behind the compressed air a set of pointing cylinders. Behind everything a couple of exalted double-bladed screws. The whole little water mole answering through the waves at the rate of twenty knots an hour. The dark, stupendous, lethargic hulk of a battleship. A sudden jar. A small metal pin nudges the fulminate of mercury. The fulminate of mercury whispers to the gun cotton. An explosion and an upheaval—

Where streaked with ash and slicked with oil.
The lukewarm whirlpools close.
The Britain stars for the south with a gaping hole in its side and the shreds of the water mole sink to befit with a mould of seashells for a tombstone.

An exchange says: "Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce are usually pretty good indices of the progressiveness, or otherwise of the towns or cities of the citizens of which they are composed." Will the local Board of Trade kindly make a note of the above?

Mr. Charles Williams, the veteran English war correspondent and journalist, died on Feb. 8th, after a long illness, at his house in Brixton, at the age of 60. His son, Mr. F. G. H. Williams, a well-known Canadian journalist, is now telegraph editor of the Toronto News.

The Japs worked the shell game in Vladivostock, and of course the Russians say "never touched me."

The King is better. God Save the King.

Mr. R. R. Gamey still continues to get cheers and bouquets wherever he goes, while Stratton can't even get the name in a patent medicine ad.

With Hon. Joe Chamberlain and the president of the O.H.A. now in Egypt, and our own Mr. Johnson soon going there, the Land of the Pharaohs is right in the limelight these days.

Turkey, the telegram says, is causing unrest to the Powers. Needs proper dressing, perhaps.

Doesn't that Russian report, that "the hostile shells falledto burst," carry your thoughts back to the Boer war?

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Toronto Telegram: Stratford played in Midland last night, and were beaten by 11 to 5. The return game will, weather permitting, be played in Stratford Tuesday night. Of course these games are not for the O. H. A. championship. But they may come in handy. Should Belleville's injunction proceedings carry the season over till May or thereabouts, these games will be the means of a fair test as to the best summer resting place for a certain piece of silverware.

Reading between the lines of the above it would appear that the high-minded officials of the O.H.A. have their minds set on another shady piece of business.

As will be noted by the article in another column, the case McMillan vs. the O.H.A. has been postponed for three weeks. It looks as though, when the legal business is all over, the O.H.A. may have to send a couple of teams to Pittsburg to play the final game, there being no artificial ice rinks in Canada.

The only place we feel sorry for is Peterboro, which, after all its shady work, is now in the ditch with its "the best team in the district." It's a downright shame; after all the practising they'd done, too.

Ho! Ho! Mr. McPherson, where do you get off at anyhow?

The best thing the executive can do now is to give the championship to the Belleville Printers' hockey team. They haven't lost a match this season.

Several fires fell in Smith's Falls when they heard the news.

Taken altogether, this has been the worst mismanaged season the O.H.A. has ever known. Here is the junior championship not decided yet, and the Kingston Beechgrove, prospective champions, haven't had a game for three weeks. They have been waiting so long for a game with Belleville that the Kingston lads have nearly forgotten how to play. It really does appear that the O. H. A. should confine itself to towns and cities on the main line of the railroad. These little Jim Crow places like Listowel, Pumpkinville, Peterboro, etc., which, owing to the snow blockades, have to be reached by dog sleighs, should be put into a back country league and allowed to play for a load of hay, or something like that. If Belleville has a representative on the O.H.A. executive next season we would suggest that he make a motion to that effect.

Mr. "Tom" Phillips, the Marlboro celebrated importation, sustained a compound fracture of the collar bone in a game in Toronto on Saturday night, when the Toronto seniors beat a team of western intermediates by a score of 9 to 6, thus winning the round by 17 to 15.

The first Stanley Cup game between the Ottawas and Brandons will be played on Wednesday night.

Solomon, the Toronto caraman, will go after the Diamond Sculls again this year.

Port Hope will have two Ottawa players, Donaldson and Grimes, on its lacrosse team this summer.

Mutes Lost This Time.

On Saturday afternoon a team from the Deaf and Dumb Institution and the High School team played a match which resulted in a victory of 2 to 4 in favor of the High School boys. The referee was a student of the Institution. During the progress of the game a mute named Wm. Dand was hit upon the head with the puck, which inflicted an ugly gash.

BASKET BALL.

Alberts Played the Sleaner Game.

Kingston, March 5.—A basket ball match was played in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium between the Albert College team of Belleville and the local Y.M.C.A. five. Kingston won by 34 to 11. The Albert College team play somewhat differently from Kingston, using another style of ball and lower baskets. They also play a cleaner style of game, more elusive and without body checking. The local Y.M.C.A. team and Queen's too, do a great deal of bodying, which they adopted after contact with teams of the Waterloo type. Belleville showed good combination, but their play was rendered ineffective by the strenuous system of their opponents. About twenty Albert College students accompanied the team to Kingston. After the match the visitors were given an oyster supper. The teams were:

Y.M.C.A.—Goals, Hirsh and Mosley, defence; Coyle, centre; G. Bows and Mercer, forwards.

Referee—Harvey Milne, Kingston; timekeepers, G. Racey, Belleville, and G. Laturney, Kingston.

The people are now asking what is this Lenten Phenix. Here is your answer: It is a vegetable soap. It is a soft, fine powder, made originally in France. It cleanses more quickly than soap, bleaches perfectly, leaves the fibre of fabrics intact, and what is very important of all—there are no residue in the linen. Soap contains grease and caustic soda, and linen and woolens washed with soap always contain a trace of these. When touched by a hot iron the fabric turns yellow. Lenitive Phenix cleanses quickly and perfectly. One pound costs you 6 cents and will wash eighteen hundred collars. 6-3t

STATUES IN ITALY.

When a Monument Is Not a Monument in Rome or Florence.

Rome is in the absurd condition of possessing a monument which the municipal authorities declared nonexistent. Long, long ago a monument was raised to the philosopher Spedaliori, but never unveiled, as there was a difference of opinion about the advisability of having the monument at all. So through sun and rain, wind and hail, the poor statue stood, swathed in its dingy drapery, an eyesore and object of derision to all.

Finally, in the dead of night, to put an end to the scandal and disputes, the police stripped off the old and rotten cloth, and in the morning the Eternal City found herself enriched by the ownership of a new work of art. The citizens laughed and crowded to see what had become a curiosity, but the city fathers were furious, said the police had overstepped their powers and absolutely refused to acknowledge the existence of the monument.

Florence has had a similar experience. A tablet to Gustave Modena, in his day a celebrated actor and still more celebrated patriot, had been attached to the house in which he lived. But the authorities refused to allow it to be unveiled for fear of provoking an anti-Austrian demonstration, just as in these days when public feeling is in a state of effervescence. Day after day passed until the students made a sudden dash, and, stripping off the cloth, added another interest to the City of Lilies. The municipality here also was highly offended and informed the citizens that the tablet does not exist.

All this irresistibly raises the question, "When is a monument not a monument?" When it is in Italy!—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE USE OF IRON.

Its Effect in the Industrial World as a Barometer of Trade.

There is an old industrial tradition that the iron market is the "barometer of trade." This saying has been ascribed to many modern authorities, ranging from Jay Gould to Andrew Carnegie. As a matter of fact, it is much older than any oracle of this century or the last. It had its origin in the earliest days of the period when iron manufacture and the use of credit were simultaneously rising to importance. The basis for the tradition is that the use of iron and of its products is essential for the prosecution of virtually all other industries. Before the output of miscellaneous manufactures in a community can be much enlarged the industries concerned must be equipped with new tools and new machinery. Before a railroad system can be prepared to transport a greatly increased traffic it must have new rails, new bridges, new stations, new cars and new locomotives. In these days of the steel and less office building a "boom" in the building trade cannot go far without increasing enormously the demand for structural iron. Even in the agricultural industry it may be said that expansion and prosperity involve necessarily largely increased demand for farm machinery. Since the use of such additional equipment must precede any increase in the business of these other trades it naturally follows, first, that demand in the iron market will be felt aggressively even before the other industries have shown full measure of activity, and, second, that if such other industries foresee a period of slack demand an idle mills the first thing they will do will be to reduce their orders from he iron and steel mills.—Alexander D. Noyes in Forum.

Disgusted.

Amos Cummings of New York used to tell this story of his first assignment as a newspaper reporter: He was sent out to write up an accident where an Irish hodcarrier was injured in a fall from a building. He arrived just as two officers were assisting the injured man into the ambulance.

"What's his name?" asked Cummings of one of the officers, at the same moment pulling out his pad and pencil.

The Irishman heard him and, mistaking him for the timekeeper on the job, exclaimed, in a look of disgust covering his face:

"Isn't it trouble enough to fall three stories without being docked for the few moments I lose going to the hospital?"

Would Have Walked Too.

They tell this story in the commissioner's office at Ellis Island:

Two Irish immigrants just arrived stood one morning on the government landing watching a dredger at work a few yards away. Presently a dirty, full rigged, crawled painfully from the channel along up a ladder to the deck of the dredge. One of the Irishmen, very much surprised, turned to his companion and said:

"Look at that man! Look at him! Begorra, if I'd known the way over I'd walked too!"

A Nice Light Business.

"Oh, yes, I've opened an office," said the young lawyer. "You may remember that you saw me buying an alarm clock the other day."

"Yes," replied his friend. "You have to get up early these mornings, eh?"

"Oh, no. I use it to wake me up when it's time to go home."

The Photographer's Good Work.

"Maud's latest photograph is just lovely."

"Is it?"

"Yes. I had to ask who it was."

STORY OF AN OYSTER

TOLD BY HIMSELF ABOUT HIMSELF AND HIS TRIBE.

The Trials and Tribulations of the Succulent Bivalve From the Time of Floating Until His Appearance on the Fishmonger's Counter.

There were about 900,000 of us when, as tiny flakes of spawn—or "spat," as the oyster spawn is called—we floated out into the water one day on "the flats."

At first we were white and apparently lifeless. Then we turned gray and finally black. At this stage we became visibly alive. For several days we floated, the sport of waves and tides. Some of my brothers were carried out to sea and so vanished; others were swallowed by fish. At last we all began instinctively to sink toward the bottom.

Then began again terrible destruction. Many fell on mud—the most fatal thing a young oyster can do. These perished at once. Others attached themselves to plants and weeds which grow at the bottom of the sea. They lived for a time—so long at least as the plant remained alive. Then, when the plant died, they perished as well.

Fortunately for myself, I drifted on to a bit of "cultch"—that is to say, one of the old shells which the dredgers and oyster men so carefully scatter all over the sea floor of an oyster bed. I settled with my deep shell uppermost and my flat or right shell nearer the ground. At the time I did not know why I did this. I have since learned that it was because in that position I should be more easily able to eject the sand and grit which a rough sea sometimes stirs up in shallow water. I attached myself firmly to my anchorage of "cultch" and fell myself at last fairly started in life.

Soon I noticed that every single morsel of shell or stone around me was tenanted by tiny oysters, all lying in the same position as myself and all firmly anchored.

There I lay, unmoving, for nearly a year. Food, in the shape of tiny animalcule, which an oyster loves best, was plentiful. When the water was thick with it, we all opened our shells wide, and, making currents in the water by means of the tiny hairs which fringe our gills and which men call our beards, we washed the dainties into our mouths. Our choicest delicacies were the minute green algæ, which give to full grown oysters that greenish tinge that is the mark of the aristocratic native.

When I first anchored myself, I was but the twentieth of an inch in diameter—so small, indeed, that a microscope would have been necessary to examine me. At that stage my shell was perfectly transparent.

At the end of ten months I had increased in diameter to fully the size of a dime and become what is called "brood."

During all this time I had been learning many things. I found out that it was necessary to close my shell tight when dangers of various kinds threatened, when the tide was low or, in winter, when frost was severe. You may perhaps imagine that an oyster is a creature of such low organism that it cannot see or feel much of what is going on round about it. But you are wrong. The mantle fringe of an oyster is, and, second, that if I watched sad from a boat in calm water, you would see that the mere shadow of the boat crossing an oyster bed will cause those of us upon whom it falls to close our shells immediately.

It was necessary to be most careful. Dangers were many and terrible. Sea urchins prowled among us and devoured many. But of all our foes the worst is the five fingered starfish. One of my sisters, anchored not a yard away, fell a victim to this terror of the oyster beds. It clutched her with its long fangs. She closed her shell.

But the creature was not to be shaken off. Hour after hour it clung there until on the second day after its first grip she, poor thing, opened her shell to get a mouthful of food. At once the starfish injected into her a fluid which stupefied her so that she could not close again. Then the monster turned itself inside out, shot itself into the open shell and devoured her.

Then, one day a year after I had floated as "spat," came a startling change in my existence. Something huge and heavy came out of the shadow of a boat above and approached, rasping and grating along the bottom. It was a great triangular dredge of wrought iron. At the bottom was a flat bar with a blunt edge, known to the dredgers as the "bit."

As the "bit" scratched it scraped the bottom of the sea clean, and next instant I, too, found myself lifted and dropped into the net, together with hundreds like myself and a miscellaneous collection of small soles and other things.

One of the men sorted over the catch and, having selected all the oysters and spat, "shaded" the rest back into the sea through a porthole.

I, in company with enormous quantities of other brood, was put into a "wash"—a measure holding five and a quarter gallons—and reiald. Here life was less eventful and food most plentiful. To fatten well is the chief aim we have a certain amount of fresh water.

In this snug retreat I passed my brood to half ware and from half ware to ware, or full grown oyster. But I still went on growing and developing, until one day the dredge swept me up again, and I was raised once more into the upper air and rapidly brought in.

I was then dropped into a large bag and suspended in a tank of fresh sea water, which is constantly renewed. There I await my final fate, which will, I fear, be a fishmonger's counter. —New York News.

Latent Energy.

It has been computed that in a single cubic foot of the ether which fills all space there are locked up 10,000 feet tons of energy which has hitherto escaped notice. To unlock this boundless store and subdue it to the service of man is a task that awaits the electrician of the future.

Every man has at times in his mind the ideal of what he should be, but is not.

I am not a connoisseur of pinosophy any more than of poetry. Much that passes as fine philosophy strikes me as very poor stuff, and whenever I have formed this opinion about the writings of any particular philosopher, frequently more than one, takes the same view. I suppose it is an easy thing to set up as a philosopher or to set up as a journalist. The first essentials for the pen, ink and paper—are a smattering of general knowledge and the power of concealing poverty of thought by grandiloquent obscurity of expression. A new system of philosophy—and the fashions in such goods change almost as frequently as in bonnets—is generally constructed by clothing threadbare ideas in new words and phrases and contradicting one or more of the acknowledged masters of the craft, ancient or modern.—London Truth.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76. Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

CHEESE MAKING

Only two or three English cheeses are now made in the large quinines, and the so called English dairy cheese is a native American product. Meanwhile enormous quantities of American cheese are exported to Great Britain. Some English cheese makers, following the lead of Americans, perhaps, put up their products in jars. The sale of cheese in small jars and small packages has grown to be a great industry in the United States, for the cheese thus prepared is convenient and extremely palatable.

German and Swiss cheeses—Limburger, for instance—are imitated here, though less successfully than some other articles. The genuine made Neufchatel is a satisfactory product and is eaten in large quantities. As to Italian cheeses, they are made without any pretense of concealment wherever there is a considerable Italian quarter, though the imitations are not liked by the Italians themselves, and cheap Italian cheese are imported in great quantities.

Filling Curd.

My experience is not to pile high unless the curd is gassy; then we cannot pile too high. Just hour to hour and keep them one high only. By piling up too soon after whey is off it makes a weak, short bodied cheese. Never pile over four blocks high. Turn in all thick ends after it has become well spread out. By so doing we develop the same meaty texture and acid through the curd, always taking the center block of the pile for the top block, thereby getting an even temperature and maturity of curd. Never mill a curd until it has become smooth and velvety. It should take from two and a half to three hours from drawing the whey to milling. It will depend on the acid and temperature the curd has been held at.—A. W. Parkin in Minnesota Dairy Record.

Reduced Cheese Export.

There was a decrease of over 30 per cent in the exports of cheese from the United States in the fiscal year ended June 30 as compared with the year preceding. The figures are 18,764,324 pounds for the fiscal year 1902-03 and 20,828,640 pounds for 1901-02.

A Chicago Result.

The Kansas City Journal is authority for the statement that there is no Limburger cheese factory in the state of Missouri. If there was one in St. Louis the people down there would be claiming that the smell came from the Illinois river.

TOOK A STRAW VOTE.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENT IN A RESTAURANT.

An advertising agent, representing a prominent New York magazine, was in Chicago on a business trip was dining one evening in a fair-sized restaurant.

While waiting for his order he glanced over his newspaper and noticed the advertisement of a well known dyspepsia preparation, which the dyspepsia fiend as he himself was a regular user of the tablets. He began speculating as to how many of the other travelling men in the dining room were also fiends in the peculiar remedy for indigestion.

He says: I counted twenty-three men at the tables and in the hotel office. I took the opportunity to view them and was surprised to learn that nine of the twenty-three were using some form or other or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals.

One of them told me he had suffered so much from stomach trouble that at one time he had been obliged to quit the road, but since using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets had been entirely free from indigestion. He said that nothing was more especially while travelling, on account of irregularity in meals and because pills of all trailing men he was often obliged to eat what he could get and always what he wanted.

Another, who looked the picture of health, said he never ate a meal without taking a Stuart Tablet afterwards, as he could eat what he pleased without fear of a sleepless night or any other trouble.

Still another used them because he was subject to gas on stomach, causing pressure on heart or lungs, shortness of breath and distress in head, which he no longer experienced since using the tablets regularly.

Another claimed that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was the only safe remedy he had ever found for sour stomach and acidity. He had formerly used stomach soda to relieve the trouble, but the tablets were much better and safer to use.

After smoking, drinking or other indulgence, when the digestive organs, nothing restores the stomach to a healthy, wholesome condition so effectually as Stuart's Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the natural digestives, pepsin, diastase, which every weak stomach lacks, as well as nux, hydrastin and yellow parilla, and can be safely relied upon as a radical cure for every form of poor digestion. Sold by all druggists everywhere.

Farmers' Co-operative Fair.

Rockwell, Iowa, March 7.—The sixteenth annual session of the Rockwell Co-operative Farmers' Society was held yesterday. The total volume of business transacted in the past year was $156,000, at an expense of $1,000. The business shows a decrease of $150,000 as compared with that of last year. The society limited the capital to be invested in general merchandise to $2,500 in order not to infringe upon the rights of business men. The society made $6,000 this year and paid $5,000 in dividends. The total assets are $25,000, with liabilities of $14,000. J. P. Brown was elected president.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER and URINARY ORGANS, there is no remedy in use which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills cannot benefit, treating the kidneys like organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the same. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They act fast the nerve nerve and in a few days is a surprisingly active way, and the result is health and happiness.

A long purge makes a weary cause.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that beginning have been driven into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what may have been slight. Had they used Dickie's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it became too late, they would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I was troubled with a cough and could get no rest. I purchased a bottle of Dickie's Syrup before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had used the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and coughs."

On occasion knowing what one wants is a difficult as getting it.

No one knows better than those who have used it what Parmelee's Liver Pills are for they have given when taken a thorough cleansing to the stomach, constipation, and disordered stomach.

One average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

Mr. Thos. Hodgins, Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children. Price 25c. Sold by druggists. Instantaneous relief to those suffering from the effects of indigestion in eating unwholesome food or drinking too much with wonderful rapidity and never fails to completely relieve. No one need fear cholera if they have a box of this medicine conveniently.

Mooch talk, many lies.

AT DRUGGISTS—DR. DYSPEPSIA CONQUERER—(Gentlemen,—My mother-in-law suffered from dyspepsia for years, and nothing did her any good, but after using one bottle of your Dyspepsia Conqueror she was entirely cured and has not suffered from it since. Yours truly, JAMES VALCOURT, Wotton, P.Q. Geners. Merchant

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will relieve you. Purely vegetable and harmless. Their action is mild and natural. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not motion, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These troubles from sedentary habits, 75 per cent of anemics brings on nervous prostration. Dr. Hamilton's Pills Pectoral assimilate food properly. In this condition the blood is vitalized, health will be found a recuperative of rare powder, restoring the organs to healthful activity, dispelling dyspepsia and reviving the flagging energies.

The biggest liars do not always make the best chair.

HALL & RUPERT, —Mr. A. Nickes son, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had for a cough and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and side. What used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I purchased a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it with wonderful success. Continuing, massaging and rubbing, for three days, it entirely removed the pain. I was soon completely cured."

Age, not years, is the first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system make Carter's Little Liver Pills very well be termed 'Perfection.' Consistipation, biliousness and the several ill proper remedies had been used, but all failed in giving relief in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to relieve. Many people who have used it say it acts promptly, with safety and relieves the pain and disease.

One the safe, pleasant, and effectual worm killer, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; nothing equals it. Procure a bottle and take it home.

If you have a good business, it is always better to stay where you are.

CURED TOTAL PARALYSIS!

It puzzles the Doctors and astonishes his patients how South American Nervine has cured a man who was given up to die"—it never fails.

"My wife was stricken with nervous prostration, which developed into total paralysis. We had hardly any hope of her recovery, but had heard of the great cures made by South American Nervine in cases of nervous troubles. We decided to try the treatment, and it was astonishing the results that followed the taking of three bottles—it worked wonders indeed. I feel I cannot speak too highly of this great remedy."—Edward Farr, Simcoe Centre, Ont.

MY REVOLUTION

BY W. L. ALDEN.

COPYRIGHT, 1903, BY W. L. ALDEN.

Mr. James Smith, ex-embassador of the United States to the court of Liechtenstein, sighed as he put down his glass of whisky and soda. He was usually a temperate drinker, and as I knew that the whisky was particularly good I wondered at his apparent melancholy.

"I was thinking," said he, "of the days when I was a protected minister to the Central American republics. Our government used to bunch all the five republics together and send one minister to the lot of them. I was young in those days and thought Central America was a mighty good place. I enjoyed it a heap more than I ever did any of these European courts.

"It was a big thing to be embassador to Liechtenstein and to have a hand in the political life of pretty near every nation in Europe, but I never enjoyed it as I enjoyed my first mission to Central America. I liked the place so much that I staid there 12 years, which was what you might call breaking the record.

"You know, I suppose, that our government wherever a new administration comes in turns out all the foreign embassadors and ministers and puts in a lot of new men. I ought to have been turned out after being in office four years, but I knew that I couldn't be recalled except by a notification to that effect from Washington, and I took good care that no such notification could reach me.

"When my four years were pretty near up, I got permission to make a tour of the five republics and to report on their general condition. The Central American postoffice arrangements were very bad, and I calculated that I could always keep ahead of any dispatch reaching me that the Washington folks might send.

"For four years I kept moving from one place to another, and never once in that time did I receive a single official dispatch or letter from the United States ever catch up with me.

"Now I was equipped with three successive special messengers with orders to hunt me up and notify me that I was recalled, but not one of the messengers were ever able to come up with me. The fellow as you need to meet, provided of course that he didn't feel any call to shoot you. He and I were as Mexicans."

The other ministers were a pretty swell lot, especially the European ones. They used to go around in gorgeous uniforms, and some of 'em packed derby on one because to wear a blue flannel shirt and nothing else except a pair of boots. I just adopted the flannel shirts and trousers for comfort and grace and economy, and my regulation uniform for a United States minister.

"The president, who was a rough soldier who had risen from the ranks, liked my free and easy style, and before I had been there a month I had more influence with him than the whole diplomatic corps put together. I taught him to play poker, taking care that the balance of winnings should always be on his side, and I used to spend the greater part of my evenings in his private room, with nobody present but just we two and a bottle of genuine old Kentucky whisky that I imported for diplomatic purposes.

"This president, Don Villar y Villar, had been in office five years when I made his acquaintance. That was something very unusual in Central America, where a president is generally turned out or assassinated within two years after he goes into office. This particular president, however, had shot so many of his opponents the day after his inauguration that there was nobody who was in a position to raise a revolution against him. Then, again, he had governed with such an iron severity will that he was everlastingly popular.

"One night the president seemed to be in curiously low spirits, and after a bit I got him to tell me what was the matter.

"'I'll tell you the whole story,' said he, 'for I know you will sympathize with me. I have been president now going on five years, and there is present over $200,000 in the treasury. Now it has always been the practice for the president to be turned out by a revolution as soon as the treasury got full enough to make it worth while for the fellow who got out and the next like a Christian. Here am I, with $300,000 in my possession and no possible way of getting out of the presidency and leaving this beastly country for good and all.'

"'Why don't you really mean to say,' said I, 'that you want to be turned out?'

"'Of course I do,' said he. 'When I took the job of governing this country, I expected to be turned out in about two years and to be able to go to Paris like a gentleman. But here I have been for nearly five years, and there isn't a blessed general in the whole army who dreams of heading a revolution.'

"'Why not have an election and have yourself counted out?' said I. 'I've had considerable experience in practical politics in New York, and if you give me the counting of the votes I can be easily defeated by an overwhelming majority no matter if there isn't a single vote cast against you.'

"Thank you kindly,' said the president, 'but there never has been an election in this republic, and I don't want to disturb people's minds by introducing any such useless and dangerous ceremony.'

"Then why don't you resign?' said I. 'You've got your $200,000. What more you? If you resign, he will come into office, and naturally he will be glad to turn you out.'

"You don't know what you are saying,' replied the president. 'Nobody resigns from the presidency who resigns. If I were to do such a thing, I should be disgraced forever. The people would say that I am either a coward or a lunatic. No, Don Smith! I haven't an honorable way of getting out of office, and I haven't one single friend that I can trust to rebel against me.'

"He was deeply longing for a revolution ever since the sum in the treasury reached $300,000, but this he kept to himself as well contented with my rule that nothing can induce it to rebel. When I think of the good times all the exiled presidents in Paris are having at this identical minute, it makes me wild to have to stay here even though I do have the pleasure of playing poker with the American minister.'

"Well, I felt downright sorry for Don Villar y Villar, for he was by long odds the best public man that I had met in any part of Central America. So I just put it into him on the quiet that I guessed that if he would trust me I would undertake to get up a revolution against him in less than a fortnight.

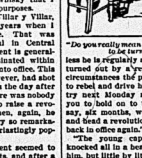
"It wasn't till after he had jumped at my offer and accepted my services and his dearest friend that it occurred to me that what I had really undertaken to do was to help him get all the money in the treasury.

"Of course if I had been president Zarpoza I should have considered stealing to run off with the treasury myself, but I considered honor money honestly by issuing a receipt shipshape decree that my salary should always be equal to the entire amount in the treasury. However, I had promised Don Villar y Villar a single honest intention for him no matter what it might cost my conscience.

"Now I was acquainted with Captain Intimidad, who commanded the president's guard of honor and was responsible for the safety of the palace. This Captain Intimidad was a romantic sort of young cuss, and I thought that the president was the greatest and best man that ever lived. I felt pretty sure that if I were once in the right way I could persuade Intimidad to head a revolution, and, as the result proved, I was right.

"I called on Captain Intimidad the next morning and had a most friendly liminary conversation about the weather and bullfighting and constitutional law and matters of that sort, and then I got to the point. I told him that Queen Victoria had asked the president to come to England to consult with her on an affair of tremendous importance, but that it was absolutely necessary that no one should know anything about the matter except that Don Villar y Villar left Zarpoza for a visit to Europe.

"'Now,' continued I, 'according to our constitution the president cannot leave the country for a single day un-



"Do you really mean to say that you stand less be is regularly and constitutionally turned out by a revolution. In these circumstances could the president cause to rebel and drive him out of the country next Monday night. He expects to be back in his palace in time to say, six months, when he will return and lend a powerful hand that will put him back in office again.'

"The young captain was at first shocked at the thought but I soon got a mind to go back to Central America and see enjoy one more revolution before he died."

A Chinese Fable.

Here is a Chinese fable with a moral which might be commended to Wall street. "Don't monkey with the buzzsaw." But that is getting the cart before the horse. It is about a monkey and a sparrow and is as follows:

A sparrow had its nest half way up a tree, in the branches of which dwelt a monkey. After a heavy rain the sparrow, coming and flying to its nest, saw the monkey shaking his dripping body and could not refrain from admonishing him. "Your muscles, fellow hands are skillful, your strength great, your intellect clever. Why do you live in such a miserable state? Why not build a snug nest like mine?"

The monkey, angered at the complacency of the sparrow, replied: "Am I to be mocked by an evil creature like you? Your nest is snug, is it?" And so saying he threw the nest to the ground.

Moral.—Don't talk with a passionate man.

The cream that is received by a factory is already partly ripened, as indicated by the immense number of bacteria it contains. All the changes which occur in the cream under the influence of these microscopic bacteria have already occurred, and the ripening that takes place in the factory is wholly due, or almost wholly, to the growth of the acid bacteria.

A ripened cream is almost a pure culture of acid bacteria, but this does not mean that the ripening has been produced by this bacteria alone. That the lactic bacteria play an important part in the ripening is perfectly evident; that they are the sole cause of the changes occurring in the ripening is not so evident.

The peculiar flavor of spring butter, which is so much desired by the butter maker, is not due to the development of the common lactic bacteria. Butter ripened during the winter months develops the two species of lactic bacteria as abundantly and as quickly as does that ripened in the spring, but the flavor does not make its appearance.

In fact, I have experiments recorded the spring flavor was very noticeable in the cream, but the presence of the acid bacteria, or the two species referred to, was practically the same as in all the previous experiments. The spring flavor, therefore, cannot be due to these common lactic bacteria.

To what this spring flavor is owing we are not yet satisfied. Whether it is due to the large growth of miscellaneous bacteria during the first few days of ripening or whether it is due to a difference in the chemical nature of the cream remains for further experiments to decide.—Professor H. W. Conn.

Renovated Butter Laws.

A case has been decided in which it has been found that that portion of the oleomargarine law relating to renovated butter is defective in an important particular.

The law provides that renovated butter shall be branded and stamped in much the same manner as oleomargarine.

Last winter a firm in Buffalo was found to be taking renovated butter from the original packages as received it over into rolls and prints without any prior attempt to disclose its true nature. The case came before the United States grand jury and no indictments were found. The chief surprise of those interested in the prosecution. It has just transpired that this was due to the fact that the law does not make it an offense to take renovated butter out of an original package, make it over into prints or rolls and sell it for pure butter provided it be not shipped to any other state or territory or the District of Columbia or any other country after having done so. It is for this reason the United States attorney decided that it would be useless to undertake the prosecution of the irregular practices and recommended no bill.

The proceeding has shown that it is possible to sell renovated butter for pure butter in any state where the state law does not cover cases like the one related above.

Dairying in France.

French butter may be said to be of three grades. The first grade, usually made up in little pats and sent in entirely without salt and when freshly made is of good flavor. It is of a greasy or pasty consistency.

The second grade is made of butter-milk and skimmed milk, and the third is made by heating the sediment of the milk and churning it with a small quantity of fresh cream. The last grade is used for cooking butter.

There is a popular belief that "marked" butter is used in the preparation of French butter, but as the chief establishments guarantee the purity of their products and invite analysis it is probable that the only adulteration to be found in their products is a more or less liberal use of lactenl fats obtained by rehesting the milk as described.

France exports annually butter representing a value of $11,580,000. Butter usually appears on the French table with the radishes as a first course at the midday meal and is not seen again in its recognizable form until the next noon.—Bordeaux.

Gowns and Wraps and How They Are Made.

Combinations of white chiffon and black lace or even of white lace and of black lace make handsome and effective evening gowns.

While elbow sleeves are still worn they are immensely full and fishy at the elbow, and a good way of remodeling an old sleeve is to cut it off at the elbow, slash it and fill it in with cloudy gathered lace.

The loose hanging jacket effect is still the rage for grown of lace or chiffon. The little jacket is edged with narrower lace fringe, taffeta or satin ruching or ribbon appliques, or whatever it be always the wide swathes best of narrow silk or chiffon.

DRESS TRIMMINGS.

Tassels, Cords, Braid, Lace Frlnges and Ruchings All Popular.

Cloth gowns are almost invariably combined with handsome silk embroidered of the same shade, particularly if the gown is of pale colored cloth and intended for dressy occasions. These embroideries are a feature of the princess dress, for which the vogue seems to be really has its waist and skirt separated, but so draped and arranged that they appear as one.

few gowns are evolved by the best dressmakers without the addition of some of these fussy, dangling little ornaments.

Dyed lace and beautiful wide fringes constitute the trimming of many crepe de chine gowns. One of these seen recently was of pale blue crepe de chine trimmed with wide straight bands of cluny lace dyed to match. The tucked square yoke was edged with a wide fringe.

Moleskin is used to trim many gowns, especially those of gray cloth. The illustration shows a costume of this description, but in this case the moleskin bands are crossed with black and white braid. The very full skirt is trimmed with horizontal tucks.

SPIRITUAL TELEPATHY

SOULS ARE ENERGIZED AND ELEVATED BY DIVINE INFLUENCE.

PSYCHOLOGICAL PHENOMENA

Spiritual Phenomena Has Its Basis At Has Its Material World—Gospel Telepathy a Subtle, Mysterious Influence.

Which Should Induce All Good Men and Women to Think None But Good Thoughts.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Office of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles Cal., March 6.—In this sermon the preacher discusses the psychological phenomena of mind influencing mind and shows how the soul may be elevated and energized by divine influence. The text is Acts x., 11, "And he saw heaven opened and a certain vessel coming."

Theory is often little more than the fine art of guessing. It is sometimes the way of concealing the fact that you know nothing, or hope by using scientific language.

What is spiritual gravity? That is the "physical law," you answer, "which Sir Isaac Newton discovered. Sitting one day under an overarching tree branch in his orchard, he saw a ripe ball of wind upon the bough. The overhanging branch swayed, and the ball popped, like a huge gob, and dropped into his lap. Then the Englishman sage began to wonder why that apple came down to earth instead of flying away, as though it had the wings of a bird, toward the stars. As a result of these pondering Newton generalized all the causes of suspension and gravitation which bind the earth into a compact mass and called them "cosmic gravitation." But, my friend, with your learned answer you have not explained to me anything. In reference to the laws of gravitation you have only given me two big words to express what I did not know before and what I do not know now.

As in the material world, so in the mental and spiritual world there are facts and phenomena which we know to be genuine, though we cannot tell the "whys" and the "wherefores" nor the causes which produced these results. For instance, we are nearly all ready to grant the power of human telepathy, or the influence of one human mind upon another human mind even at a distance. Sitting in a public meeting some night you exercise the "power" will upon a person, and soon he will turn round and look at you, although that person could give no rational reason why he turned and looked. Indeed, psychical research sometimes is this influence of one human mind over another that closet students of criminology have come to the belief that some murderers who wield the dagger or aim the pistol may be merely the helpless and pitiful instruments of unknown criminals who have impelled them to commit their murderous deeds. Mesmerism, hypnotism, bewitchery, enchantment, are merely long named evidences of this mysterious power which almost everywhere in the intellectual world is beginning to be recognized, and men are asking whether it may not sometimes dethrone the supremacy of the individual will.

As one human mind has an influence over another human mind, so also know that there is a spiritual telepathy, a subtle, mysterious influence which the other world exerts upon our own. Visional messages, as direct and unmistakable as that which came to Peter upon the housetop of Simon's house in Joppa may also come to us. We may be unable to explain how the divine manifestations come to the human mind. God will speak to us now if we will only let him, as surely as he spoke in many cases to the servants of old. If we look to God continually for guidance, to us, too, shall the promise be fulfilled, "Thine ears shall hear a word behind thee saying, This is the way; walk ye in it." The purpose of this sermon is not to analyze the nature of divine telepathy so much as to suggest ways in which God may be speaking to his children in these days.

Gospel telepathy, in the first place, comes to God's children as it did to Peter upon Simon's house-top, in broad daylight. By that I do not mean that it necessarily comes to us as it did to Peter at the "sixth hour" or when the sun was "highest" in the meridian, but I do mean this: When God speaks to man he speaks to him when he is rational, when he is wide awake, when his senses are on the alert, not when he is cooped up in some dark, deceitful retreat of a spiritualistic medium or when he is tossing about on his couch at midnight in some slumber as the result of his digestive organs having been overloaded. There is a sense of the spirit and a vision of the flesh. There is a vision which comes from God and one that is like the nightmare, the product of our own brain under the disturbance of physical or mental conditions. There must be careful discrimination here. Accept foolish fancies and mischievous impulses as the voice of God. That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit.

I speak very emphatically on this subject. As Charles Dickens had his "Black House," with its Ghost's Walk, and Nathaniel Hawthorne his "House of the Seven Gables," peopled with the evil spirits of past generations, unless we beware we may have the temples of our minds filled with the weirdest fantasies, created entirely by our own unregulated imagination or by evil associations and not by the vision of God. What right has any man to apply to himself the Ninety-first Psalm of David, as did a man some time ago in one of our eastern cities? He pondered over these verses day in and day out: "For he shall give his angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone." Then, in order to demonstrate his belief in this saying, that man jumped from the top of a four storey building and broke nearly every bone in his body. Do you suppose a vision like that came from God or from the devil? What right has a man when in Satan's book of law to go to a high mountain and in vision showed to him all the kingdoms of the world and their glory? "All this power will I give thee and the glory of them, for that is delivered unto me, and to whomsoever I will, I will give it. If thou, therefore, will worship me all shall be thine." Then Satan took Jesus to the pinnacle of the temple and asked him to cast himself down from thence, to prove that he was the Son of God. But Jesus, instead of obeying the Satanic vision, turned unto him (Satan) and answered, "It is written, thou shalt not tempt the Lord, thy God." If being so pure and holy as one our Lord was approached by temptation and assailed by a temptation which was the wicked suggestion on passages of Scripture, how carefully should we test the visions come to us, as it came to Peter on the house-top, to make sure that the vision was from God for our guidance and not a temptation from the powers of spirit evil for our destruction.

How to explain this manifestation of Peter's mind, how to give the simple facts and let you judge for yourself. We were en route from Joppa to Cesarea. Way of interruption. It was about 3 o'clock in the morning. I was awakened by my companion sobbing in his berth. "What is the matter, Timothy?" I said. "Oh," he answered, "something has happened at my sister's home. I had a strange dream about it. I was not asleep, but this vision has come upon me with an overwhelming reality. "Nonsense, man!" I answered. "Don't be superstitious, my boy! You were asleep and had a bad dream; that is all." I did not believe in visions then as I do now. My friend said nothing, but that vision made such an impression upon him that he took note of the time and date and the hour of the minute we were then in. From Athens we went directly home. So overpowering was his conviction of the reality of that vision that instead of going at once to his Philadelphia home he stopped first at a friend's house in New York and telegraphed, "How are the folks?" said he. The friend answered, "What! Did you not receive any message? Why, your sister lost both her twin boys in one day. They both died of diphtheria within an hour of each other." My friend asked the time. They died about the same time the wonderful vision came to him in the middle of the Mediterranean. Let us ask you not to give a human interpretation of that manifestation, you cannot; I cannot. From a human standpoint was not that vision very strange? Can you interpret it from any supernatural standpoint?

But why be surprised at the incident. I have related? You have heard of many similar occurrences. You had a divine vision in your own life when the undercurrent of grief broke into your home. When the doctor said she was dead, at first you were almost broken hearted. You were like a madman. You paced up and down the room saying: "Oh, God, how can I get along without her? Oh, my God! why God! why shall I do!" Hardly had you uttered that agonizing prayer when a strange peace came into your soul. You seemed to come back to you. You seemed to put her arms about your neck and to say with her old terms of endearment: "Husband, papa, sweetheart, son, I am all right. Christ has merely taken me away for a little while. I cannot come to you, but you shall come to me. Was it a dream? Was not that message merely a Satanic mockery or was it a divine vision coming to you as it came to Peter on Simon's housetop? When you saw her joy and happiness was it not the same kind of a divine vision as that which came to St. John when he cried out in Apocalypse: "Who are these which are arrayed in white robes? And whence came they? These are they which came out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

The divine telepathy often comes in a direct command for definite gospel work. As Peter on Simon's house top by his vision knew that Christ was sending him forth to carry the gospel to all the world, whether Jew or Gentile, the world, the divine vision we may know that God wants us to go forth to save the soul that man and do this or that work. We know it just the same as we know what our earthly employer wants us to do when he gives us a bundle of checks and tells us to go and deposit them in the bank. By divine telepathy we know what God wants us to do. God is bidding you to go forth to spiritually save that man and that man, to do this gospel work and that gospel work. Within you to-day you may hear the call. With your wide open eyes in open day-light you may see the divine vision.

This gospel call for practical work is the more impressive and immediate because God's visions are never haphazard; they are never purposeless or meaningless dreams. They always have a very practical interpretation. When Peter looked off from Simon's house top he saw a great sheet let down from the heavens, filled with "all manner of four footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air." That vision was a symbol of the fact that Jesus died to save the Gentile as well as the Jew, the despised barbarian as well as the Jewish high priest, the uncircumcised as well as the circumcised. Hardly had the vision ended when Peter heard a loud rapping at the lower gate. "Who is there? Who is there?" was asked. "I am a messenger" from Cornelius," is the answer. "I am not a Jew, but a Gentile, left by the angel to thee. Will thou come and tell him about Jesus Christ?" The vision and the knock at the door were one harmonious revelation. The messenger's knock his vision was divine and that he was called to a duty which he might have shunned if he had not seen the preparatory vision. No longer was the edict of Christ, how to be made to the Jews only; no longer were the messengers of Christ to regard the Gentile as common or unclean. So much the vision had taught him, and so Peter went with the men and preached Christ to the Gentile centurion, and he found that the gospel was the power of God unto salvation to the Gentile as well as to the Jew.

God's visions are never haphazard incongruities. When the great Barnabas one day in the city of Damascus had the command in a vision that he should place the hands of holy ordination upon the bitterest enemy of the Christian church, he at first doubted the divine authenticity of the vision. Ananias looked up at first into the heavens and in surprise said: "Lord, I have heard of many of this man, how much evil he hath done to the saints at Jerusalem. Now hath he a vision to come ordain Saul of Tarsus." But hardly had the prayer left his lips when the house to which God had directed him when footsteps, like a staggering, stumbling blind man. It was Saul! It was the arch enemy Saul! Then Ananias knew that the vision was divine. So, O man and woman, the divine vision comes to you for practical gospel work. You doubt it. You know it. Why? Because while I speak there arises before your mind some one man, some one woman, some one child that you have. You are like Peter standing upon the house top. You are listening to the messenger of Cornelius calling you to carry the news of salvation to some one else.

But there is still another fact about this gospel telepathy that will be well for us to dwell upon. The divine telepathy which came to Peter upon Simon's home as frequently as it does to the ruler's palace. Why? Because Peter at the house where he had this divine vision? He was human the same as we are, and the probability the most despised man in all the social capital at Joppa. Among the Jews the dealer in cured hides of animals was looked upon as social outcasts. The tanner, the murderer, the insurrectionist, were considered more than by the Jews as condemned criminal might be pardoned in his crimes more readily than the chief who waylaid the poor man on the road to Jericho, but the tanner's calling was never forgiven. And men shrank from contact with the tanner, whose touch might communicate his loathsome disease to the healthy person, as they shrank from contact with the tanner, whose presence in a home brought ceremonial uncleanness. The fact is, the antipathy was always slammed shut in the face of the tanner.

By the old Jewish law, if a husband died and left no children, his brother was compelled to marry the widow. But a widow was not compelled to marry that brother if he was a tanner. Not often the Jewish law would compel a woman to suffer such an ignominy. If a man married a woman without telling her he was a tanner, she could have the matrimonial bonds instantly annulled. Such was the decision was found out. Of course, there had to be tanners among the Jews, as there must be hangmen for this present generation, yet, bitterly were the tanners despised in ancient times that by the eastern law no tanner could come within four cubits' measure nearer to the outskirts of a town than fifty cubits. It was in this despised home that the heavenly vision came to Peter, the gate of the Christian church to the Gentile nations. Your home, O man, O woman, may be despised. But the despised was what the aristocratic people call the despised, and even here have been associated with the vicious pollution of evil courts, but, even with these from the heavenly mansions may be heard, "I came not," said the compassionate Christ, "to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance." "Pray for a gospel outcast, as much shunned as Simon the tanner. Pray for a man whom you may fear a voice saying, "Come, now, and let us reason together; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."

But more thought is suggested by Peter's experience. This vision of the sheet coming down from the heavens filled with all manner of four footed beasts and creeping things and fowls of the air, came to Peter when he was comparatively a young man. It came to him not during the message of salvation, but also as a command, especially for young men and women to go to work. He was then a young man in the prime of his youthful vigor, and the importance of this fact. It seems that God is appealing to the young and the physically stalwart to consecrate our energy and vigor of his service.

"I never hear my pastor preach," said a young girl, "but I am always filled with the desire to say, 'Lord, what will thou have me to do?'" So I never read an account of the Joppa vision, but I always feel this a message especially for me, and for the young people to whom I speak to do something. Oh, young men and young women, will you not be roused, as Peter was aroused, with the thought that you may become gospel messengers to a sinful world? Will you not catch the inspiration for glorious Christian work by standing upon the house top of Simon the tanner?

VERBATIM REPORTING.

It Involves Five Distinct Simultaneous Mental Operations.

Psychologists may find an interesting field for investigation in the intellectual operations involved in taking shorthand writing. There are at least five distinct mental operations carried on continuously during verbatim reporting. First, there is the sensation of sound and of the word; secondly, there is the perception by the mind of the word uttered, practically simultaneous with the sensation, in the case of a distinct speaker, but often slightly in advance of it, as the second when a preacher "rises his voice" or a witness in court has a foreign accent. In the third place, the stenographer must analyze the consonantal structure of all the less common words in the sentence, all except the stock words and phrases, which he writes by word signs by a practically automatic habit.

Fourth, these relatively uncommon words must be put on paper according to the principles of the system employed. This one operation involves many subordinate and infinitely swift efforts of recollection, combination and decision.

Fifth, all these mental operations are carried on while the pen or pencil is from two or three words to the entire sentence behind the speaker—this, of course, all except the stock words—complicating the situation by compelling memory to keep pace with attention. In other words, while the reporter is writing the predicate of one sentence and analyzing an unfamiliar word in the subject of the next, he is at the same time giving his auditory attention to the sentence which is commencing and then being uttered by the speaker. This is impossible to an untrained mind. Three operations, however, are certain more than perhaps six or eight words of the exact phraseology of a speaker at one time. The competent stenographer can hold up ten, fifteen, twenty words or even more in his memory, while at the same time taking his mind by the act of writing the words that preceded.—The World Today.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Anaxagoras, the Athenian philosopher, who flourished in the fifth century before Christ, taught his scholars that wind was air set in motion by rarefaction and the moon was earth and light giving properties to the sun; that the rainbow was the resulting phenomenon of refracted sun-rays upon receding stars, and that the fixed stars were at an immeasurable distance beneath the sun, and many other learned other ideas thought to belong to more modern times.

No Such Thing As Luck

In Successful Decorating

Successful decoration must be the outcome of study—of thought rather than of more chance.

In the chance room there will surely be something wrong.

Possibly the color. Perchance Drawing Likely both.

Whether Chamber, Drawing Room, Living Room, Library or Den, the room must be treated with thought of surroundings, of furniture of complexion, of lighting, of size.

The environment of a room with North or East exposure must not be blue, while either West or Southern exposure may use blue to advantage

How about Crimsons, Greens and Brown—where may these colors be used—just ask your decorator, if he is worthy the name he can tell you.

We solicit your test of our ability on this or other decorative subjects.

CASE ENLARGED FOR THREE WEEKS

Judge Fraleck Postpones Hearing of Case Against the Ontario Hockey Association

And Continues the Injunction in the Meanjime—28th March the Date Fixed.

At 11 o'clock this morning Mr. E. Guss Porter, M.P., for the Belleville Hockey Club, and Mr. W. B. Northrup, K.C., M.P., for the Ontario Hockey Association, appeared before Judge Fraleck in reference to the injunction issued against the O.H.A. Mr. Porter asked for an enlargement of the case, on the ground that certain members of the Association had not been properly notified. He contended that he was entitled to a reasonable adjournment.

Mr. Northrup objected to an enlargement, on the ground that the season was advancing, and until the matter was settled the winner of the intermediate series could not be determined. He appealed to His Honor not to enlarge the matter.

Judge Fraleck said the request for an enlargement was reasonable, and one which he would have to grant. Owing to the fact that his duties would cause him to be upon his circuit for the next two weeks, he granted an enlargement for three weeks.

The result of His Honor's decision is that the injunction will continue in force until Monday, the 28th inst.

A DEAF MUTE GENIUS.

FORMER D. AND E. INSTITUTE STUDENT PRODUCES SOME WONDERFUL MECHANISMS.

Toronto, March 5.—Chas. E. Wilson, of Delaware avenue, a deaf mute, and who has made a name for himself as a man in the Toronto Engraving Company, has a few novelties in the way of mechanisms that are wonderful, and all his own work. One of his latest is a toy, for which he has several times refused $100. This consists of a cow, a woman milking it, a pig feeding in a trough near by, frog leaping half out of the grass a little farther away, complete the outfit, all of which is fine piece of carving. The woman's motions in milking the cow are natural. She turns her face while she works; the cow moves its head and ears, switches its tail and the pig moves its jaws. The frog is at home, while the frog, which is exceedingly small and not easily seen, can be seen "breathing."

Mr. Wilson is the son of Major Wilson, a veteran of the battle of Waterloo. He is a graduate of the Belleville School for Deaf Mutes, and at present has a non training at that institution.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

A century ago, namely, on March 7th, 1804, the British and Foreign Bible Society was formed. During those years the Society has issued 50,000,000 copies of the scriptures in nearly 400 tongues. In most of the Protestant Churches throughout Christendom during the services were in keeping with the anniversary and the sermons were relating to the work accomplished.

John Street.

The pastor occupied the pulpit at both services. In the evening he gave an address on the mission of the Bible Society. In his opening remarks the Rev. gentleman stated that while he did not intend to speak in particular from a text as a motto, he would refer to the 11th verse of the 68th Psalm:

"The Lord gave the word; great was the company of those that published it."

The address was an able exposition of the grand work which had been and was being accomplished by the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Bridge Street.

"How We Obtained the Bible" was the subject discussed by the Rev. Dr. Crothers at Bridge Street Church last evening to a large congregation. His text was from 2nd Epistle of Peter, 1st chapter and 21st verse:

"For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

St. Thomas'.

The Rev. Mr. G. R. Beamish conducted the services at St. Thomas', both morning and evening. In the morning he preached on "Divine Help." His text was from Isaiah, 63rd chapter, verse 1:

"Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save a little

In the evening the preacher's subject was "Master Over Adversity," taken from the 119th Psalm.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

There was a very good congregation present yesterday morning, and the Rector, Rev. Mr. Gilliland, preached on the work and aims of the B. and F. Bible Society, taking as his text the words:

"Thy word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path."

The progress of the Bible Society in the last century was shown.

Christ Church.

The Rector, Rev. W. B. Heeney, in the evening gave a discourse relative to the Bible Society and the work it was doing. His text was from Hebrews, 2nd chapter and part of the 11th verse:

"We do hear them speak in our tongue the wonderful works of God."

St. Andrew's.

Rev. M. W. Maclean, pastor, preached in the morning, his subject being "Bible Work." His text was from 1st Timothy, 6th chapter, 20th verse:

"And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus."

Tabernacle.

At the morning service Mr. Jas. Tabor, the pastor, was engrossed "The Coming of the King," and in the evening Miss M. Stark sang "Salvation."

Baptist.

A large congregation was present at both services yesterday, which were conducted by the Pastor, Rev. O. C. Elliott. In the evening his text was from Isaiah, 53rd chapter and 6th verse:

"All we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all."

Bethel Hall.

The interesting series of addresses was concluded last night, showing the differences between the four gospels, each one presenting the Lord Jesus from a different standpoint, viz: Matthew as King, Mark as the Faithful Servant, Luke as Son of Man, and John as a Heavenly Being, Son of God, each writing led by the holy spirit bringing out facts and incidents bearing on each distinctive view of Christ, the various omissions and differences being explained by the writer's aim, but all put together furnishing indisputable proof that He was from God and having finished His work has gone back to God, there to prepare a place for His own. Also, them a promise of His return to take them to be with Himself.

Christian Science.

The cry of men and women all down through the ages has been, what is substance? Our lesson sermon read yesterday was substance, and it seems the best answer to be found is in Hebrews. 11 and 1, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." By this is would seem that the spiritual, not the material, is real substance. —Com.

Accident to Mr. Hanley.

Our former townsman, Mr. Thos. Hanley, who resides at Port Arthur, on Friday last met with a painful accident. He fell upon a slippery walk, fracturing his right arm. His many friends in this city will wish him a speedy recovery.

Y.M.C.A. Notes.

A large number turned out yesterday at the young men's meeting to hear J. B. Todd, M.D., speak on "The Physical Basis of Manhood." It was an interesting and profitable sketch was given of that people. The doctor confessed all present that the Doukhobors were misrepresented in the matter of cases and instead of being fanatics, as most people think, judging no doubt from the actions of a few who went on that noted pilgrimage, they were indeed a people of a high moral tone.

Our third checker contest will be held to-morrow night at 8 o'clock. All welcome.—Com.

READ IT THROUGH.

'Twou'd Spoil This Story to Tell It in the Headlines.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "age that calls." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon, of Wells Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for La Grippe, she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared we would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and in a so-o cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For sale by all druggists.

HIS HONOR P. M. FLINT RISES TO EXPLAIN

AND OBJECTS TO AN EXPRESSION ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN MADE BY AN ALDERMAN.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir—My Dear Sir,—The expression "hold up" has acquired a significance that is well understood in criminal courts. The meaning attached to it by judges, that the person to whom the term has been applied has been guilty of a criminal act. It is applied to highwaymen, who stop railway trains and plunder them. Also to persons who have, through fraud, obtained money from municipalities or individuals. The Police Commissioners do not appreciate that expression, used, by a worthy Alderman at the last meeting of the Council, in Shannonism, but in case the gentleman alluded to blames the Commissioners, permit me to state the facts. The City Clerk, owing to the large amount of work at present upon him, has not (about a month) attended at court and takes out memos of cases, fines, costs, etc. The Chief has attended and entered in HIS BOOK the necessary information, the convictions, etc. On account of not obtaining the above information the quarterly return of convictions could not be filled out by the Clerk and sent to the Government. The Chief would not submit his book to the Clerk, to allow the information to be copied therefrom, taking the ground that it was not his duty to perform the Clerk's work. The returns MUST BE SENT, but could not be made the dead-lock continued. By resolution of Council, the duty of the Clerk was to attend every police court and get all moneys to the Treasurer.

Now, sir, these rules were carried out. The Police Commissioners met and considered the situation. The Clerk declared he could not, the Chief declared he would not do this necessary work. Either of them had to be appointed or some one chosen to do the work. The Commissioners passed the apparently objectionable resolution, and did not grant the Chief $50 or any sum, which was merely intended to point out to the Council a way out of the dilemma. The Commissioners considered they had not the power to make the grant, AND DID NOT MAKE IT. It was left to the Council to either make it or refuse it. The Commissioners are concerned, they deemed the matter best put by them to the best and cheapest.

I am, yours,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.
Police Commissioner.

Russians Take Steps to Protect Vladivostock—Japanese Troops Land Near Vladivostock—Port Arthur and Vladivostock Likely to be Attacked To-day.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

St. Petersburg, March 7.—A special meeting of the Council of Ministers was convened suddenly in the Winter Palace last evening, to consider measures to protect Vladivostock, which was bombarded by the Japanese fleet yesterday.

Rome, March 7.—The Agenzia Liberal publishes a telegram from a Chemulpo correspondent who asserts that Japanese forces, probably under protection of the squadron which bombarded Vladivostock, have landed on the island of Gold and neighboring islands to the southeast and opposite Vladivostock. The landing, says the correspondent, was effected at Tik-King. The Japanese squadron is the Yellow Sea, adds the telegram, still remains before Port Arthur. Three vessels of this squadron, with the cruisers Kasuga and Nishin, have been sent to Vladivostock.

It is believed a simultaneous attack will be made on both Port Arthur and Vladivostock to-day.

MAN'S LOVE OF THE DOG.

Of All Animals, Only the Dog Has Made Alliance With Us.

Man loves the dog, but how much more ought he to love it if he considered in the infinitude harmony of the laws of nature the sole exception, which is that love of a being that succeeds in piercing in order to draw closer to us the partitions everywhere else impenetrable that separate the species! We are alone, absolutely alone, on this chance planet, and amid all the forms of life that surround us not one, excepting the dog, has made an alliance with us. A few creatures fear us, most are unaware of us, and not one loves us. In the world of plants we have dumb and inattentive slaves, but they serve us in spite of themselves. They simply endure our laws and our yoke. They are impotent prisoners, victims incapable of escaping, but silently rebellious, and so soon as we lose sight of them they hasten to betray us and return to their former wild and malicious liberty. The rose and the corn, had they wings, would fly at our approach like the birds.

Among the animals we number a few servants who have submitted only through indifference, cowardice or stupidity—the uncertain and craven horse, who responds only to pain and is attached to nothing; the passive and dejected ass, who stays with us only because he knows not what to do nor where to go, but who nevertheless under the cudgel and the pack saddle retains the idea that lurks behind—his Russia's North Port, Vladivostock, Still a Naval Target.

Russia's Fleet Not in the Harbor—Battleships at the Mouth of the Tumen River Covering Movements of Troops—Russians to Occupy and Fortify Some Strong Positions There—Increasing Force North of the Yalu—Alexieff Reports No Damage—Jap Cruisers Reported Sunk.

Yiskow, March 8.—An official despatch received here says the Japanese are again bombarding Vladivostock. This news lacks confirmation from other sources.

Japs Hovering About.

London, March 8.—A despatch to The Central News from St. Petersburg says telegrams received from Vladivostock say that seven Japanese ships approached that port at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, entered Ussuri Bay at about noon and after some manoeuvring steamed out seaward.

Fleet in the Tumen.

Tokio, March 8.—It is believed that the Vladivostock squadron is now in the vicinity of the mouth of the Tumen River, engaged in covering the movements of Russian troops from Possiet Bay to the Valley of the Tumen.

Russian scouts are reliably reported to have penetrated south as far as Kiungcung. The earlier Russian movement into Northeastern Corea was regarded as a diversion, but it now appears that a considerable force participated therein.

It is thought that the Russians may occupy and fortify some strong position on the Tumen River. Reports regarding Russian movements in Northeastern Corea are meagre and unreliable.

The force north of the Yalu is being increased, but it is doubted if any considerable number of Russians have crossed the river.

Alexieff Again Vague.

St. Petersburg, March 8.—Viceroy Alexieff has telegraphed the Czar from Mukden, under yesterday's date, as follows:

"Supplementary to my telegram of March 6, I most humbly report that at 1.25 p.m. five out of seven of the enemy's ships opened fire on Forts Suvaroff and Linevitch, on the town, on the roadstead and along the valley of the River Obyasanenciye.

"The firing lasted until 2.15 p.m., at which hour the Japanese squadron began to steam to the southward, disappearing out of sight at 5.30 p.m. There were no losses on the batteries or the fortifications. In the town one seaman was wounded and one seaman was killed. According to information just received the enemy's squadron again appeared in sight of the fortress at 8 o'clock this morning."

A later message from the Viceroy says:

"The firing lasted until 2.15 p.m., at which hour the Japanese squadron began to steam to the southward, disappearing out of sight at 5.30 p.m. There were no losses on the batteries or the fortifications. In the town one seaman was wounded and one seaman was killed. According to information just received the enemy's squadron again appeared in sight of the fortress at 8 o'clock this morning."

A later message from the Viceroy says:

"The commandant at Vladivostock reports that yesterday's bombardment resulted in no serious damage to the port. The fortress did not return the enemy's fire.

"To-day at midday the enemy again entered Ussuri Bay and approached to point, from which they bombarded the harbor on March 6. They left again, making for the open sea."

Jap Cruisers Reported Sunk.

London, March 8.—A St. Petersburg correspondent of The Standard gives a rumor that the Czar has received a telegram to the effect that the Japanese fleet bombarded Vladivostock all day Monday, that no serious damage was inflicted, according to this rumor, but one or two Japanese cruisers were sunk. Although there is nothing to show that there was not another bombardment of Vladivostock on Monday, this report is most likely an exaggerated version of Sunday's bombardment.

On the Banks of the Yalu.

London, March 8.—According to the Che Foo correspondent of The Morning Post, it is expected that the Japanese will reach the left bank of the lower Yalu about March 10. A large force of Russians is strongly entrenched on the hills in the Antung district, adjacent and parallel to the river. Their position is similar to that which the Boers held on the Tugela River.

Japs Cut In.

London, March 8.—It is believed at the Japanese Legation that the Japanese are now between the Russian cruiser squadron and Vladivostock, and there is reason to believe that the Russian squadron is in the vicinity of Possiet Bay. Russian official despatches do not mention this squadron, and this fact lends color to the belief that the Japanese warships have shut it out of Vladivostock. It is pointed out at the Legation that if this be true, the Russian vessels are in a critical position.

Preparing For Japanese.

Vladivostock, March 8.—The Russians are hunting for Japanese in the town. Any person concealing them will be court-martialled.

Russian Military Routes.

Seoul, March 8.—The Russian soldiers operating in the vicinity of Anju are committing all manner of excesses,—maltreating the native women and perpetrating robberies upon every opportunity. Corean soldiers attacked a body of the invaders on Friday last, the 4th instant, and succeeded in killing thirty of them.

Varing Trophies.

Tokio, March 8.—A number of trophies from the Russian cruiser Varing, including one gun, have reached the Navy Department and have been forwarded to the Japanese Imperial court.

Yankees For Pirates.

St. Petersburg, March 8.—The Associated Press learns that the Russian authorities have been approached indirectly by American shipping firms desiring authority to fit out privateers to prey on Japanese commerce, but that they met with no encouragement.

Balfour Asks For Light.

London, March 8.—Answering a question in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, Premier Balfour said the Government considered that Russia's declaration that she proposed to treat coal as contraband of war was of the greatest importance. Mr. Balfour said the British Government was taking steps to obtain more precise information in regard to the interpretation of the Russian declaration respecting contraband of war.

HOTELS THAT ARE SALOONS.

Dr. Barr Says Some Licenses Holders Do Not Comply With Statutes.

Toronto, March 8.—Yesterday was an off day in the Legislature. The House sat for nine minutes and only one item on the bill of fare was taken up. There were just thirteen Liberals on hand on the opening, and seven Conservatives, but four or five Opposition members dropped in just at adjournment.

The only item of business transacted was Dr. Barr's motion for a return of the number of saloon licenses in the cities and towns of the province during the years 1900 and 1903, also the number of wholesale licenses in rural municipalities.

Dr. Barr said in many parts of the province there was a feeling that in our cities there were a large number of hotel licenses granted that were really nothing more than saloons. Some of them put in the best accommodation, the public could not get the accommodation.

Hon. Mr. Stratton, in agreeing to the motion, said no saloon licenses were granted from 1900 to 1903, but when the act of 1899 was passed there was a provision allowing those saloon licenses in the Toronto, Hamilton and London stations to exist. If Dr. Barr was aware of any hotels that did not comply with the law and would give the name the Government minister would see to it that an investigation would be made. The number of wholesale licenses in 1903 was six, in 1902 five and in 1901 six.

The order was granted.

Hon. Mr. Stratton brought down a return, at the request of Mr. Tilley of the correspondence in regard to the appointment of William Coats as registrar of Huron.

The eighth annual report of A. W. Campbell, Commissioner of Highways, was laid on the table by the Provincial Secretary.

TOLD IN A FEW LINES.

Fire at Vaudreuil, Que., destroyed three houses, loss of $4,000.

Brockville customs officers discovered $1,000 in smuggled cloth hidden in a boathouse.

Bigyird Slaughter, brought back to Windsor, admits killing Bladden, but says it was in a fight.

Capt., the Hon. Reginald Ward, brother of the Earl of Dudley, is dead at London from appendicitis.

Several municipalities in Essex County have exhausted their borrowing powers and been warned by the banks.

It is said that the French owners of the Panama Canal Company may be unable to furnish a clear title for sale to the United States.

Fire which began in the Elmira, N. Y., Theatre, destroyed that place, the Auditorium Theatre and several business places. Loss, $200,000.

Bible Society's Centenary.

Toronto, March 8.—About 3,000 children assembled at the afternoon meeting of the centenary of the British and Foreign Bible Society yesterday afternoon in Massey Hall. The principal speakers were Rev. T. B. Hyde and Mr. J. L. Hughes. At the evening meeting His Honor the Lieut.-Governor, Bishop Sweatman and Rev. Robert Johnson, B. D., of Montreal, gave the addresses. Bishop Dumoulin of Hamilton, addressed the meeting on the fundamental principle of the society, and Rev. Dr. Carman delivered an address on "The Outlook."

Hustled to Esquimalt.

Victoria, B. C., March 8.—Cipher despatches by the naval authorities at Esquimalt yesterday from the British Admiralty, order the cruisers Grafton (flagship) and Bonaventure, now in Central or South American waters, to get to Esquimalt with all speed. The Bonaventure is coming out from England to succeed the Grafton as flagship on this station. The order is regarded here as ominously significant.

Second to Britain.

Washington, March 8.—The United States Senate yesterday passed the Naval Appropriation Bill. In speaking of the continued growth of the navy, Mr. Patterson, who presented several amendments, said the completion of the naval program would place the United States ahead of Germany and Russia in actual tonnage and ahead of France and next to Great Britain in effective fighting tonnage.

Arrested For Bigamy.

Woodstock, March 8.—George A. Thornton of Ingersoll, is under arrest, charged with bigamy, to which he pleaded not guilty yesterday morning and was remanded till Saturday. It is claimed he was married to Hattie Knapp at Ingersoll on Feb. 25. He denies having been previously married to a Miss Reeves of Woodstock, in 1900.

Harry Simons Registers.

Fort Frances, March 8.—Harry Simsons, barrister, has been appointed registrar of Rainy River. He is on his way to Toronto to get his instructions. He is a graduate of Toronto University.

THE WAR IN THE EAST.

While the telegraphic despatches tell us little these days in the way of describing actual occurrences, it may be taken for granted that Japan is steadily pursuing her aggressive tactics, and that "The Island Kingdom" has very much the best of things at present seems certain. The Russians are here, for all intents and purposes, without a navy. Port Arthur is sealed, and the Czar's ships are imprisoned. None of them which are able to get out dare venture forth, and Japan is for the present master of the Yellow Sea and all the coast waters. Those Russian ships which are not at Port Arthur are at Vladivostock, and while the Vladivostock squadron is not blockaded in the sense that a superior fleet lies constantly outside in the immediate neighborhood, it is virtually locked up. For if the harbor were free from ice and the ships could come and go at will, the commander would know to a certainty that if he should sail southward along the coast he would be liable to meet a force superior to his own, and would run great risk of destruction. Some of the ships which were at Port Arthur when the war began are helpless hulks, and the rest are prisoners. Those which were caught at Chemulpo are no more. The squadron at Vladivostock will probably enforce, as far as possible, the law of self-preservation.

In the meantime affairs could hardly be better for Japan. When it is remembered that the first blow in this war was struck less than a month ago, and that the two navies were at that time supposed to be equal, it was hardly to be expected that Japan would have been able to land an army of 50,000 to 100,000 men in Corea without risk and without interruption. Of course the result not have been done if Russia had even the semblance of a fleet in these waters. But for the purpose of this campaign, perhaps for the purpose of the whole war, Russia as a sea power has been absolutely annihilated.

The concentration of the Russian army at Harbin is a result of the sea fights. Not only has she been driven from the sea, but she is helpless on the coast, and at all points which require water communication. Port Arthur and Dalny be Manchuria, and Vladivostock in Siberia, were important strategic positions for an aggressive nation with an army and navy. They are neither useful nor safe for a nation which has no navy, or none available. A nation at war with a maritime power, and having no navy available, is better without coasts. If she has coasts she will be thankful if it is not necessary to occupy them.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The Council, we believe, acted wisely in appointing a deputation to go to Peterboro and urge the completion of the Trent Canal.

And a better deputation could hardly have been chosen, especially as the members have some good argument to advance in favor of Trenton as the terminus.

Ald. Sinclair gave the local Board of Trade a rather hard jab last night when he said: "I saw in a city paper to-night that the Board of Trade and Chambers of Commerce are usually good indices of the progressiveness of the citizens of which they are composed." "If that is the case with Belleville," said the Alderman, "we need something at once to quicken our pulses."

And that, as the young fellows on the street might say, is no joke.

Well, now that His Majesty the King has been provided with a site for a new hospital, we hope that he will roll up his royal sleeves and build it without delay.

But what will the boys and young men do for a recreation ground when they lose the Hospital lot in summer time? There is no other central place at all.

This is the day our friend Mr. Johnson shakes the mud of New York from his feet and sets sail for Jerusalem. This being Lent, he is liable to give up eating and drinking for a few days, till he gets his sea legs on.

The list of new granolithic sidewalks to be built this summer, which will be found in our advertising columns, will interest many people. It means a large outlay of money and work for a big staff.

But there is no greater sign of progressiveness in any city than the building of permanent sidewalks. The writer was much struck by a remark made last summer by a returned Belleville boy who had been absent many year. "I think," he said, "if your people knew how the town was improved by the granolithic sidewalks laid in recent years they would hurry up and have a few more of them. Permanent walks give an air of solidity to a place which nothing else does."

Another leading doctor has come out against the bathing habit. He says he knows a man of 94 who has had only two baths in his life, and on each occasion he fell into a river.

A YANKEE BUBBLE PRICKED

(Oswego Times.)

Some enthusiast figures that the United States could mobilize 45,000 regular army soldiers at any point in the country within five days; could add 65,000 more in the next five days, and in ninety days could enlist, equip and mobilize 500,000 men. As the United States probably has not all told, 65,000 effective regulars, just how it would go to work to put 565,000 of them in the field in ten days is not comprehensible to the ordinary understanding.

Diamonds have been found in New Ontario. Cheer up, you veterans who have rock piles out there; you may wear diamonds yet.

Picton is to have another canning factory. Does that mean that they will have two hockey teams next winter?

Perhaps some more Hamiltonians would like the address of a good jewellery store in this city. They can be sure of a central location for six months, anyhow.

Joe Smith, the Mormon, confesses to 42 children. You can't keep the Smith family down.

British war vessels have been ordered to Esquimalt from South American waters. This looks ominous, and may be the forerunner of something which will put the hockey injunction completely in the shade.

The people on the west side are quite "stuck up" these days. They have more water in their cellars than those on the east.

Toronto is going to try to straighten the River Don, heedless of the fact that the beautiful Queen City is choke full of crooked aldermen and ward politicians.

SIX MONTHS IN CENTRAL FOR WOULD-BE BURGLARS.

FOUND GUILTY OF THE CHARGE AND ALSO CONVICTED OF VAGRANCY.

The two men, Patrick Murphy and Charles Burrows, who are charged with attempted burglary were again before the Magistrate this morning. A large number of spectators were present during the court proceedings. Mr. W. P. McMahon, who appeared for the accused, made an earnest and pathetic appeal for their discharge, contending that there was no evidence whatever to convict them of the charge preferred.

Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, reviewed the case thoughfully for the Crown, contending that a strong case of circumstantial evidence at least had been made out.

The Magistrate reviewed the case at considerable length before giving judgment. He found them guilty of the charge and said that, from their own evidence, it was clear that they were vagrants. They were sentenced to six months in the Central Prison.

One member of the knights of the road was last night provided with accommodation at the police station.

"The Filigree Ball" is certainly an up-to-date story. Don't miss the commencement to-morrow night.

The people are now asking what is this Laxative Phenix. Here is your answer; It is a vegetable soap. It is a soft, fine powder made originally in France. It cleanses more quickly than soap, bleaches perfectly, leaves the fibre of fabrics intact, and what is most important of all—leaves no residue in the linen. Soap contains grease and caustic soda, and linen and woolens washed with soap always contain a trace of these. When touched by a hot iron the fabric turns yellow. Laxative Phenix cleanses quickly and perfectly. One pound costs you 6 cents and will wash eighteen hundred collars. 6-31

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE

PASSED AT A RECENT MEETING OF BENJAMIN L.O.L. NO. 274, OF THIS CITY.

Moved by Bro. F. M. Clarke, seconded by Bro. James Washam, and resolved, that the heartfelt sympathy of the members of this lodge be conveyed to Bro. H. Purdy Cook and his family in the sad and sudden bereavement through which they have lately been called, and would pray that an "all wise God, who doeth all things well," will afford them consolation and grace to bear this severe trial, and would also express the hope that Bro. Cook himself will speedily be restored to health.

Signed for the lodge,
REV. W. J. GILLILAND,
Master.
ROBERT DUFFIN,
Secretary.

To Bro. Reuben Powell:

With profound regret we learned of the terrible calamity which, in the providence of an all wise and loving Father and God, bereft you and your family of a loving son and brother. In our weakness we are unable to understand His dealings. We do know, however, that "He doeth all things well." To Him, therefore, who is the comfort and who alone can fill the void thus made, we point you for the consolation we all stand in need of at such times. Assuring you of our sincere and deepest sympathy in this hour of your great affliction,

Signed on behalf of the lodge,
REV. W. J. GILLILAND,
Master.

LOVERS' LANE.

The beautiful and successful production of the Clyde Fitch play, "Lovers' Lane," will be seen in this city at the opera house on Saturday, March 12. "Lovers' Lane" again emphasizes the lasting vitality of a clean, wholesome play of realistic theme. Not long before his translation to the unknown Colonel Robert Ingersoll said in an address to the Players' Club: "I do not incline to the play which solely moves to mirth, nor that which alone stirs the lachrymose sensibilities. The one which comforts and consoles me and woos me to forget failures of the seamy side of life is the play that creates dimples wherein to catch the tears."

A HEALTHY OLD AGE

The Goal of Every Man's Ambition

THOUSANDS of human beings are suffering under the burden of a sickly, premature old age, because of diseased kidneys. These organs were diseased give out to all parts of the body a deadly slow-acting poison. The face loses its color, the eye its luster, the brain its ambition, and the muscles their energy, and misery of the most troublesome ailments result.

Bu-Ju cures all forms of kidney trouble, and brings back youth and vigor by rooting out the evil. It is a never-failing cure for every form of kidney ailment. It cures rheumatism by eradicating the cause of rheumatism, kidney disorders. If you are suffering from any form of kidney trouble, commence taking Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, at once. You cannot afford to neglect the many symptoms that point to diseased kidneys.

Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont. Markham, Ont., Dec. 1, 1903.

Gentlemen—I had suffered almost continually for seven years from kidney trouble. Could scarcely walk and was unable to attend to my farm duties. Saw Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, advertised and procured a box from my druggist. After taking the first few pills I felt much relieved and after taking half a box was able to do a full day's work. I know one box of Bu-Ju saved me 50 doctor bills, and think they are the finest pill made. I give this testimonial unsolicited.

Yours very truly, JAMES ABBOTT.

THE TRADE OF THE SUEZ.

Interesting Report by the British Consul at That Port—British Vessels Outnumber All Others Together.

A report on the trade of Suez by the British Consul at that port, contains some interesting and useful information, not only in regard to the trade of Suez, but also as to the proportions of the tonnage of different nations that passed through the Suez Canal last year. So far as Port Said itself is concerned, the imports, which amounted during the past year to £E917,000, show a decline of £E26,000, the largest proportion of the loss falling on the United Kingdom, whose exports to Port Said were reduced by nearly £E69,000—the result of smaller shipments of coal. On the other hand, the purchases from Germany increased from £E19,500 in 1901 to £E30,600, and those from France from £E125,000 to £E128,000, the improvement in the former case being due to the recent establishment of a German coal company's workshop and store, and in the latter case to stores supplied for the Suez Canal Company. But while imports at Port Said have declined, the exports have made a decided spurt, the value last year being £E82,700, as against £E23,200 in 1901. This considerable jump is caused by a new and very promising trade in cotton, which began last winter with the eastern provinces of the Delta. In this connection, it is interesting to note that the construction of an ordinary gauge railway from Ismalia to Port Said is making progress, and it is hoped that the line will be open for traffic within two years' time, when it is expected that it will help to carry cotton from the interior for export.

Mr. Cameron next proceeds to discuss the traffic of the Suez Canal. During the year 3,709 vessels, of a total tonnage of 11,248,000 tons, passed through the Canal, as compared with 3,699 vessels, of 10,824,000 tons, in 1901, showing an increase of nine vessels and 424,000 tons. Of these 3,708 vessels, 2,753 were merchant cargo vessels, 822 mail steamers, and 153 warships and transports. The transit receipts in 1903 amounted to £E1,148,800, and were higher than in any previous year, showing an increase over 1901 of £E133,300. This good result, the Consul says, has not been due to any exceptional or temporary cause, but solely to the increased activity in trade and to the improvement in Indian agricultural produce, and he expresses the view that it presents a character of stability, full of assurance for the future. The mean net tonnage per vessel has risen from 2,926 to 3,034 tons. The following table shows the number of vessels which passed through the Canal in 1903:—

Flag.	Number of vessels.
United Kingdom	2,165
Germany	480
France	274
Netherlands	218
Austro-Hungary	130
Russia	110
Japan	61
Italy	85
Spain	30
Norway	41
United States of America	21
Denmark	14
Turkey	23
Greece	14
Sweden	7
Egypt	6
Portugal	3
Other countries	2
Total	3,708

It will be observed that out of a total of 3,708 vessels, 2,165 were British, an increase of 90 over 1901. British tonnage has also risen to 6,775,000 tons from 6,253,000 tons in 1901, and surpasses the former highest total of 6,386,000 tons in 1899. German tonnage has decreased from 1,753,100 tons in 1901 to 1,707,000 tons in 1902, and German vessels from 511 to 480. Thus, the percentage of British vessels and their tonnage has risen to 58.4 and 60.2 per cent. respectively, as against 56.1 and 57.8 per cent. in 1901, while the percentage of German ships and tonnage has dropped to 12.9 per cent. and 15.2 per cent. respectively, as against 13.8 per cent. and 16.3 per cent. in 1901. There has not been any noteworthy change in the percentage of other foreign countries. These figures apply to the general total of 3,708 ships of all kinds. If, however, we consider only merchant vessels, the British percentages are still more satisfactory, being 69.7 per cent of the number and 72.5 per cent. of the tonnage. German tonnage is 13.3 per cent., and France, the Netherlands, Austria-Hungary, and Russia combined furnish a total of only 11.3 per cent. of the merchant tonnage of the carrying trade with the East. These facts are reassuring, and show that the British mercantile marine is holding its own on the Canal route with seven-tenths of the vessels and nearly three-quarters of the net tonnage.

Primitive Plowing in England.

On the outskirts of the little village of Codford, pleasantly situated almost in the heart of the famous Wiltshire downs, the old traditions of plowing by oxen are still faithfully preserved. For years and years past C. Nutley has had many of his broad acres of land furrowed by the aid of pairs of oxen yoked to the plows. The sight has attracted numerous tourists passing along the Codford road, and many of them have stopped to secure snap shots as interesting mementos.

British Mortality.

In England Roman Catholic priests die at the rate of 18 per 1,000 per annum; Protestant clergymen, 11 per 1,000; domestic servants, 8 per 1,000; lawyers, 16 per 1,000; cabmen, at one time 1,000 actions died at the rate of 9 per 1,000 under normal conditions, while on the battlefield, taken from a record of the past twenty years, death is only at the rate of 15 per 1,000 per year.

A Blast From Labouchere.

I am not a connoisseur of philosophy any more than of poetry. Much that passes as fine philosophy strikes me as very poor stuff, and whenever I have formed this opinion about the writings of any particular philosopher, frequently more than once, I take the same view. I suppose it is as easy to set up as a philosopher as to set up as a journalist. The first essentials—after pen, ink and paper—are a smattering of general knowledge and the power of concealing poverty of thought by grandiloquent obscurity of expression. A new system of philosophy—and the fashions in such goods change almost as quickly as in bonnets—is generally constructed by clothing threadbare ideas in new words and phrases and contradicting one or more of the acknowledged masters of the craft, ancient or modern.—London Truth.

The "Beg Wagon" in London.

London by night is shortly to have a unique attraction in the shape of an elegant traveling restaurant, which will perambulate the street for the benefit of those who desire refreshment better than that provided at the ordinary coffee stall, says The London Mail. The traveling restaurant consists of a lavishly ornamented van some twenty feet long by six in width, with a doorway at the side, to which the customer ascends from the street by a miniature flight of steps. Colored glass panels bearing allegorical designs form the windows round the sides, and the back of the car bears in large letters the announcement, "Night lunch."

A Cheerful Custom.

In certain back country districts of England on Jan. 1, which is called Childermas, every child is soundly spanked before breakfast. The date is supposed to be the anniversary of the actual day upon which Herod slew the innocents. Therefore, to keep the memory of the slaughter fresh in the minds of the rising generation, subscribers to the ancient customs are bidden to whip their children before they rise on the morning of that day.

A Swedish baron and a Belgian Count, charged with devil worship and the systematic corruption of minors, have appeared before the court at Paris, which sat with closed doors to hear the case. It was stated that the baron had arranged a temple to Satan at his residence in the fashionable Elysee Quarter, and that the count assisted him by attracting minors thereto. Counsel for the defence pleaded that they were corrupted by reading the works of popular modern French authors, and that these writers, and not their victims, should be held responsible.

To Build Robust Health

start at the foundation of life and health. Assist your organs to do their work properly. Food and drink cannot nourish if your liver is not working right. Dyspepsia and Indigestion follow if your digestive organs are out of order. Constipation cannot exist if your bowels are free. A short course of Beecham's Pills will soon put you right and an occasional one will keep you so.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

will do more to build up robust health and maintain it than any other medicine. They have done this, and are continually doing it for thousands all over the world. If you start now and take BEECHAM'S PILLS occasionally you will certainly benefit to a remarkable degree.

OUR NEW STORY

The Filigree Ball

This largely advertised and intensely interesting serial story, by Anna Katherine Green, commences TO-MORROW, Wednesday, March 9th. If you have not read the "Filigree Ball" do so while it is being published by The Intelligencer.

THE GREAT EASTERN STOCK Co.

The Underprice Store

Can it be Done

Truly good bargains benefit both parties, seller and buyer.

Great Enterprises dependent upon public support must have public service as their basic principle.

These statements may seem a trifle topiofty. You'll possibly think them advertising bombast, but they are printed with a serious purpose and by common consent this store shall become the leading place in the development of modern retailing. Public confidence is becoming fixed and some service to the intelligent people must underlie this confidence.

Intelligent comprehension of our task of course inspires the service rendered.

Good understanding with our public is most hopeful and to make the understanding clear we must have clean advertising and in this way state a few of our notions.

First—To cheapen the cost of Merchandising.

2nd—To promote facility of trading by concentration of great stocks.

3rd—To save the time of purchasing.

4th—To benefit employees by giving them better values, thereby making this the economic trading centre of Belleville and you may feel assured that this store will be full of comfort to the small purse and economic spirit.

Interesting or Nothing

Do you think of the Underpriced Store ?

What do you think of the Underpriced Store ?

It is bad for us if you think ill of us

It is worse for the Underprice Store if you don't think at all.

These axioms being true, the Underprice Store is nothing if not interesting.

New Arrival of Goods Daily.

And you should visit this storm centre for economic buying at every shopping time, or miss the best genuine bargains to be found. Bad freighting has delayed many goods but we are showing more fine things, more low priced things, more exactly up-to-date things on each succeeding day, here shall appear authoritative styles as fast as conditions shall permit, and it will be worth a ride of many miles to feast your eyes on a store full of Underprice Merchandise.

This week the store has grown doubly brilliant with new things, delightful to view, gratifying to possess, and this store is yours for pleasure and if your pleasure reaches a desire for possession of the merchandise shown, we are doubly gratified of course, however if you are not a purchaser we want you to come anyway as bargains are always in evidence and we recognize the first impression a customer on entering this store must have is sincerity of purpose on our part, also we recognize that a few crumbs of comfort may be gathered here and there, but if you want to buy a whole loaf of satisfaction buy here. Nuff Sed.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

Plain Truth

Our perferences are always in strict accordance with the promise made in our "ads." We believe in the SUBLIMITY of PLAIN TRUTH. We are not in the business for purely philanthropic motives, but for the purpose of keeping our capital active, our mind and body employed, and making a few dollars for the benefit of ourselves. But we exercise a just consideration of our customers.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The river is beginning to crack and put on as many airs as though there was some water under the ice.

Says the man on the next block: "To see the lady of the house navigating the cellar in a wash tub is the sight of a lifetime."

Rubber goods have again gone up in price. They'll soon be so high we'll have to rubber to see them.

Don't let the children sail boats in your back yards. They might catch cold.

Tough, isn't it. Just as we begin to see the finish of this awful winter Parliament breaks out again.

A Grit newspaper man is now Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod. Sad to see a member of the Fourth Estate take to bowing and scraping for a living.

The New Brunswick Government notes with gratification "a growing interest by our farmers in the pursuit of agriculture." In most places, come to think of it, farmers usually take quite a lively interest in agriculture.

A report from St. Petersburg says the Russians are laughing at the Japanese fleet. It is likely that, if the Japs keep up their gait, the Russians will be without one of their own to laugh at.

IS IT CURABLE?

A QUESTION OFTEN ASKED BY THOSE AFFLICTED WITH PILES.

Is a strained joint curable? Is local inflammation curable? Of course, if properly treated. So is piles.

People often become afflicted with piles and ask some old "chronic" who has always persisted in the wrong treatment, and naturally he discourages them by telling them that their case is hopeless.

They in turn discourage others, and their's dilatory plan can in every case be cured by careful and skilful handling is allowed to sap the energy of thousands who might free themselves of the trouble in a few days.

Pyramid Pile Cure will cure the most aggravated case of hemorrhoids in an astonishingly short time. It relieves the congested parts, reduces the tumors instantly no matter how large, allays the inflammation and stops the aching or itching at once.

Thousands who had resorted to expensive surgical treatment, have been cured by the Pyramid Pile Cure—in a number of instances persons who had spent months in a hospital under a pile specialist.

It is a remedy that none need fear to apply even to the most aggravated, swollen and inflamed hemorrhoidal tumors.

If you are afflicted with this stubborn disease you can master it quickly.

This remedy is no longer an experiment, but a medical success and is sold by druggists everywhere for fifty cents a package. Write Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., for their free book on the cause and cure of piles.

CATTLE MARKETS.

TORONTO JUNCTION LIVE STOCK.

Receipts at the Junction cattle market were 25 car loads, comprising 562 cattle and 49 sheep and yearling lambs.

INTERNATIONAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, March 7.—About 700 head of cattle, 300 sheep and 150 sheep were offered for sale at the east end abattoir to-day. The wet weather did not prevent a fair trade being done, but prices had a downward tendency. Choice cattle sold at from 4½c to 5c per lb., good medium about 4½c, ordinary about 4c, and the bulk of the common stock at 2½c to 3½c per lb. A few choice sheep sold at 5c per lb., and some yearlings at 5½c per lb., while the bulk of the sheep and lambs, which sold at from $1.50 to $3 each. Sheep sold at 3½c to 4c per lb., and lambs at about 6½c per lb. Good lots of fat hogs sold at about 5½c per lb., but there were about a dozen ordinary milch cows on the market, but there appeared to be little demand for them. Prices ranged from $30 to $45 each.

SCHOOLBOY BLUNDERS.

Amusing Mistakes in Examinations Papers by British Pupils.

The following list of amusing mistakes made by British schoolboys in their examination papers is compiled by the London correspondent:

Iron is grown in large quantities for manufacturing purposes in S. France.

The sun never sets on British possessions because the sun sets in the west, and our colonies are in the north, south, and east.

The diminutive of man is mankind.

Question: Define the first person. Answer: Adam.

Blood consists of two sorts of corpuscles—red corkscrews and white corkscrews.

Asked to explain what a buttress is, one boy replied, "A woman who makes butter," and another, "A female butcher."

Teacher's dictation: His choler rose to such a height that passion well nigh choked him. Boy's version: His collar rose to such a height that fashion well nigh choked him."

A city missionary is telling you give babies to soothe them.

A skyscraper is an overtrimmed hat.

Political economy is the science which teaches us to get the greatest benefit with the least possible amount of honest labor.

An emolument is a soothing medicine.

In the United States people are put to death by electution.

Gravity was discovered by Isaak Walton. It is chiefly noticeable in the autumn, when the apples are falling from the trees.

An Estimate of Sir Gilbert Parker.

The London correspondent of an American paper says: It often seems that we are losing our great men, and finding no young men of the same calibre to fill their places. But, of course, it isn't so. Among the young men in politics who promise seems great just now, I might name Sir Gilbert Parker, who is fighting hard for tariff-reform, supported valiantly by his cousin Lucy, and I should not be surprised to see him given a Ministerial post before many years have passed. Then there is Winston Churchill, who is fighting for the other side, though, perhaps, he lacks somewhat in breadth of view and in thorough going sanity. Lloyd-George is another young man in politics whose great talent as a speaker will yet make his name well known on both sides of the Atlantic.

Stewed Prunes.

Here is a prize recipe for stewed prunes, given by a California fruit growing association: Wash the prunes in several waters, nearly cover with water and allow to stand overnight. Simmer over a slow fire until tender. Do not put in any sugar until before the prunes are done.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction. A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the consequences of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. In Perry Davis's we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, being the best remedy in the market for all summer Complaints. It is pleasant to take, a few drops in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble with a application.

On occasion knowing what one wants is the first step in the air line.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all low and throat ills, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Blaklie's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately loosens the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the phlegm, and clears the air passages, which causes difficulty in breathing; thereby gives relief to that depressing cough, and strengthens the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Blaklie's Anti-Consumptive Syrup a inestimable value, as it instantly and effectually allays all irritation, and hoarseness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. Everywhere in the land, lives of their children, and themselves from much heart trouble. Price 50 cents. See that there procure a bottle of "Blaklie's Anti-Consumptive Syrup." Never ever a child has taken cold, has a cough or symptoms give the first dose according to directions.

If you have a good business, it is also better to stay where you are.

DISCOVERY. WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen,—About five years ago I began to be troubled by Rheumatism, and for three years I suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint, which at times completely prostrated me. Walter Woods

Mr. Jas. Hall, Brockville, Ont., says some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I consulted one of the leading city [illegible] induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon found relief. After using it regularly for one month I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that it has cured me completely and permanently. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I can confidently recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspepsia Cure, as I consider one of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. Yours truly,

T. S. MAINTER.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all our farers I know of, and they can form of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

Believing that Parmelee's Pills are the medicine to remove all kinds of worms and parts, and only those the result of twenty-five cents.

Never be afraid of doing little because you can't do much.

HEROIC HEART "FOOD"

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the heart is heroic because in cases of long standing it acts promptly and beyond all human aid it goes to the very brink of the "Black River" and snatches from it the heart-sick victim.

In a trice it allays pain—in a twinkling it gives strength and vigor and it works a quick and permanent cure as by magic. It is the one great heart remedy which rightly bears the crown of supremacy and on which it inscribed the life words, "it never fails." Thirty minutes after taking the first dose the sufferer forgets its pain. Try it. 43

AS THE FIORDS OF NORWAY.

Newfoundland's Picturesque Coast Line Described by an Islander—Day By in Canada Seems Long.

Newfoundland has a unique, influential and commanding position. It is at no great distance from the North American continent, and practically stretches across the Gulf of St. Lawrence. In shape it is almost triangular, and its longest distance across in any direction is only about 316 miles. In approaching the island one is impressed with its rugged coast. It is pretty completely "rock bound," which to a great extent proves to be a blessing in fact, but to the casual observer as to render it exceedingly picturesque and interesting, says a St. Yeamans in Country Gentleman.

The entire coast is indented with bays of various shapes and sizes—in some instances these extend so far into land as to almost meet from different directions, leaving only a very narrow isthmus for the communication of the land. In the larger of the bays there are many islands, giving in some instances as great variety and equal beauty as is found in the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence River. The general surface is as varied as the coast line, and presents almost every imaginable condition of land—rocky mountains, hills and valleys abound, gorges, gulches and ravines, through which rivers and streams take their course, rivers are numerous, and add to the beauty of the landscape materially. There is enjoyment in traversing and exploring the forests of Norway. It can be enjoyed in sailing in and about the bays—and coast indentations of Newfoundland.

If the coast is rough and rugged, it is also picturesque and grand and presents beyond description in some instances; nor is there more uniformity in outline, in some places the cliffs and mountains will present a surface of bare rock only, in others there will be sufficient soil upon the rock to sustain a growth of forest, and presents a beautiful appearance in the various shades of its foliage. In still another place the hills will be rounded in form, well covered with soil, but has an abundance of pasturage for cows or goats.

Although for years there has been established various lines for steamboat travel, taking in all the principal bays, it is only a greater part of the coast of the island to Nova Scotia, and to Quebec, that is kept on and about the bays can be taken by steamboat, and in a leisurely manner with stops between if desired.

Not a great time back in the past, settlements were confined almost exclusively to the seacoast, where the chief industry, fishing, was carried on, and the cod caught at the present day; but quite recently little villages have sprung up in the interior, and with the new railway, induced by the establishment of the industries of pulp and paper mills, the latter of which is assuming great importance.

Because of the interesting natural features of Newfoundland, lying in the midst of the fishing and mining industries, that are so interesting and valuable, and because of the lightful climate that the summer months afford, makes it a delightful resort for the weeks or months when the extreme heat of New England and middle states becomes almost unbearable. It is then that a trip upon one of the bays, under the most medium weight clothing and wraps, as experience has proved.

A. W. Wright Reminiscent.

Mr. A. W. Wright, Conservative organizer for Ontario, a resident of Dufferin in 1854, half a century ago, was present at the recent great gathering of Dufferin old boys in Toronto. Principles called up on Mr. Wright for a speech, and he regaled the audience with reminiscences of the early days, when the pioneers were hewing out homes in the forests of the province. He remembered distinctly when the longdrawn tone of the first train's whistle was heard in Dufferin county. The settlers of Dufferin were a sturdy lot of people, and no wonder was it that their sons had achieved success in the battle of life. Mr. Wright referred to his old school teacher, etc. Fraser, of Mono Centre, who had died at the age of 100 years. A kindly man he was, and only once was known to whip a boy. He had not a first-class nor yet a second-class certificate, but he was second to none of the teachers of the present day, although there was no James L. Hughes to look over them at that time.

Death of Abbe Casgrain.

Rev. Abbe H. Raymond Casgrain, the well known author of valuable literary and historical works, and formerly president of the Royal Society of Canada, died at Quebec recently, aged 75. He was accompanied to Morgan, a son of the late Hon. Charles E. Casgrain, and brother of the deceased, Charles Casgrain. Born at River Ouelle, December 10, 1828, he was educated at St. Anne's College, Quebec, and at the Seminary of Quebec. He was for a time priest at the Basilica, Quebec, visited Europe in 1858, 1867 and 1873 in quest of historical material, and found many valuable manuscripts relating to early Canadian history, among them the journals and papers of Marechal de Levis, and some personal papers of Montcalm. In 1874 he was compelled, owing to ill health, to resign his position of his eyes, to give up ministerial work. In 1877 he received the degree of LL.D. from Laval, and in 1880 was president of the Royal Society of Canada.

MY VALENTINE.

Oh, why should I hide when all men say
That I love my darling and my darling loves me.
The flower in its sweetness, the bird in its song
Have uttered my heart's secret 'since my darling loves me.

The sun on the mountain, the star on the sea
Are sure in my vision since my darling loves me.
My brothers and sisters of every degree
I am jubilant in your tumult since my darling loves me.

The angels in Heaven, and God—even He—
Must know in my love since my darling loves me.
Wide earth has no purpose and life has no plan
But that I love my darling, and my darling loves me.

LATE MOLYNEUX ST. JOHN.

Sketch of the Late Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod.

Molyneux St. John, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, who died at St. Luke's Hospital, Ottawa, recently of Bright's disease, had suffered for four years, and his death was hastened by an attack of grippe. Mr. St. John is not known to have had any kindred in Canada.

It would be a difficult task to convey an exact impression of the fact that in the work-a-day world of Canadian destiny and politics, the deceased St. John was at all times the humble of the humble. Such an impression could have been created only in personal contact with the man himself. That he was a gentleman, he followed reserve to the point of inclusiveness, even with his intimates, and even his intimates were unable to look quite through the reserve of his personality to see that he it gone to the place where the clean man is never to be found. It may be said of him that he was plainly a man of reserve, and such reserve that a clean man could ever prate about, but sorrows none the less. He was a man of honor, and noble English stock. He came to Canada some 25 years ago, and was offered a position for the Toronto Globe, The Montreal Herald and the Ottawa Free Press. As a journalist he held always to the higher ideals. A Liberal, even in political matters, he labored with his subordinates for the observance of fair play in the debates. He was the walls of the Press Gallery at Ottawa, and in the session of 1888, his portrait has an honored place, and in Ottawa, as in other Canadian cities, he was known as "Moly" St. John.

There are many journalists to-day professional and personal comfort, and often [illegible] to the profession of journalism about the time of the accession of the Liberals to power in Canada, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on the Government as author of the Imperial Penny Postage scheme, urged in the furtherance of the emigration policy of the land journals.

Mr. St. John's the pensioned his name in the English fashion "Molyneux," a spinsterish name indeed, which he had at the time of his death, and by the style of dress which he never found congenial. At the time of his death he had found something of his personal dignity to a post which, in the present seldom of things, was not considered a second rate position. It is a fact that he was offered the post of A.D.C. the opportunity to return to the field of journalism, but declined it. For about ten years ago when Mr. St. John first his duty brightened with the presence of Lord Aberdeen, Montreal. He was crossing St. Catharine street with a number of friends, when he met a runaway horse picked her from his path. Lord Aberdeen, in the days of his was weeks before he realized the fortune of his boss. From its effects he never entirely recovered. It was a favorite at all the higher social functions in Ottawa, and was a guest at Rideau Hall, but his heart was evidently elsewhere. He had had a long and honorable service in China, enjoyed a chivalry in the West for none than Sir Donald Smith, and was the author of the advertising branch of the Canadian Pacific. He was also for a short a keen interest in imperial affairs. He was a frequent visitor to the press during the closing of his days were devoted to the correction of the proof sheets of the encyclopedia, glaring forms of popular error.

Mr. St. John was a son of the late Major St. John, of the 52nd Regiment, a Waterloo veteran. He had two sisters, one of whom was married to Sir Francis Burnand, proprietor of Punch, and the other to Richard Bell, manager of the famous Gresham office in Surrey. Lady, whose stage name was Kate Bauer, was the daughter of a Devonshire clergyman, and a most charming, refined woman.

A VALUABLE PAPER.

Legislative Proceedings of the First Session of Upper Canada.

In a recent report to the Legislature, Mr. Horne, the Legislative Librarian, stated that he believed copies of parts at least of the missing journals of the early years of the Upper Canada Assembly and Council might be found among the papers of some of the older families. The suggestion has proved excellent. Mr. The other Mr. Christopher Robinson, K.C., delivered to the Librarian a manuscript of the first session of the first Parliament in Upper Canada in 1792. In the handwriting of Angus McDonell, Clerk of the Crown, the manuscript was accompanied by a letter from Hon. Alex. McDonell, ex-Speaker of the Legislature, to Chief Justice Powell, dated in 1821, committing the document to the care of the Chief Justice and showing by its terms that even at the early date the absence of printed records was already beginning to be felt. Hon. A. McDonell was Speaker from 1805 to 1812, and G. J. Powell held his office from 1816 to 1825. This manuscript journal is to be called the original journal. Except this MSS., there is no record at the present time of the House save the copy which had to be sent to the Colonial Office. Hence, afterwards Sir J. B. Robinson, Bart., father of Christopher Robinson, K.C., the defendant.

The document is a most interesting one, disclosing the fact, for instance, that from a rapid inspection he is convinced that the Mr. Speaker Macdonell to be called the original journal, so far as there was (or is) anything like a record of the House's journal. Except this MSS., there is no record at the present time of the House save the copy which had to be sent to the Colonial Office. Hence, afterwards Sir J. B. Robinson, Bart., father of Christopher Robinson, K.C., the defendant.

Late for the Party.

Mr. Harry Ainsley has well known among the newspaper fraternity of Canada, is connected with the Toronto Herald and all-round good fellow, held a card party the other evening at his residence on Waterloo avenue, Guelph. Among the guests was a well known Belleville girl, Miss Grace Blank, for convenience.

The evening was merry ane, and the hours slipped by quickly, says The Toronto Star. The train that Miss Blank was to arrive on was due in Guelph at 5.50, and when 8.30 had arrived and the telephone bell at Telephone City did not arrive, it was feared that the snow of the train or been delayed by the storm.

Two-thirty found Mr. Gummer turning out of his warm bed and getting to retire, and "When the lights had left the garlands dimmed, and all but he departed," there was a loud ringing of the front door bell.

Mr. Gummer put his head out the window above.

"Hello!"

"Hello, yourself!"

"Well!"

"It's me."

"Who's me?"

"Mr. Blank."

In a moment the door was open and Mr. Blank was in the hall, and by him nearly 24 hours to thaw out, as he had left the train on the outer east of Guelph and walked in over the snow-drifts.

Wide Range of the Moose.

The wide range of the moose in North America, is of enormous extent, from Nova Scotia in the extreme east, throughout Canada and certain of the northern United States to the Rocky Mountains in the south-west and north of Alaska. Throughout this immense extent of territory but two species are recognized—the common moose, Alces americanus, and the Alaskan moose, Alces gigas, of the Kenai peninsula—but it is probable that further exploration will bring to light another species near the head waters of the Liard River and the Nassiar Mountains of British Columbia and [illegible] farther north in the neighborhood of the Colville river.—Field and Stream.

CLEARANCE SALE

You know what this means—it means you'll have a chance to buy Quirk & Robertson's winter clothing at very unusual prices. We are bound to make such season take care of itself, and to that end are offering some of the choicest things of the season way below value.

This Will Remind You that the pain of strains, bruises and sprains, common incidents of active out-door life, is drawn from aching bodies by Perry Davis' Painkiller, as a magnet draws bits of iron from sand.

Learn to Stand Well.

Women who wish to preserve the slimness and contour of their figures must begin by learning to stand well. That is explained to mean the throwing forward and upward of the chest, the flattening of the back and the shoulder blades held in their proper places and the definite carrying in of the small of the back, thus throwing the whole weight of the body on the hips. This, in a great measure, preserves the figure because it keeps the muscles firm and well strung and prevents the sinking down of the flesh behind the waist, a combination in women over thirty, which is perfectly easy to attain. Another thing to avoid is a bad habit of going upstairs, as most women do, bent forward, with the chest contracted, which, as well as being an indolent, slouching manner of walking, is injurious to the heart and lungs.

To Keep Baby Healthy.

The three prime essentials for the baby are fresh air, good food and pure water. An infant's first is not appreciated by milk. It needs clean water to drink with regularity. Always hold a baby in your arms when feeding it in about the same position as if nursing it. Regular habits, proper food and long hours of sleep are necessary conditions to a healthy infant. Plain boiled water given between feeding will often aid the digestion and satisfy the child when restless. Do not feed the baby because it cries; its restlessness may be due to pain, and it is hurtful to fill an infant's stomach at such a time.—American Queen.

Sure of a Fine Funeral.

"Larry," said a merchant to a sturdy Irishman in his employ, "are you saving any of your money?"

"Indade I am, sor," replied Larry. "I've got $400 bid away in a safe place."

"But it isn't a public spirited policy to hoard money up that way," remarked the merchant, thinking to quiz him. "You ought to deposit it in a good bank, so as to keep it in circulation."

"Sure it'll all go into circylation the second day after I'm dead, sor," said Larry proudly.—Youth's Companion.

NOTICE.

UNDER SECTION 669 OF THE CONSOLIDATED MUNICIPAL ACT, 1903.

TAKE NOTICE that the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intend to undertake the construction of Concrete Walks in the several sections hereunder written as Local Improvements upon those parts or portions of the streets hereunder written, and to assess forty per cent. of the final cost thereof by means of a special rate per foot, on the property fronting, abutting or adjoining the several parts or portions of the streets comprised in any of the several sections and represented at least one-half in value of the said real property comprised in any such sections, against the said Council against the construction of said sidewalk in any such section within one month after Tuesday, the 15th day of March, 1904, being the last day this Notice is authorized to be published.

LIST OF CONCRETE WALKS WHICH THE COUNCIL INTEND TO CONSTRUCT AS AFORESAID:

Front Street, East side from Victoria Ave. to Pinnacle St., less that section already constructed.

Mill Street, Southeast side, from Church St. to Station St., to connect with the present walk to the G.T.R. station.

The two sections above mentioned to complete the walk from the City Hall to the G.T.R. station.

Bleecker Avenue, East side, from Pine St. to Station St.

Pinnacle Street, East side, from Hotel Quinte to Bank of Montreal.

Bleecker Square, North side, from Front St. to Pinnacle St.

Victoria Ave., both sides, from Front St. to Pinnacle St.

John Street, both sides, from Bridge St. to Victoria Ave.

Coleman Street, West side, from Bridge St. to Holden St.

Bridge Street West, both sides, from William Street to Victoria Ave.

George Street, East side, from Bridge St. to Forin St.

Queen Street, East side, St. to Charles St.

Dundas Street, east side, from Catherine St. to Holloway St.

Dundas Street, north side, from Albert St. to Foster Ave.

Front Street, West side, from Queen's Hotel to City Hall.

George Street, West side, from Victoria Ave. to Forin St.

Persons desiring to petition the said Council against undertaking the construction of any of the said several sections of the proposed work may do so at any time before the 15th day of April next.

Dated at the City Clerk's Office, Belleville, this 8th day of March, 1904.

H. C. MIKEL,
City Solicitor and Clerk.

N.B.—A statement is now on file in the Office of the City Solicitor and Clerk, Belleville, showing the particulars of the proposed works to be so constructed, together with an estimate of the total cost thereof and of the cost per lineal foot to the property owners, payable in cash or by special rate. 621-8-15

"OLD QUEBEC."

COL. PONTON PAYS A HIGH TRIBUTE TO A RECENT WORK,

BY SIR GILBERT PARKER.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—Those whose recent privilege it has been to peruse the historical and biographical work in connection with the "Pioneers of New France" by our distinguished fellow-townsman, Sir Gilbert Parker, will at once recognize that it is far more than the mere garnerings of the Archæologist, far more than the mere collections of the reconteur. We have all the charm of interesting in anecdote and description, but we have also a clear resume of and broad-spirited comment upon the political and administrative development of Canada up to Confederation. The pioneers who laid the foundation of commercial progress and constitutional government are given full justice, while at the same time the many difficulties that surrounded the Governors of old days, both French and English, lead one to believe that arbitrary measures were often both justifiable and necessary. The facts of those who figured in the stirring times of old are reproduced in the pages and illustrations which artistically adorn this excellent work, and their characters stand out clearly under the clear graphic touch of the master hand. Apart from personal references, measures as well as men are treated with a breadth of view and a constitutiary spirit which can leave nothing to be desired either in the old patriots with the old French regime or the most ultra Britisher of modern Anglo-Saxon Imperialists. The vivid and entertaining memories which cling about the walled city of Quebec and the wealth of material associated with the conquest and civilization of Canada, have all been assimilated in a narrative of old historic form so that the result stands out clear and well defined in the mind of the satisfied reader. Let me quote in this brief article from a friend and fellow-citizen's good work, the words with which he concludes the volume:—

"Enlarged understanding between the two peoples of the country will produce a national life marked by courage, energy, integrity and imagination. Though Quebec has ceased to be the political centre of the Dominion, its distinctive genius will be felt through the influence of the people of her province grows no less, but is woven more and more into the web of the general progress. The temples will do well to set an enduring value on that New France so hardly won from a great people and English Canada will reap rich reward for every compromise of party and private made in the interests of peace, equality and justice."

There are many in Ontario who must always be glad to see that the continued accentuation of differences through a permanent dual official language would constitute a disintegrating factor in what should be the chief consideration, viz.: The unification and assimilation of the various ingredients of nationality within the bounds of the British Empire, but while in the past with Gilbert Parker perfect impartiality explains the zealous sensitiveness with which those of French descent cling to their beautiful language not merely for literary and social purposes, but also in connection with its legal and official use under treaty rights, in any event it is a fact. The right has a foundation. We must make the best of it.

"Love thou thy land, with love far-brought
From out the storied past, but used
Within the present, and transfused
To future years through powers of thought."

This, we will be the better enabled to do, after reading "Old Quebec."

Yours, etc.,
W. N. PONTON.

CANCER A CONSTITUTIONAL DISEASE.

Recent experiments all go to show that there is a peculiar condition of the blood that favors the growth of cancer just as there are certain atmospheric conditions that favor the growth of mildew.

This leads to special mission of our Constitutional treatment to so alter this condition that the cancer cannot grow.

That we have been successful is easily proven by testimony of reliable persons who have been cured in all parts of the Dominion. Send 6 cents in stamps for new book, "Cancer, Its Cause and Cure." B. J. Kidder Co., Cancer Specialists, Ont.

No Such Thing As Luck

In Successful Decorating

Successful decorating must be the outcome of study—of thought rather than of mere chance.

In the chance room there will surely be something wrong.

Possibly the color. Perchance Drawing — Likely both.

Whether Chamber, Drawing Room, Living Room, Library or Den, the room must be treated with thought of surroundings, of furniture of complexion, of lighting, of size.

The environment of a room with North or East exposure must not be blue, while either West or Southern exposure may use blue to advantage —

How about Crimsons, Greens and Browns—where may these colors be used—just ask your decorator, if he is worthy the name he can tell you.

CITY COUNCIL IN REGULAR SESSION

Aldermen Argue Eloquently on Question of Who Shall Perform Police Court Duties.

Matter Still Undecided and Referred Back to Executive Committee for Discussion.

By-law Passed re Purchase of Drill Shed Site — Trent Canal Deputation.

The City Fathers put in most of their time last night discussing the now celebrated question, who shall act as Police Court Clerk? Some of them took the ground that the Chief of Police having formerly performed the duties without remuneration, he should continue to do so, inasmuch as the City Clerk had not time to act; others thought that, inasmuch as the by-law appointing the City Clerk expressly stated that he was to perform the duties of Police Court Clerk, the Council had no right to try to shunt these duties on to another man without giving that man extra remuneration. After arguing the matter for an hour or so, the Council resolved to refer it back to the Executive Committee and argue it further. The by-law re the purchase of the Hospital lot as a site for a drill shed was passed, and the Mayor and Chairman of the Executive Committee were appointed a committee to attend before the Board of the Transportation Commission to be held in Peterboro.

Ald. Gordon was the only member of the Council who was faithful to duty there.

The minutes of the former meeting of the Council, and of a special meeting, at which representatives of the press were excluded, were read and approved. The minutes of the special meeting stated that there was a disagreement between Collector Starling and the auditors as to the status of the former, and that the Guarantee Company had been called upon to adjust the same.

Communications.

Mr. Harvey Thompson, of Toronto, wrote in connection with a rotating bathing machine which his company proposed to place in Belleville harbor, stating that they were given a bonus of $2000, they to give the city 25 per cent. of the receipts—deferred to Parks Committee.

The accounts presented were:

Gas Committee, freight on car of coal $94.16

Municipal World, for stationery and debentures 17.60

Reports of Committees.

The reports of the various standing committees, as already published, were read. Ald. Sinclair was chairman in committee of the whole.

When the Trenton Electric Company's account was read Ald. Parkes said the company allowed only 10 cents discount for lights burned out, whereas the police book showed that $2 should be deducted.

The account was then paid less $2.

When the Executive Committee's recommendation that the Chief of Police be paid $100 per year for performing the duties of Police Court Clerk came up.

Ald. McFee moved that the clause in relation to the payment of $50 be struck out. The Chief of Police, he said, was compelled to attend the Police Court, it was his duty to be there and keep a record; he had been performing these duties for years without extra pay, and he could not be absolutely refused to continue the work unless he received $50 more per year. The Chief said he had formerly been paid by the magistrate, and that for the late Clerk, but he (Ald. McFee) contended that it was the Chief's duty. An article to that effect had appeared in the papers, from the Police Court Clerk, in which it was stated that the Chief refused to do the work. It was his duty to perform an official who refused to perform certain duties, and another man took his place.

Ald. Sulman said the by-law appointing the City Clerk showed that it was his duty to act as Police Court Clerk. He did not, however, like the idea of the Chief saying he would not do anything when asked to do so by the Council.

The Mayor explained that at a meeting of the Executive Committee the Chief had stated there was a young man in the police force (Clerk Daly), and he (the Chief) did not propose to do his work. The Police Commissioners would not, the Mayor thought, order the Chief to do the work.

Ald. Sulman said it was the Clerk's business.

The Mayor said it was well nigh impossible for the Clerk to attend all sessions of the Police Court, especially as they were held at a regular time.

Ald. Parker said that the Chief was required by law to attend the Court and keep a record. He said it to him that in trivial cases the Chief might hand over returns to the City Clerk; in the latter, he must attend, was quite willing to attend the important cases. The Chief's action in refusing to perform certain duties was, he thought, rather high-handed. It looked to him as though the Council were being ordered to do certain things by the Police Commissioners, and they (the Council) should hesitate before they paid $50 additional per year to an official over whom they were told they had no control.

Ald. Ketcheson said the Clerk was hired to do certain things, and no other man should be compelled to do them for him unless remunerated for so doing. The by-law appointing the City Clerk expressly stated that he was to act as Police Court Clerk. The citizens as a whole did not appreciate the police force, the members of which were on duty 365 days in the year, with never a holiday at all.

Ald. Sinclair smiled audibly. Just here.

Ald. Ketcheson — "Oh, you can laugh."

Ald. Sinclair—"Excuse me, I was thinking of the holiday the Chief of Police had last summer."

Continuing, Ald. Ketcheson said the police force was half self-supporting, and was composed of a reliable staff of men, who did more for the city than they got credit for. The Chief had told him that he was not supposed to collect money in the Police Court, though he had done so sometimes in the city's interest. He sum med up by reasoned to him that the Clerk was supposed by by-law to perform certain duties, and if he did not perform them he failed in his duty.

The Mayor pointed out that formerly the records had been handed in by the Chief without any commission.

Ald. Sinclair said that the Chief evidently thought that another man was paid to do the work in question, and did not see why he (the Chief) should do so.

Ald. Magrath thought they were in a difficult position. Commissioners rather than the Chief of Police. The Commissioners could not order the Chief to do the work, and if the City Clerk was too busy to do it they must get someone else to hand the returns in. They could not expect the work to be done for nothing. The amount asked was reasonable, and they could not get anyone else to do the work for $50.

Ald. Greer thought that if the by-law placed certain duties on the City Clerk and he had not time to perform them it was for the Council to find a solution. They must back the Clerk up, but the same, he thought, was true on the Chief.

Ald. McFee was amazed at some of the arguments presented. They all appreciated the police force. The Chief had been doing the work; if he had done the work for friendship the former Clerk was glad he refuse to do it now for friendship for the city? If he (Ald. McFee) had a man in his employ who refused to do what he was told he would be kicked out. They could get plenty of men to take the Chief's place at the same pay, and keep the records, too.

Ald. Panter said he understood the City Clerk was quite willing to attend important cases.

The City Clerk said he was quite willing to attend all cases, but it was impossible. For instance, when Court of Revision was in session he was compelled by Statute to attend; how could he at the same time attend Police Court? He had made, since taking office last year, 315 attendances on behalf of the city. He did not know, until recently, that the Police Court records were not coming in, as they had been for ten years.

After some further discussion,

Ald. Panter moved in amendment that the matter be referred back to the Executive Committee, they to confer with the Police Commissioners and see if some solution to the difficulty could not be arrived at, and that the Commissioners request the Chief to turn over to the City Treasurer all moneys belonging to the city in his possession.

The amendment was carried.

The remaining items of the various committees' reports were passed without discussion.

By-laws.

Ald. Panter introduced a by-law to purchase the hospital lot as a site for a new drill shed, and to hand it over to His Majesty the King. The consideration being the agreement turn over to the city the site of the former drill shed; also the $3,000 offered for same. The by-law was read a first and second time.

Before the by-law was passed,

Ald. Panter said there was some talk about the Council not having the right to purchase the site without submitting the matter to the ratepayers. He would ask the City Clerk if the Council had the right in question.

The City Clerk—"Undoubtedly."

Ald. Sinclair asked for the suspension of the rules for the introduction of a motion in relation to the Council sending a deputation to Peterboro, to interview the Chairman of the Transportation Commission which was to enquire into the matter of the completion of the Trent Canal. This was of vital interest to Belleville, and he thought that they, as a Council, should put themselves on record in regard to it.

Other members were in the same vein, and, the rules being suspended,

It was moved by Ald. Sinclair, seconded by Ald. Sulman, that His Worship the Mayor and Ald. Panter be appointed a deputation to interview the city at the conversation re Trent Canal to be held in Peterboro, they to go direct to the Trenton terminus.

This was carried unanimously.

Under the head of notices of motion Ald. Panter announced that at the next meeting he would introduce a by-law for the appointment of an assessor.

Ald. Sinclair asked when the new officials duties would begin.

He was informed that they would begin on May 1st, and must be concluded by September 30th.

Council adjourned.

Czar Wants Powers to Mediate in the Far East and Put an End to the War—Willing to Refer Dispute to Hague Tribunal, and Would Make Concessions in Manchuria.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, March 8.—Information has reached London from various sources that the Czar is most eager to have the Powers mediate in the Far East and put an end to the war which has proved so disastrous thus far to his naval forces.

It is understood that Russia would be willing to refer the whole dispute to the Hague Tribunal, and in order to gain the good will of certain powers she is prepared to make concessions in Manchuria (that would not have been dreamed of before the commencement of the present struggle.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The Globe says the lejunation has been continued for three weeks, but "it has no effect on the hockey situation." What does that mean?

The Napanee T.V.L. team foolishly went to Peterboro and played the T.A.S. team on their own ice last night, thus practically throwing away any chance they had for the championship. The match, a "sudden death" affair, should have been played in Port Hope or Belleville.

Marlboros beat St. Georges 8 to 3 last night and won the city championship of Toronto.

The O.H.A. junior finals, between Listowel and the Beachgroves of Toronto, will be played on the Listowel St. rink to-night. The Kingston lads are favorites, but many think of the western team.

The Peterboro intermediates are billed to play a Marlboro team in Peterboro to-morrow night, which match, the Peterboro papers say, will likely end the season in that town."

The final match in the O.H.A. intermediate series, according to The Globe, will be played in Stratford to-night.

Somebody writing in the New York Sun gives the following very apt description of hockey. Who will say he doesn't know whereof he speaks?:

"Hockey is not a game that can be played in a drawing-room. It is too rough and frequently some of the players are very seriously hurt. Accidents often happen and players are provided with the puck or cut with the sticks or skates. There are set rules which regulate in a measure the roughness but the player becomes so expert that it is very hard to tell what is intentional and what is accidental."

The Toronto Lacrosse Club, last season, spent $900 in "testimonials" for its players. Oh, yes, lacrosse is a strictly amateur game.

HOCKEY.

T.A.S. Are T.V.L. Champions.

Peterboro, March 7.—For the second year in succession the T.A.S. Ottawa Cup, representative of the championship of the Trent Valley Hockey League, was won by the total Abstinence Society team. The final game was played to-night with Napanee, and won by the home team by a score of 7 to 3, in one of the best games of the season in the series. The ice was in good condition, and both teams played hockey, but Napanee team was outclassed by the faster forwards on the T.A.S. septette, who played a good combination game. To-night's game was unique in one particular, viz., it was the only game played here this season in which no players were ruled off. Both teams played hockey from the start to finish, and Chauncey Elliott's duties as referee were light. Williams, for the Napanee team, played a first-class game, but the remaining forwards were up against faster and better men. The first goal went to Napanee, but the home team quickly evened up, and soon had the game clinched. The teams were as follows:

The T.A.S. supporters are holding high carnival to-night in honor of the winning of the championship, and fireworks are being supplied by headreds from the T.A.S. buildings.

SUICIDE AT NAPANEE.

SAMUEL HENWOOD, HIS MIND DERANGED, HANGED HIMSELF THIS MORNING.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Napanee, Ont., March 8.—Samuel Henwood committed suicide about 7 o'clock this morning by hanging himself in his blacksmith shop.

He was about 70 years of age, and it is thought his mind was slightly deranged as a result of a fall sustained some years ago.

MR. STARLING'S STATEMENT.

HAS NOTHING TO CONCEAL, AND IS QUITE CONFIDENT THAT, WHEN MATTERS ARE EXPLAINED, ALL WILL BE FOUND SATISFACTORY.

The Intelligencer, to-day had an interview with Mr. J. H. Starling in connection with the disagreement between himself and the city's auditors in regard to the returns for the roll of 1901, reference to which was made in the Council meeting last night.

Mr. Starling says that he has paid over all the city without delay, all moneys collected by him. The city's rolls have been checked with his receipts, and that he has never been held responsible for any clerical errors which may have been made by other people.

Sloppy Weather.

[Whilst no damage of any particular moment was done in the city yesterday by the continued rain, many people in various parts of the city were inconvenienced by the streets surrounded their premises. On some streets crossings upon the walks to such a depth that only pedestrians who were provided with rubber boots could navigate, being at the deepest page of the rain during the night. The water was given an opportunity of running away.

McINTOSH BROS.

ARCHITECT'S EPPERIMENTS.

Church Built by One Man—Sexhibits and Snow, with Protection Boxes for Doors, Served Supposing.

At Stirtchall, near Coventry, may be seen a church that—among Englisn Churches at all events—possesses the unique distinction of having been built by the unaided efforts of one man alone. The name of this persistent and assiduous workman was John Green, a shoemaker and Coventry, who laid the first stone in 1810, and finished his self-imposed task seven years later.

When the Rev. C. H. Sellwood Goodwin came into the living of St. Aidan's, near Middlesbrough, he found the flock without a place of worship. For a time he was at his wits' end and knew not what to do for the cost of even a temporary wooden structure was far beyond the very limited means of the poor neighborhood. But, tenacious to his purpose and even full of resource, he did not remain long idle, and having been fortunate enough to secure a suitable site, set to work himself to dig the foundations.

Such energy and enthusiasm proved contagious, and every Saturday afternoon, and often, too, on other evenings after working hours, a crowd of willing assistants might be seen aiding their pastor in his laudable design. Gifts of timber, bricks, glass, slates, etc., were not wanting, and after several weeks of hard but pleasant toil these zealous workers were rewarded by the possession of a building which any parish would have been proud.

A worthy missionary, the Rev. E. J. Peck, rose to the occasion when, having no church for his Eskimo congregation, he constructed one out of snow-blocks—a rude but efficient structure, that served its purpose of protecting its occupants from the biting winds that often rage around. The seats, the altar, and all else within were likewise made of snow.

On Hindmarsh Island, Encounter Sound, this same missionary displayed his further ingenuity by building in the erection of a place of worship some forty sealskins, which were sewn and stretched over a framework of whale's ribs. For seats ordinary packing cases or boards did duty. The pastor, however, reckoned without his parishioners' dogs, which, pressed by hunger, partially devoured the church, and were only kept off with great difficulty. The rents that their voracity had made in the sealskins were subsequently mended with pieces of canvas and odd sacks.

The Chapel of Transfiguration, which belongs to Conanicut Island, Narragansett Bay, is built on wheels so that it can be transferred from place to place as occasion requires. During the summer it is stationed at Conanicut Park, near Jamestown, but when approaching winter drives people from the hotel and adjoining houses, the church moves likewise, and follows its congregation into winter quarters. Its removal necessitates the employment of a team of twenty oxen.

Along the nine miles of navigable canal that lie within the boundaries of the parish of Holme, Hants, is towed a structure somewhat similar in appearance to a house-boat. This is the floating church of St. Withburga, to which flock such of the inhabitants of the neighboring villages as, whom distance, or other reason, precludes from attending the parish church.

This unique place of worship, which is built upon a flat-bottomed lighter, is 30 feet in length by 7 feet in height, and cost £250 to erect. It contains, in addition to benches for the choir, thirty-six chairs for the use of the congregation, a small organ, and a reading desk. On the whole it answers most satisfactorily, though certain of the worshipers have, through the gentle rocking of the boat, experienced at times the qualms of sea sickness.

Power is a fretful thing and hath its wings always spread for flight—Shakespeare.

BANK CLERK SHOT SELF

Lucas B. Appleton Was Called Upon to Explain Shortage.

Was Facing Ruinwy of Molsons Bank, Montreal, While Waiting to Go in to Explain to the General Manager a Shortage in Molsons Bank, Toronto, of Which He Was a Teller, When He Suddenly Shot Himself With Revolver.

Montreal, March 8.—Lucas B. Appleton, a clerk in the Toronto branch of the Molson's Bank, who had been summoned here by General Manager Elliott to explain an alleged shortage, committed suicide early this afternoon outside the door of the head office.

Appleton called upon Mr. Elliott yesterday morning, but was told by the general manager to come back in the afternoon, which he did, and while walking up and down the hallway outside the manager's office drew a revolver and discharged its contents into his brain.

Appleton, who has a wife and family, died instantly. The remains were taken to the morgue and afterwards sent to Toronto.

A Teller in Toronto.

Toronto, March 8.—Deceased was one of the tellers in the Molson's Bank at King and Day streets, and was well known. He left for Montreal on Saturday, leaving word at his home that he would be home on Monday. He lived at 601 Spadina avenue. The local officials decline to make a statement.

Drowned Off a Ferry Boat.

Quebec, March 8.—There was drowned this morning accident, at 8.30 o'clock yesterday morning from the ferry boat Montmorency. A woman was seen floating on the river and the captain of the steamer Lord Aberdeen and another lady passengers on board when he left Levis was informed. The latter noticed a woman crying on board, but nobody paid attention to her jump overboard. Investigation has been ordered by the authorities.

ELEVATOR BROKE HIS NECK.

Adam Harvert's Son Instantly Killed at Knechtel Furniture Factory.

Hanover, March 8.—A sad accident happened here yesterday in the Knechtel Furniture Company's factory, causing the death of Adam Havert, one of the company's oldest employes. Some of the belts in the gearing of one of the elevators became loose and Mr. Harvert was busily attended to all repairing in the factory, went to tighten them. This being done, the elevator was started down the shaft, but, caught on a projecting rod and stopped. When the elevator stopped the machinery went on and unwound the cable which held it. Mr. Harvert, then went under to see what was wrong, and catching hold of the swinging cable gave it a jerk. In doing so the elevator was loosened and commenced to fall. Seeing his danger he tried to get from under, but was too late, the elevator striking him, breaking his neck. He leaves a widow and six young children to mourn his untimely death.

Smidzer is Dead.

Cornwall, March 8.—An accident with fatal results occurred at the Toronto Paper Company's mill here. Gracie Hanton, the seven-year-old daughter of J. Hanton of Holyoke, Mass., recently of Cornwall, went into the mill to call her brother-in-law, Fred Cartwright, to supper on Saturday night. In some way she got into a room used to carry off the exhaust steam, and was scalded so badly that she died next morning.

Fatal Emery Wheel Burst.

Hamilton, March 8.—Martin Quiatkoski, an Armenian workman, had his head crushed by a grindstone bursting at the International Harvester Company's works. He was employed in the Malleable Iron Foundry, and was holding an iron bar on an emery wheel when the grindstone burst and struck part and flew in all directions. One piece struck the unfortunate man on the head. Although it broke his skull he lived for several hours.

A Frightful Death.

Hamilton, March 8.—Hoss Hall, aged 22 years, met a frightful death yesterday morning at the steel plant of the Hamilton Steel & Iron Co. About 4 o'clock his left arm was caught in a cog wheel, and was drawn in until the limb was wrenched from the socket at the shoulder. He lived only two hours after the accident. He came here a short time ago from Woodbridge. His parents live at Bowmanville. An inquest has been opened.

Chopped Wife's Head Off.

Ottawa, March 8.—G. P. Menard, a C.P.R. section man, living in Clarence Township, Russell County, chopped his wife's head off with an axe at midnight Sunday, and then slashed his own throat with a knife and pushed his forehead with an axe. He will die. There were six little children in the house at the time.

Razors Brought Him 1 Year.

Arnprior, March 8.—John Clarke, who was arrested at Mattawa on Friday last for entering Posey's barber shop at Arnprior and stealing fourteen razors, was brought here yesterday by Chief Mattson, and pleading guilty was sentenced by Police Magistrate Tierney to one year at hard labor in Kingston Penitentiary.

Father of 42 Children.

Washington, March 8.—Joseph Smith, the Mormon, before the Senate Committee, said that he had 42 children, 21 boys and 21 girls.

Banquet to Three Politicians.

Montreal, March 8.—Hon. Messrs. Prefontaine, Brodeur and Lemieux, were banquetted here this evening at the Place Vigor.

MR. BALFOUR EXPLAINS.

The Resignation Forced by British Cabinet Dissensions Partially Explained Colleagues—Government Majority 65.

London, March 8.—(C. A. P.)—Premier Balfour, replying to a question put by John Edward Ellis, M. P. (Labourite), gave an explanation before the Cabinet split in the course of which he said the Government crisis was a matter that came about when Mr. Chamberlain made his memorable speech in May last. The Cabinet was divided on the subject of fiscal reform. "But I was practically decided among us that the subject should not be raised, but put on one side till the end of the session. At the beginning of August he circulated among his colleagues his views on the position of insular free trade, and up to the date of the last Cabinet meeting for August he hoped to keep all his colleagues.

He Was Hopeful.

But no compromise being suggested on the fiscal question by the members of the Government who afterwards retired he began to abandon hope. His view at the time was that it was contrary to his public duty to leave his position as head of the Government, so long as he retained the confidence of the King and the Parliament. In September he came to the conclusion that some break in the Cabinet was inevitable, and Mr. Chamberlain arrived at the same view. In these circumstances the Cabinet meeting of Sept. 14 assembled. Mr. Chamberlain expressed his view there, and at the meeting that he would resign if a colonial preference was not part of his letter Mr. Chamberlain expressed the view that he could not remain silent on his propaganda in an independent position.

Another reason which made him feel there was a chance of keeping the Cabinet united the end of the session he spoke of with diffidence, for he knew that the public ear, as he felt, was not to believe that Lord George Hamilton and Mr. Ritchie had the unanimous support of remaining members of a Government pledged to fiscal reform. He heard even speculation as to what would occur when in consequence of the break up in the Government he would resign his place as Premier. He then stated the views he had previously held and came to the conclusion that it was not within the range of practical politics to impose a food tax.

No human being denied that a conceivable concession on the part of foreign countries, if accompanied with a conceivable minimum duty on food, would enormously subserve the interests of free trade.

Mr. Ritchie Sympathized.

His sympathized with Mr. Ritchie and Lord George Hamilton and strongly denied jockeying the rest of the Cabinet. He had reason to complain of the course pursued by Lord George Hamilton in charging that he kept them ignorant of Mr. Ritchie's retirement. As he stated it in writing, they by speech. He also complained that Lord George Hamilton had allowed Lord Rosebery to make misstatements regarding these documents. Mr. Balfour, referring to the Duke of Devonshire, said he felt sorry if correspondence of an unduly controversial nature occurred at the time of his resignation. The Duke of Devonshire "has one of the assets of our public life and the country could never forget his great and permanent services."

Lord George Hamilton.

Lord George Hamilton asserted without the possibility of denial that the document placed before the Cabinet contained proposals for the total abolition of the corn duties because he could get no guarantee that preference would not form part of the Government program. The statement he referred to was never so far as he knew withdrawn. Mr. C. T. S. Ritchie, Lord George Hamilton and Mr. Austen Chamberlain per Unionists walked out not caring to be voted down by the Government whose majority was 65.

Scotch Curlers Win Rink.

Montreal, March 8.—(C.A.P.)—Rev. John Kerr, captain of the Scottish curlers who visited Canada in 1903, has published an account of the tour. It is a book of 800 pages, profusely illustrated. The rink defeated to Lord Minto. It says the reception they received "did them beyond all belief."

London, March 8.—The imports to Britain from Canada for the month of February were as follows: Cattle, 5,158 head, valued at £39,279; sheep and lambs, 3,273 head, valued at £5,086; wheat, cwts., 475,000, valued at £172,094; wheat meal and flour, cwts., 141,600, valued at £70,870; oats, cwts., 22,180, valued at £7,796; bacon, cwts., 53,041, valued at £21,711; hams, cwts., 13,496, valued at £35,910; butter, cwts., 2,205, valued at £9,720; cheese, cwts., 75,446, valued at £193,219; eggs, great hundreds, 1,000, valued at £7,585; horses, 15 head, valued at £600.

Mr. Smart Reports Progress.

London, March 8.—James A. Smart, Deputy Minister of the Interior, has returned from a visit to the Continent, and is now assisting over the prospects for a very largely increasing number of Continental emigrants. They are in the agricultural class. The mayor of one town is sending four sons to Canada. Literature visited by Mr. Smart he was treated with the greatest courtesy and attention. Mr. Smart personally interviewed the members of the Government. He is also returning to Canada as soon as he intended.

Something Interesting Promised.

Toronto, March 8.—There was monotony in the session of the Civic investigation yesterday. The Assessment Department was again under fire. To-day something more interesting is promised, however, in the examination of many aldermen and former members of the Council as to their share in stuffing the lists.

NATIONAL CONVENTION

Decides One Record of Live Stock For Each Breed in Canada.

National Association of Stock Breeders Formed at Ottawa—Representatives From All Points of the Dominion Present—The Dairy Cattle and the Fat Stock and Allied Classes Make a Brave Show at the Exhibition—Other Notes.

Ottawa, March 8.—A meeting, convened for the purpose of forming a national association of stock breeders, opened yesterday morning in the City Hall, with an attendance of about eighty from all parts of Canada.

F. W. Hodson, Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, presided, and among those present were: Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario; J. R. Anderson, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Victoria, B.C.; W. Peterson, Calgary; G. H. Grey, Winnipeg; T. A. Peters, Fredericton; E. D. Elderkin, Amherst, N.S.; Mr. Turner, president Horse Breeders' Association, N.W. T.; Hon. Wm. Beresford, president Cattle Breeders' Association, N.W. T.; A. P. Macdonald, president Western Stock Breeders' Association; Mr. Gigault, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Quebec.

The several Provincial representatives were called upon to deliver addresses, beginning with Hon. John Dryden, who congratulated the stock breeders upon getting together in a national convention.

A Royal Welcome.

At the afternoon session of the National Convention of Stock Breeders, His Excellency the Governor-General and party paid a visit and was the recipient of an address read by Hon. John Dryden. His Excellency, in reply, expressed his strong interest in stock breeding and hoped that a strong national organization would be formed. Mayor Ellis extended a civic welcome. Hon. Sydney Fisher, who presided in the afternoon, outlined the objects of the gathering.

The committee, upon records, which met during the forenoon, decided in the hands of the meeting the following resolution: That this convention advises the establishment of one record of live stock for each breed in Canada. The resolution nearly all present spoke, opinion being unanimously in its favor.

The Fat Stock Show.

The fat stock and allied shows are now in full blast at the Exhibition grounds. Yesterday Blank street took on its country look, and a fair appearance, the procession of live stock and from the Canada Atlantic and Canadian Pacific Railway yards being an almost continuous one. At noon to-day the show will be in position, and judging will be commenced at 1 p.m.

Many Exhibitors.

All the dairy cattle arrived yesterday and were placed in their quarters. The showing is splendid one, the number of exhibitors being double that of last year. In the Dairy Department the different breeds represented are the Holsteins, Ayrshires, Shorthorns and Grades. Several herds of the cattle are also arrived, including the crack animals from Senator Edwards' model farm at Rockland, and the prize-winning herd of Shorthorns from Mr. Simmons' stables at Columbus, Ont. More arrived during the afternoon.

Amongst the other cattle men represented are Reid & Co.; J. C. Smith of Greenbank; Jones Bros., Greenbank; James Rennie, Brackley Farm; Robert McRae, and J. B. Hood, Guelph.

The principal exhibitors of swine are: J. E. Brethour, Burford; Snell & Lyons, Sinclgrove; J. A. Richardson, Sunny Slope Farm; W. Teasdale, Maple Lodge, and J. H. Jull and J. Lloyd Jones, Burford.

Among the sheep men represented at the show are A. W. Smith and John Wright, Claremont; W. E. Wright, Glenworth, and R. H. Harding, Thorndale.

County Judges Appointed.

Ottawa, March 8.—The following have been appointed County Court Judges: Messrs. E. C. B. Lloyd, Cobourg; Talbot Macbeth, London; George B. Douglas, Chatham; J. J. Donahue, St. Thomas; J. J. O'Meara, Pembroke, and J. L. Dowling, Ottawa.

Dr. Wilson to the Senate.

Ottawa, March 8.—Dr. Wilson of Ste. Thomas has been appointed to the seat in the Senate rendered vacant by the death of Dr. Landerkin. Dr. Wilson represented East Elgin in the House for some years when the Liberals were in Opposition.

Big Heat in Ice.

Halifax, N.S., March 8.—The steamer Mystic, from Boston, which arrived at Louisburg, C.B., yesterday, reported having spoken the steamer, either a passenger or a freight boat, fast in the ice off White Head, N.S.

Asked For More Money.

Moncton, N.B., March 8.—Yesterday a deputation of the Board of Railway Clerks met Hon. H. R. Emmerson, with respect to an increase in their pay. Mr. Emmerson and family left for Ottawa last night.

Father Quinan Dead.

Montreal, March 8.—Rev. Father Quinan, for many years parish priest at Sydney, C.B., died here at the Grey Nunnery, after a long illness. The remains will be sent home for burial.

Strike Referred to Locals.

Indianapolis, March 8.—The United Mine Workers in national convention voted yesterday to refer the final decision as to accepting the wage offer of the operators to the locals.

VOL. 37. BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 1904. NO. 261

There are two kinds of emulsions of cod liver oil—Scott's and all the others. Not one of the latter is as valuable as Scott's Emulsion and there's a reason for it. Only the purest ingredients enter our Emulsion and its quality never varies. That is why it helps when all others fail.

There's not much oil in the market now; it's scarce and high in price. But seal oil and other inferior oils are cheap and plentiful. That's why you can buy so many substitutes for Scott's Emulsion at a lower price.

We guarantee our Emulsion to be the best remedy for weak lungs, low vitality and wasting conditions. Who guarantees the others?

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

BLOW TO THE RUSSIANS

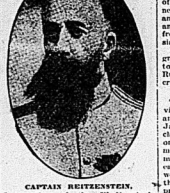
Japanese Destroy or Capture the Vladivostock Squadron.

No Details of the Fight Yet Received, But Roanel Burleigh's Story Is Likely —Marquis Ito Protector of Corea— Means That the Peninsula Will Become Japanese Military Base and Source of Supplies.

London, March 9.—The Daily Telegraph publishes a despatch from Tokio, dated March 7, and saying: "It is reported that the Japanese fleet engaged the Russian Vladivostock squadron at sea yesterday. The result is not announced, but it is believed the Russian ships were destroyed or captured."

Would Appear Quite Likely.

London, March 9.—Far Eastern despatches make no further mention of the rumor that the Russian Vladivostock squadron has been engaged and the Tokio correspondent (Bennet Burleigh) of The Daily Telegraph cabling on the night of Tuesday,



CAPTAIN REITZENSTEIN, Commander of the Vladivostock Squadron.

March 8, says: "No details have yet been received of the fight at Vladivostock."

The whereabouts of the Vladivostock squadron is still unknown, and it would appear quite likely that a naval battle has occurred, as every one places great faith in The Daily Telegraph's correspondent, Bennet Burleigh.

The sending of Marquis Ito on a mission to Corea is regarded here as the most significant news of the day, and it is believed to indicate a virtual protectorate over Corea, which will become the Japanese military base and source of supplies. Marquis Ito enjoys a great prestige in Corea.

It is reported from Shanghai that Viceroy Alexieff is preparing to remove his headquarters to Harbin, after having in vain ordered the Tartar general to dismiss the Chinese garrison at Mukden.

To Seize Newchwang.

London, March 9.—In Shanghai it is believed that the Japanese will attempt the seizure of Newchwang as soon as the ice clears. A correspondent of The Daily Express at Shanghai asserts that the Russians are throwing up a continuous line of earthworks at Kaiping to Linoyang.

The Che Foo correspondent of The Daily Express reports that a large Japanese fleet has been seen proceeding towards Newchwang.

Among other unconfirmed reports, it is said at Yinkow that the Japanese have advanced to Fenghoangcheng (about forty miles northwest of Wiju). It is also reported that news has reached Osaka, Japan, of an engagement between Japanese and Russians at a point 160 miles from Vladivostock, in which the Russians fled.

A correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Tokio says, that according to reports from Port Arthur, the Russian battleship Retvizan and the cruiser Askold have been refloated.

Thought to Go to Seoul.

Tokio, March 9.—The forthcoming visit of Marquis Ito, as a special ambassador from the Emperor of Japan to the Emperor of Corea claims general attention. It was originally planned to send a prominent Japanese to Seoul as a permanent resident adviser to the Corean Government and various names were suggested. The announcement that Marquis Ito is going is a surprise. In official circles it is insisted that the object of Marquis Ito's visit to Corea is not politically important.

It is denied that Japan has any new plan to execute. It is thought, however, that Marquis Ito will make an investigation of the general conditions in Corea and formulate possibly some recommendations which will be useful in the adoption of a policy for the future.

Maharoff Arrives.

Port Arthur, March 9.—Vice-Admiral Makaroff, who takes command of the Russian Pacific fleet, arrived here yesterday and hoisted his flag on the cruiser Askold. Four merchantmen have been brought into Port Dalny.

Ordered to Vice Passports.

Vladivostock, March 9.—The military commandant here has ordered all foreigners to have their passports viséed by the Local Government and commercial agents of their respective countries. Most of the residents of Vladivostock are sending their families into the interior. The girls' school and the boys' gymnasium will be transferred into the interior.

Hospital Dogs For the War.

St. Petersburg, March 9.—The Russian Kennel Club has offered to provide the Red Cross Society with dogs trained to find and relieve the wounded on the battlefield and in rough country districts. These dogs carry restoratives, and an aid packet attached to their collars. The offer probably will be accepted.

The offer of a society woman to form a body of 2,000 Amazons to fight against the Japanese has been greeted with laughter at the War Office. The Gazette urges a boycott of British goods and ships.

RACE WAR IMMINENT.

Ohio Militia Ordered Out to Proceed to Springfield.

Springfield, O., March 9.—Threats throughout the day and last evening at the levee, the negro district of the city, caused Major G. J. Bowlus to ask Governor Herrick for troops. Two companies from Dayton and one each from Miamisburg, Urbana and Columbus, were promised to reinforce the two local companies. Many of the negroes of the city were surly last night and it is believed only slight provocation was needed to start a race war. Crowds of whites gathered in the vicinity of the levee last night and all day guards were ordered to report for night duty.

At 9.30 the crowd in the levee district had increased to 1,500 and one or two revolver shots have been fired at random. In contrast with the night before not a negro was to be seen in the downtown districts, although hundreds of them were thought to be heavily armed and awaiting an attack. All saloons throughout the city were closed.

At 11.20 the threat of the mob was made good, and a volume of flame was seen to shoot up from the rear of a place occupied by "Lew" Thomas, a colored saloonkeeper. At midnight, an entire block in Washington street was on fire.

Militia Ordered Out.

Columbus, O., March 9.—Upon urgent requests of Mayor Bowlus of Springfield that a race war is imminent, as a result of the lynching of the negro, Dixon, Governor Herrick last night ordered eight companies of militia to Springfield to preserve order. Springfield, Urbana, Dayton, Xenia, Miamisburg and Piqua were called out.

Governor Herrick ordered Mayor Bowlus to close the saloons and instructed the colored members of Company A, 9th Battalion, to rest on their arms in the armory and see that none of the guns were stolen.

WAR GUNS FOR INDIA.

Artillery and Rifles to Be Sent At Point of Danger Contract.

London, March 9.—On formally introducing the army estimates for the coming year in the House of Commons, War Secretary Arnold-Foster announced that a new field and horse artillery gun had been adopted, unrivalled in Europe. It was hoped to complete 108 field guns and 18 horse artillery guns during the financial year, practically the whole to be sent to India, the only possible place of contact with a great European army, and where long ranges were common. The guns would fire 12½ and 12½ pound projectiles.

A new rifle was also in course of manufacture, the Secretary further announced, and India would take 71,000 stands thereof the coming year.

TORONTO FACTORY FIRE.

Employes Jumped to Save Their Lives, But One May Die.

Toronto, March 9.—Flames, which spread rapidly, utterly destroyed the four-storey factory building of D. W. Thompson & Co., cabinet, furniture and mattress manufacturers, on Robinson street, yesterday afternoon, endangering the safety of employes, some of whom jumped for their lives, resulting in the injury to one, and later imperilling the firemen from falling walls. Wm. Jamieson, the foreman, fell from the fourth storey and his leg and skull were fractured. The doctors hold out no hope of his recovery. The loss will be $100,000, with $60,000 insurance.

Woman Hanged Herself.

St. Mary's, March 9.—Mrs. Bruce, wife of Robert Bruce, a well-to-do farmer, of Blanshard, committed suicide Sunday morning, by hanging herself from a beam in a shed adjoining the house. It is a sad case, evidently due to melancholia, produced by poor health.

THE END OF FORTY YEARS' EFFORT.

Writing to the Boston Transcript, an Ottawa correspondent says that John Charlton has been banished from public life just in time to escape the sorrow of facing the defeat of his pet scheme to bring about reciprocity between Canada and the United States. The correspondent in question says:

"For more than forty years Mr. Charlton was devoted to the idea of bring about reciprocity between the Republic and the Dominion. It was but only that he saw profit for both in the scheme, but that he dreamed of it producing permanent peace, and all the blessings, without the difficulties, of political union. The thought of Canada as a man well might who was an Englishman by blood, an American by nativity, and a Canadian by adoption. To draw together his three countries was his vision of duty. He conceived that the Dominion's political and geographical situation indicated it to be providentially appointed to serve largely in the great work of race union. Being an earnest Christian, he was inclined to perceive the hand of God where some see only accidents and happenings. Reciprocity was one might say, part of his religion. For the best part of his creed he suffered much vilification, and bore it with dignity, if not without pain. Mr. Charlton valued affection, he desired the goodwill of the men among whom his lot was cast; he was assailed for many years by the taunts and spites of certain narrow British-Canadians who imagined themselves justified in hating him because they supposed his cause that of treachery to the British interest in Canada. But such a one deal some public men get the sweet reward of general praise that they stood always steadfast for what the slow majority seems at last to recognize as wisdom. One of the saddest of fates must be to know that one's self devoted his life rightcously to a lost cause. Were Mr. Charlton still himself, that fate scarcely fall to be his conviction."

TIMELY TOPICS.

The question of home work for children has always been a bone of contention and a fruitful topic for discussion. Many people think that home work should be abolished entirely, and by this they are now backed up by so important a personage as Mr. John Millar, Deputy Minister of Education, who is thus quoted by the Toronto Star:

"I believe the most pressing need is the abolition almost entirely of home work. It is hardly the thing that when children are kept busy five hours a day they should be taxed with lessons at night. The effect is to make children out of happy instead of cheerful. Five hours a day of school should be quite sufficient for any pupil under 12 years. There is little use of hearings. Reciprocity was one might say, part of his religion. For the best part of his creed he suffered much vilification, and bore it with dignity, if not without pain. Mr. Charlton valued affection, he desired the goodwill of the men among whom his lot was cast; he was assailed for many years by the taunts and spites of certain narrow British-Canadians who imagined themselves justified in hating him because they supposed his cause that of treachery to the British interest in Canada. But such a one deal some public men get the sweet reward of general praise that they

We all like to puzzle our brains over things which give certain and strange results, but which we cannot explain. Here's a puzzle that puzzles everybody. Take the number of your lucky brothers, double the amount, add to it three, multiply the result by five, add to it the number of living sisters, multiply the result by ten, add to it the number of deaths of brothers and sisters, subtract 150 from the result. The right hand side figure will be the number of deaths, the middle figure the number of living sisters, and the left figure the number of living brothers.

Well! Well! Another Senate vacancy in Ontario filled, and Nathaniel still out. When is the solemn promise of Ministers to be filled? Nathaniel, weep our sympathy. Why, Nathaniel, they treat you as an uncompromising partizan, who will follow them through they be to you every day in the year!

In a late election trial in England, it was proven that votes were bought for "sixpence," twelve cents each, upon which a contemporary says: "We can do a good deal better than that in Canada." That true, but is it not an unanswerable argument against universal suffrage! Manhood franchise, without educational qualification, and the ballot in Canada proved a fraud of the worst kind.

DIED AT MELROSE.

MR. DONALD ANDERSON, IN HIS 83rd YEAR, PASSED AWAY ON MARCH 4th.

There died at Melrose, on Friday, March 4th, a highly respected and honorable old gentleman in the person of Mr. Donald Anderson, who had been for upwards of 19 years a member of the County Council. Deceased was born in 1812 at Perthshire, Scotland, and came to Canada with his wife, one son and two daughters in 1850, settling near Melrose, Tyendinaga Township, where he has since resided. His wife, whose maiden name was Christian Robertson, and whom he married in Perthshire, Scotland, died in 1860, his son, Charles, dying in 1888. The two daughters still survive, they being Mrs. Donald McFarlane, of the 3rd concession of Tyendinaga, and Miss Elizabeth at home. Mr. Alex. Anderson was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, a staunch Conservative and a reader of The Intelligencer for nearly half a century. He will be remembered by all who knew him as an upright, honest man.

TO BREAK UP A COLD

Right quickly nothing works so nicely as Nerviline taken real hot. It sends a glowing warmth through the body, and when rubbed on the throat and chest loosens up the cough and relieves tightness and soreness in the chest. Nerviline is used as a preventative and cure for colds, coughs and winter ills in thousands of homes, because it is splendid to work and brings relief quickly. There is no remedy in the world with half the power and merit of Nerviline; it's invaluable in every house. In large bottles, price 25c.

"and have been taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets which have helped me very much so that now I can eat many things that before I could not." If you have any trouble with your stomach why not try these tablets and get well? For sale by all druggists.

Literary Notes.

The Designer for April is brimful of seasonable stories, poems and articles of general interest. "Decorated Tables for Wedding Breakfasts," "Easter Brides" and "Pattie's Wedding" give hints most valuable to the prospective bride, as do "Confirmation Costumes" to the young girl intending to join the church. "April Fools and Court Jesters" is well written by John De Morgan, and beautifully illustrated with reproductions of famous paintings, and "The Lily in Legendary Lore" embodies under one head the many exquisite superstitions connected with this, the flower dedicated to Easter. "What Women Are Doing," "Helps Along the Way" and "Knots and Whatnots" continue their rash rewards for all meritorious contributions.

A Nagging Cough drives sleep and comfort away. You can conquer it with Allen's Lung Balsam, which believes hard breathing, pain in the chest and irritation of the throat. Give it freely to the children.

NOT MUCH CONSOLATION.

ELECTRIC LINES DO NOT PAY ON LONG REACHES.

Promoters and investors interested in electric lines will not find consolation in the last report of the Railroad Commissioners of Massachusetts. Out of 105 companies in that state, no less than 65, new and old, declared and paid no dividends. A goodman of very large experience interested in electric lines operations in Massachusetts recently stated that electric lines do not pay except very operated within densely populated city districts or within a very short radius thereof as Boston and its immediate suburbs. Judged by this standard electric lines in Ontario outside of those operated within cities, will not be able to earn dividends at least for many years to come when the population of that province becomes more dense than Massachusetts where so many electric lines are not profitable. At present there is in Massachusetts a population of 349 per square mile against approximately 10 per square mile in Ontario, or roughly 34 to 1. Aside from this indication as to Ontario being an unfavorable field for electric line operation, it is interesting to note that Ontario now pays 4 times as large a steam railway mileage as Massachusetts to each one thousand of population.—Kingston News and Times, February 25th, 1904.

SORROW, MY SORROW.

Sorrow, my sorrow, I thought that you would be
My faithful mate, and bear me company
Whether around live, but now I find that you,
Like all, are fickle too.
Sorrow, my sorrow, you have left me here
Forlorn than all the rest that went before;
For you were last to come and longest stay,
And you were dearest when you went away.
Sorrow, my treasured grief, my hoarded pain,
Where shall I turn to have you mine again?

Wherever there are other breaks that ache,
Wherever there are hearts too hard to break,
Wherever there are hearts too hard to pray,
Turn and look for me, you shall find me there.
But not to take and have me for your own,
Or keep me, as you thought me, yours alone;
If you would have me as I used to be,
Beyond yourself you must abide with me.

GOLD MINES.

Some Receipts That Bring Their Owners Great Returns.

The Oxford Press Syndicate value the formula for making the thin, tough paper used in printing their Bibles at a quarter of a million sterling, it having cost them over twenty-five years of hard work and twenty thousand pounds in cash to discover and perfect the process. Even more valuable, probably, is the secret of the manufacture of the paper upon which the notes of the Bank of England are printed, which belongs, as is generally known, to the Portals of Laverstoke, who have accumulated a fortune from it inside of a couple of generations. The brilliant crimson cloth of which the Cardinals' robes at the Vatican are made has been supplied for generations past by the same family of cloth merchants at Dortscheil, near Aix-la-Chapelle, the secret process by which the dye is distilled having been handed down from father to son. The family (says a writer in Chambers' Journal) curiously enough, is of Huguenot descent, and its members are to this day staunch Protestants.

A Wiltshire firm of bacon-curers paid no less than ten thousand pounds for the Brandenburg method of curing ham, while a certain special chutney, or rather the method of mixing it, originally bought for a few rupees from a poor Hindu trader changed hands a few months back for seven thousand five hundred pounds. The famous Worcester sauce is made according to a recipe hundreds of years old, which was bought "for a song" from the butler of a county family by the then head of the firm of Lea & Perrins, of Worcester. To-day the little faded scrap of yellow paper, with its almost indecipherable hieroglyphics, is valued by its owners at many thousands of pounds sterling.

About a hundred and fifty years ago there resided in the town of Doncaster a certain barber named Martin. To him also came one day to be shaved a soldier, who mentioned in the course of conversation that he was obliged to return to his regiment at York on foot, as he had not the wherewithal to pay his coach fare. Mr. Martin, having himself known poverty in his younger days, lent the man sufficient money for his purpose, and a little while later received it back, according to promise; but there was something else in the envelope; a crippled paper on which was written a recipe for a certain preparation, which, explained the sender in a covering letter, he had long used upon the hoofs of the men of his corps. The barber at once made a small quantity according to directions, found it excellent, entered into a partnership with a friend of his named Day, a horse-dealer, of Tavistock street, London, and was rewarded for his enterprise by seeing, before he died, the firm of Day & Martin, blacking manufacturers, blossom forth into one of the biggest businesses of its kind in the world.—Glasgow Gazette.

A Story of Gladstone's Boyhood.

John Morley a few days after the publication of his life of "Gladstone" told in a speech at Sheffield a story of Mr. Gladstone's boyhood. "The lad," he said, "was in the country. A farmer was showing him over his estate. The farmer would pause before each field to describe it, and before every cow, horse and pig he would make a brief biographical address.

"Finally they came to a small field that contained a large black bull.

"That is a fine bull there, Master William," said the farmer, "a very fine, strong two-year-old bull."

"'Two years old?' said the boy.

"'Yes, two years, sir.'

"'How do you tell its age?'

"'Why, by its horns.'

"The little boy frowned. He mused a moment. Then his countenance cleared.

"'Ah,' he said. 'By its horns. I see. Two horns—two years.'"

He Got the Biscuits.

It is an encouraging thought that when we really brace up and try to overcome misfortune we are very likely to gain the sympathy and often the help of those who have been hindered us.

There is a story of a wise old elephant which illustrates this point.

There is a big African elephant at the London zoological garden which was formerly much troubled by the bad aim of people who threw crackers toward the cage as they would fall in between the barrier and the cage, beyond the reach of the animal and the thrower alike. But the elephant has found that by using his trunk as a bellows it can blow the biscuit to the barrier, where it may be picked up again. Of course the clever elephant is rewarded by a better throw and gets the biscuit.—Boys' World.

A WISE MOTHER.

The Way She Treated Her Boy Who Wanted to Run Away.

As soon as a child begins to think, the first thing he would like to do is run away. I know of a youngster eight years old who announced to his mother that he intended to run away. That wise mother did not hold out any threat of bread and water or the fat of a slipper. She calmly asked the boy where he wanted to run to, and when he showed indecision she suggested a neighboring town as a good place for the first step, and wrote it in the Great Round World. Then she packed for him a small bundle of clothing and said: "Well, of course, if you don't like it here and want to run away you can. But you don't know how I shall miss you, Harry." The boy wavered for a moment, then went to the front door. There he hesitated longer, but shut his grim little mouth and started out. His mother saw the door close behind him. Her heart ached. Would he come back? Would he? She went to a window. He had reached the front gate—yards were fenced in in those days—and his hand was on the latch. He stopped. The moments were like a thousand years to the mother. He pulled the gate open, he put one foot past the line that marked the limits of his own little world, then all in an instant he dropped his bundle, rushed back into the house and fell sobbing into his mother's arms.

THE REAL HOME.

It Takes Something More Than Mere Furnishings to Make It.

Homes are not dependent upon riches, and their beauty does not consist in houses and lots—broad. The real home is a place where character is formed and joined for upward growth, where comradeship prevails, where love rays and softens, where mutual endeavor and sympathy make any work which calls them forth a godsend, where peace exalts the mind and rests the body and refreshes the spirit of man and woman of whatever condition or class.

It is for the building of such homes that women should be trained. Men prate too much about the lack of bread raising and floor sweeping accomplishments in the modern girl. Good bread and clean floors do not make honest homes. It is the character back of the cleanliness, or the flaky biscuit, or the cordial welcome, for whatever else may become the portion of his wife, a man will not find a husband's castle and his sanctuary. These bread raising and floor sweeping accomplishments are not difficult of attainment to the woman of ordinary ability. The degree of her success lies largely in her willingness.

The Underprice Store

Can it be Done

Truly good bargains benefit both parties, seller and buyer.

Great Enterprises dependent upon public support must have public service as their basic principle.

These statements may seem a trifle toplofty. You'll possibly think them advertising bombast, but they are printed with a serious purpose and by common consent this store shall become the leading place in the development of modern retailing. Public confidence is becoming fixed and some service to the intelligent people must underlie this confidence.

Intelligent comprehension of our tack of course inspires the service rendered.

Good understanding with our public is most hopeful and to make the understanding clear we must have clean advertising and in this way state a few of our notions.

First—To cheapen the cost of Merchandising.

2nd—To promote facility of trading by concentration of great stocks.

3rd—To save the time of purchasing.

4th—To benefit employees by giving them better values, thereby making this the economic trading centre of Belleville and you may feel assured that this store will be full of comfort to the small purse and economic spirit.

Interesting or Nothing

Do you think of the Underpriced Store?

What do you think of the Underpriced Store?

It is bad for us if you think ill of us.

It is worse for the Underprice Store if you don't think at all.

These axioms being true, the Underprice Store is nothing if not interesting.

New Arrival of Goods Daily.

And you should visit this storm centre for economic buying at every shopping time, or miss the best genuine bargains to be found. Bad freighting has delayed many goods but we are showing more fine things, more low priced things, more exactly up-to-date things on each succeeding day, here shall appear authoritative styles as fast as conditions shall permit, and it will be worth a ride of many miles to feast your eyes on a store full of Underprice Merchandise.

This week the store has grown doubly brilliant with new things, delightful to view, gratifying to possess, and this store is yours for pleasure and if your pleasure reaches a desire for possession of the merchandise shown, we are doubly gratified of course, however if you are not a purchaser we want you to come anyway as bargains are always in evidence and we recognize the first impression a customer on entering this store must have is sincerity of purpose on our part, also we recognize that a few crumbs of comfort may be gathered here and there, but if you want to buy a whole loaf of satisfaction buy here. TIMELY TOPICS.

The winds which blew this morning won't cut the snow down very much.

It is evident that's winter has a vigorous kick or two still left.

Don't ornament the snow shovel with baby ribbon and hang it up in the parlor just yet. Weather prophets say that the middle of March will see the worst storms of the year.

But cheer up, we're getting nearer lawn mower time every day.

March is naturally a windy month, but what will it be after to-morrow, when the Legislature and Commons are both in session?

Dr. Wilson, of St. Thomas, has been appointed to the Senate, and that gnashing of teeth you hear comes from out Thurlow way.

A wireless message from Mr. William Johnson states that so far, though at trifle seasick, he is holding his own.

Of course, if he feels a twinge on his stomach, he at once takes measures to secure relief.

There is no truth in the report that the Oil Exchange executive which is coming here to play hockey on Friday night. They are too busy to come.

No use talking, the local hockey club had better call this winter. All sorts of protests and accidents and then right in the height of the season the President sprained his foot.

A week from to-morrow is St. Patrick's day, and the chances for dust blowing in our eyes on that festive anniversary are very remote, indeed.

TOOK A STRAW VOTE.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENT IN A RESTAURANT.

An advertising agent, representing a prominent New York magazine, while on a Western trip was dining one evening in a Pittsburg restaurant.

While waiting for his order he glanced over his newspaper and noticed the advertisement of a well known dyspepsia preparation, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; as he himself was a regular user of the tablets, he began speculating as to how many of the other customers in the dining room were also friends of the popular remedy for indigestion.

He says: I counted twenty-three men at the tables and in the hotel office. I took the trouble to interview them and was surprised to learn that nine of the twenty-three made a practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

One of them told me he had suffered so much from stomach trouble that he could not bear to be confined to quit the road, but since using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets had been entirely free from indigestion, and even dyspepsia itself was specially while travelling, on account of irregularity in meals and sleeping, like all the rest of us, he was often obliged to eat what he could get and not always what he wanted.

Another, who looked the picture of health, said he never ate a meal without taking a Stuart Tablet afterwards because he would not like to be pleased without fear of a sleepless night or any other trouble.

Still another used them because he was subject to gas on stomach, causing pressure on heart or lungs, shortness of breath and distress in chest, which he no longer experienced since using the tablets regularly.

Another claimed that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was the only safe remedy he had ever found for sour stomach and agidity. He had formerly used ammonia and soda to relieve the trouble, but the tablets were much handier and safer to use.

After smoking, drinking or other excesses which weaken the digestive organs, nothing restores the stomach to a healthy, wholesome condition so effectually as Stuart's Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the natural digestives, pepsin, diastase, which every weak stomach lacks, as well as nux, hydrastin and yellow perilla, and can be safely used even as a radical cure for every form of poor digestion. Sold by all druggists everywhere.

Orders for bookbinding should be left at this office. It is surprising how nice a volume can be made of those magazines, even though they are somewhat soiled from much handling. THE STOUT WOMAN.

Two Things She Should Not Do if She Dislikes Corpulency.

Every one is afraid of growing fat nowadays. No system of weight reducing seems too troublesome for the ever-plump, no corset arrangement too elaborate or expensive. It seems to me, however, that the "don'ts" are in danger of being neglected for the "dos," and really the "don'ts" are of rather more importance.

Don't lie in bed late of a morning is an indispensable one. I know a girl who almost starves herself for slimness and stays in bed till nearly lunch time, feeling dull and bored and anxious to pass the time away rapidly because she does not take any breakfast. She wonders that her abstinence is not more effective, but I only wonder that she is not putting on weight still faster than she does. "Early to rise" and not too early to bed should be the fat woman's motto.

Another "don't" of considerable importance is "Don't sit too much." Constant sitting encourages a peculiarly ungraceful form of stoutness and destroys the carriage as well. Any indoor work that can be done in a standing position should be done so, and walking should be substituted for driving whenever possible. Stout people often suffer from leather and tired feet. It may be useful to note if constant walking and standing develop this trouble that the sightly use of very hot water followed by dryness and rubbing with alcohol, which will take away all tiredness and swelling most effectively.

THE AMERICAN WOMAN.

She Is Keen In Business, and She Can Keep a Secret.

"The man who contends that a woman cannot keep a secret displays ignorance of Wall street history," says James B. Dill, the great corporation lawyer. "Many of the greatest financial and commercial secrets of the day are intrusted to women who act as private secretaries for well known men, and the confidence is not misplaced. One man of reputation allows a woman to answer much of his mail without even showing him the letters. He reads the replies at the office of the military you have first to speak your little piece to this woman secretary, and if you get past her it is because you have told your story in a straightforward way, without beating around the bush. She is an expert in reading character, and the man who thinks he fools her soon appreciates his mistake. The American woman is none the less a lady because she adorns a profession or becomes interested in commercial affairs. I honor her all the more for the splendid example she sets her sister in other lands and for the grace, dignity, purity and faithfulness she contributes to the daily routine."

HAYS WON THEM OVER

Grand Trunk Shareholders Support G.T.P.R. Contract.

They Were at First Hostile, But After the General Manager's Blunt Speech Accepted the Situation—What Would the Company Stand If They Did Not Accept the Proposed Changes? He Asked.

London, March 9.—Charles M. Hays won over a hostile meeting of G.T.R. shareholders yesterday to the acceptance of the G.T.P. contract with the Canadian Government. Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson addressed the meeting, praising Sir Wilfrid Laurier's patriotic treatment of the project.

Several shareholders on the conclusion of the President's remarks, spoke, protesting that the shareholders were being rushed into an agreement of which they had very little information. Mr. Hays was called upon to answer the protesting shareholders, and he laid particular stress on the point that the question was not where the company stood to-day, but where they would stand if they did not agree to the proposed changes.

The meeting was packed, and at one stage of the proceedings the tone was unmistakably hostile to embarking in so huge an enterprise. General Manager Hays, who had come from Canada specially to attend this meeting, saved the situation, and when the final vote was taken there were only a few opponents to the Grand Trunk Railroad undertaking to build a transcontinental road.

Sir Charles Explained Plan.

Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, president of the company, explained the plan to extend the Grand Trunk to the Pacific. He declared it to be the most important question ever put before the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Railroad. The new line, he added, was justified by the flow of prosperity from east to west, and the increasing immigration into Canada from the United States. The Grand Trunk could not hope to receive such generous treatment from the Canadian Government as the Canadian Pacific Railway, but the Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, had acted fairly, in spite of violent political opposition, with the object of attaining additional facilities for the development of Canada.

An Unreasonable Demand.

The President characterized the deposit demanded by the Canadian Government in connection with the agreement as an "extremely unnecessary and unreasonable demand."

Then, one after another, shareholders, representing blocks of 50,000 and more shares, rose and declared they had not had sufficient time to consider so huge an enterprise.

An amendment was proposed by George Allen, who had resigned his seat in the directorate on account of the proposition, in which Mr. Allen declared the intended action would ruin the Grand Trunk Railroad.

Rivals Investigate Survey.

Several large shareholders withdrew their proxies and placed them in the hands of the directors.

The President, in reply to cries of "collapse," explained that the Canadian Parliament, at its meeting, March 10, must have an answer one way or the other.

Vice-President Smithers openly attributed some of the criticism to the instigation of rival railroads.

Mr. Hays' Blunt Talk.

Then General Manager Hays bluntly told the shareholders that if they did not accept the Canadian offer other influences would, and that without a transcontinental extension the future of the Grand Trunk would be gloomy in the extreme. Mr. Hays prophesied a great future for the new road, which would be able to build its own connection with the existing systems in Canada and the United States.

Ratified the Agreements.

After over two and a half hours' discussion Mr. Allen's amendment was defeated and the agreements ratified.

Previous to President Wilson's explanation of the Grand Trunk's plan the semi-annual accounts were passed, but not without criticism of the increased expenditure, which the President said was justified on account of the larger traffic, severe weather and higher prices.

WILL SEE THE CABINET.

National Live Stock Association to Present all Resolutions.

Ottawa, March 9.—Last evening's session of the National Live Stock Association was well attended and many important subjects were discussed, which eventually were crystallized into resolutions.

The matter of imported stock was dealt with in two resolutions.

The first was: That animals for breeding purposes may be admitted free from duty when pure bred and registered in the authorized books of record in the Dominion, or of the country in which they originated and when owned by a bona fide resident of the Dominion.

The second: That the Minister of Agriculture be urged to take steps to safeguard against the introduction of Texas fever, Texas tick and other contagious diseases through the importation of American cattle for stocker cattle.

Representative deputations will wait upon members of the Cabinet to-day to lay the proceedings of the association before the Government.

And He May Die.

Ottawa, March 9.—A little son of Rev. G. P. Salton, pastor of Dominion Methodist Church, was caught under a snow slide of the parsonage roof last evening, and lies in a precarious condition. He is unconscious and the outcome is doubtful.

Reserve Force

In these days of hurry and worry and bustle most people, men and women, are living up to the "limit." That is to say, they use up day by day all the force and energy nature provides, and consequently have NOTHING IN RESERVE to meet the extra demands of illness, bereavement or other nervous shocks. Of course, this is all wrong and we must either live differently or assist nature to furnish the RESERVE FORCE we should always possess.

It is easy to say live differently, but most people find that the demands of their business or social position render it practically impossible; then we must accept the other alternative and give nature a helping hand. In no other way can this be done so effectively as by taking a course of FERROL, the ideal concentrated medicinal (The Iron-Oil Food), food, which combines in a beautiful and palatable emulsion Cod Liver Oil, Iron and Phosphorus, the very essentials for producing force of the right kind, because they build up, strengthen and develop tissue, nerve and brain and make the blood rich, warm, pure and healthy.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES ROWELL, of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their Office, No. 403, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction. A few drops makes a hearty cance.

Somersons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use prescriptions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and great frailty, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Mother Gillsoug's Dysentery Cordial as being the best remedies in the market for all summer Complaints. A few drops only taken in water when the symptoms manifest themselves will be experienced.

On knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and hoarseness and all throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Norway's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately loosens the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the tenacious mucus from the throat and tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby giving relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Many prominent singers and shouts will find Hickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup a most invaluable tonic, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and humidness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and harmonious. Parents wish to save the lives of their children, should guard against them against croup, coughs, colds, and all throat troubles by keeping on hand a bottle of "Hickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child is taken sick, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Don't be sick. A good business, it is always better to stay where you are. Don't be persuaded to go elsewhere, and prevent its return. Carter's Little Liver Pills. This is not idle, but truth. One pill a dose. See advertisement. Small pill. Small dose. Small price.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

To Those of Sedentary Occupations. Are you of sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, thus causing many disorders of the liver and kidneys than those in the active, out-door lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without a parallel, the most effective on the market. They are easily procured, easily taken, not expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

The biggest brave does not always make the best man.

Seven hundred British subjects 'are now in the Yukon.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for Biliousness. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this to fact. Try them.

Much talk, many lies.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with Nervine, make them the most perfect nerve, are found in Carter's Iron Pills. They will restore the nerves to health, and also improve the blood and complexion.

Every wrong watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

A SENSIBLE TALK — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER HAS TO SAY AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About two years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery. Tried the best available remedies, but I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was induced by some of the best physicians in this city to try Burdock Blood Bitters. Continued to grow worse, one day I was recommended to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my surprise and delight from that day began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I can confidently state there is complete and permanent cure of all those who take this discovery. I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

T. S. MOINTER.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I ventrye to tell you that I have received great benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and have, I believe, used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all and sundry who have asked me, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe rheumatism and lumbago complaints.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

Holloway's Corn Cure is the medicine to remove all kinds of corns and warts, and only costs the small sum of twenty-five cents.

It is better after all doing little because you can't do much.

A "DEMON" DISEASE

Doctors prescriptions and strongest ointments fail to effect cure in Eczema, Pimples' Rheumatism.

Only hope is Dr. Sanderson's American Rheumatic Cure cured what he is pleased to call "Old Demon" from the Lowest Depths."

Henry Humphrey, of London, Ont., supposed himself very much afflicted with Rheumatism, a demon from the lower regions, judging by my sufferings before I began using Dodd's Kidney Rheumatic Cure. Doctors prescribed the strongest liniments and external effect but none of the great remedy had me up and about my work for weeks at a time, and then only a part of the time.

AUTHOR OF

"THE LEAVENWORTH CASE."

CHAPTER I.

For a detective whose talents had not been recognized at headquarters, I possessed a fair reputation. Unfortunately for my standing with the lieutenant of the precinct, had not yet been expressed in words, though I had small reason for expecting great things of myself. I had always cherished the hope that if a big case came my way I should be found able to do something with it—something more, that is, than I had seen accomplished by the police of the district of Columbia, since I had the honor of being one of their number. Therefore, when I found myself plunged, almost without my own volition, into the Jeffrey-Moore affair, I believed that the opportunity had come whereby I might distinguish myself.

As I had complications, this Jeffrey Moore affair; greater ones than the public ever knew. I was on the interest in it ran both in and out of Washington.

This is why I propose to tell the story of this great tragedy from my own standpoint, even if in so doing I risk the charge of attempting to exploit my own connection with this celebrated case. In its course I encountered many disappointments as well as triumphs, and brought out of the affair a heart as sore as it was enriched; for I am a lover of women and—

But I am keeping you from the story itself.

I was at the station-house the night Uncle David came in. He was always called Uncle David, and was the person who followed him in the street; so I am showing him no disrespect, perhaps, when I say that in giving him a title which as completely characterized him in those days as did his moody ways, his quaint air and the great umbrella with which he kept at his side his great mastiff, Hugbe.

I had long since heard of the old gentleman as one of the most interesting products of the precinct. I had even seen him more than once on the street, but I had never before been brought face to face with him, and consequently had much too superficial a knowledge of his unassuming tenance to determine offhand whether the uneasy light in his small gray eyes was natural to them, or simply the result of present excitement. But when he began to talk I detected an unmistakable tremor in his tones, and decided that he was in a state of suppressed agitation: though he appeared to have nothing more alarming to impart than the fact that he had seen a light burning in some house presumably empty.

It was all so trivial that I gave him but scant attention till he let some fall which caused me to prick up my ears and even to put in a word. "The Moore house," he had said.

"The Moore house!" I repeated in astonishment. "Are you speaking of the Moore house?"

A thousand recollections came with the name.

"What other?" he grumbled, directing toward me a look as keen as it was impatient. "Do you think that I am talking about a long shoot a house I had no interest in, or drag the police force over to it for the some ungrateful neighbor from a possible burglary? No, it is my house which some rogue has chosen to enter. That is," he suavely corrected, as the door in every eye, "the house which the law will give me the power to call mine, if that chit of a girl whom my brother left there dies."

Growling some words at the dog, who showed a decided inclination to lie down where he was, the old man made for the door and in another moment would have been in the street, if I had not stepped after him.

"Is the house here and live in or near that old house?" I asked.

The smile with which he met this question daunted me a little.

"How long have you been in Washington, I should like to ask?" was his acrid retort.

"Oh, some five months."

His good nature, or what passed for such in this irritable old man, returned in an instant; and he actually but not unkindly remarked:

"You haven't learned much in that time." Then, with a nod more censorious than many another man's bow, he added, with sudden dignity: "I am of the elder branch and live in the only family that bears that old place. I am the only resident on the hill. Should you have lived here longer you will know why that especial neighborhood is not a favorite one with those who can not boast of the best blood. Good afternoon, sir, let us attribute the bad name that it holds to—malaria." And with a significant flick of his bow shoulders which set in undulating motion every fold of the old-fashioned cloak he wore, he started again for the door.

But my curiosity was by this time fully on foot. I knew more about the house than he gave me credit for. I knew who had rented the papers of late, must less a man connected with the police, could help being well informed in all the details of its remarkable history. What I had failed to know was his close relationship to the family whose name for the last two weeks had been in every mouth.

"Wait!" I called out. "You say that you live opposite the Moore house. You can then tell me—"

But he had no mind to stop for any gossip.

"It was all in the papers," he called back. "Read them. But you'll be sure to find out who has struck it rich in the house that you know has not even a caretaker in it."

It was good advice. My duty and my curiosity both led me to follow it.

Perhaps you have heard of the distinguishing characteristics of this house? If so, you do not need my explanations. But if, for any reason, you are ignorant of the facts which while in a very short time have set a final seal of horror upon this old, fashionable dwelling, then you will be glad to read what has made and will continue to make the Moore house in Washington one to be pointed at in daylight and shunned after dark, not only by superstitious colored folk, but by all who are susceptible to the most ordinary emotions of fear and dread.

It was standing when Washington was a village. It overlooks the Capitol and the White House. Built by a man of wealth, it bears to this day the impress of the large scale and quiet elegance of colonial times; but the shadow which speedily fell across it made it a marked place even in these days, when it is always escaped the hackneyed epithet of "haunted," families that have passed in its area as quickly as fled out, giving as their excuse that such a house was no place for children; and that sleep was impossible under the roof of a building in which no person for this lack of rest within walls which were not without their tragic associations. Even the proximity of Death had often occurred there, and that in forms so full of the fear dreaded by most old houses, it is not to be wondered at that in this case, that it was invariably sudden and invariably of violence, that a person lying outstretched on a certain hearthstone, might be found there by a servant on awaking in the real comment; but when this same person was found in the street or not thrice, during the history of a single family, it was enough to set the presence of an evil which if left to itself might prove the speedy decay of the place, but which, if sent and some high-handed way again and make another blot on its thrice-crimsoned heathstone.

But this is all old fables which I should hardly presume to mention, did it not have been the occurrence which has recalled them to all who were known and dwelling in empty and slowly crumbling buildings, important enough to have prevents its fame from one end of the country to the other. I refer to the tragedy attending the wedding festivities celebrated there.

A young Sheep, rich, pretty and willful, had long cherished a strange belief for this handsome old house and her ancestors, and, at the most critical time of her life, conceived the idea of returning to herself and to society at large that no real ban lay upon it, but that it was merely one of the superstitions. So, being about to marry a man of the world, a lawyer, she caused this house to be selected as the scene of the ceremony with what result you know. Though the occasion was a joyous one and conducted with all the pomp and circumstance of such a function, it had not proceeded far before the faces of the guests straying into the room of the bride's mother, which opened from the room which had not been thrown open to the crowd, had been struck by the appearance of the ceremony lying on its dolorous heartbreak, and though the bride was spared a knowledge of the reason why her friends and guests were said, a panic had seized the guests and carried the house with a rush, and completely as though the plague had been discovered there.

The girl was then carried to Colonel Davis' when he told me that he had never had in his house of tragic memories.

CHAPTER II.

Though past seventy, Uncle David was a brisk walker, and on this night in particular he sped along so fast that I was half-way down L street by the time I had turned the corner at New Hampshire Avenue.

His gaunt but not ungraceful figure, merged in that of the dog trotting at his heels, was the only one in sight, and whether it was the early moonlight or the fact of the dog trotting so close at his heels, was the only moving object in the dreary vista of this the most deserted part of Washington. As I neared the building I caught a glimpse of the two rounding stillness that I was ready to be interested in anything rather than the dog rutting clean through the exquisite harmony of the moonlight, wondered if the shadows cast by the frowning structure of the great house on the corner of New Hampshire Uncle David's lack of neighbors.

Meantime, Hibbard, who was the first to hear my signal, came running down the hall to meet me. Before me, the light, or what we chose to call a light, appeared again in the window over the door, and the house had been directed.

"Some one's in the Moore house!" I declared, in as matter-of-fact tones as I could enunciate.

Hibbard is a big fellow, the biggest fellow on the force, and so far as my own experience with him had gone, as stolid and imperturbable as the best of us. But after a quick glance at the towering walls of the lonely building, he showed decided embarrassment and seemed in no haste to cross the street.

With difficulty I concealed my disgust.

"Come," I cried, stepping down from the curb, "let's go over and investigate. The property is valuable, the furnishings handsome, and there is no end of costly books on the library shelves. You have matches and a revolver?"

He nodded, quietly showing me first the one, then the other; then with a sudden air which he endeavored to carried off with a laugh, he cried:

"Have you use for 'em? Now I'm quite willing to part with 'em for a half-hour."

I was more than amazed at this evidence of weakness in one I had always considered as tough as impenetrable as flint rock. Thrusting back the hand with which he had half drawn into view the weapon I had mentioned, I put on my sternest air and led the way across the street. As I did so, I tossed back my words.

"We may come upon a gang. You do not wish me to face them with a dozen men alone?"

"You won't," was my half-doten men there," was his muttered reply. Nevertheless he followed me, though with less spirit than I had considering that my own manner was in a measure assumed and that I was not without sympathy—well, let me say, for he was evidently bowling a dismal accompaniment to his master's music, to keeping open watch over a neighborhood dominated by the unhallowed structure I now proceeded to enter.

The house is too well known for me to attempt a minute description of it. The illustrations which have appeared in all the papers have already accustomed the general public with its simple facade and rows upon rows of windows, surmounted by the great square porch with its four huge negro attendants and the photographs for the million. Those who have seen the picture in which Uncle David appears in short flying from its yawning doorway, will not be especially interested in the almost solemn aspect it presented as I passed up the low steps and laid my hand upon the knob of the old-fashioned front door.

It had required a good to win an entrance thereby, but because it is my nature to approach everything in a common-sense way. Conceive then my astonishment when at first touch the door yielded. It was not even latched.

"Shut so!" thought I. "This is no fool's job; some one is in the house."

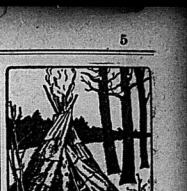
It was true; and was proved by the alarmy pocket-lantern, and, when I had convinced Hibbard that I fully intended to enter the house and discover for myself who had taken advantage of the Sheep's prolonged pregnant it to make a secret refuge or rendezvous of it, he decayed old fellow took out this lantern and held it in readiness.

"You may strike a hornets' nest," I explained to Hibbard, whose feet were planted on the lowest step of his size. "But I'm going in and so are you. Only, let me precede you the first take off our shoes. We can hide them in these bushes."

"I always catch cold when I walk barefooted," mumbled my brave companion, but proving no worse than he drew off his shoes and dropped them into the bushes that lay on either side of the walk. Then he took out his lantern and held it in readiness.

"Now may strike a hornets' nest," I explained to Hibbard, whose feet were planted on the lowest step of his size. "But I'm going in and so are you. Only, let me precede you the first take off our shoes. We can hide them in these bushes."

"I always catch cold when I walk barefooted," mumbled my brave companion, but proving no worse than he drew off his shoes and dropped them into the bushes that lay on either side of the walk. Then he took out his lantern and held it in readiness.



The first Americans had a hard time keeping warm. Their trials are nothing compared to the cold we have heard of to-day. For it is unnecessary to put up with the uneven heating of stoves, the dust and impure air of the hot air furnace, and the many other inconveniences of imperfect heating systems when you can get the and Oxford Radiators which form the perfect system of house heating.

The accompanying illustration shows where the water is introduced by the fire-pot at the rear and is thrown by a diaphragm from the front towards the front of the fire chamber and then passes over the surface of the horizontal tubes. Thus the coldest water of this system is kept on outside of the fire, preventing the radiation of heat into the cellar.

WOMAN AT HER BEST.

Keep Your Heart Young and Thus Defy Father Time.

Don't belong to the "old folks" and nod through the evening hours because your boy is at college. Don't attempt rouge and preservation of beauty with paints, powders and veils. Take plenty of exercise, stand erect, sit erect. When you speak, let your voice possess volume and energy; when you think, think vitally.

Don't say you haven't time for the afternoon's "forty winks." Take it, for the renewed strength will show in a freshened complexion. A half hour before your luncheon will do much to eradicate wrinkles than all the beauties in the world.

Don't think that a life of ease and luxury is essential to preserving youthful, delicate looks. A certain amount of work and exercise is necessary to keep the muscles firm and elastic and the flesh healthy.

Don't let go of love and love of romance. They are amulets against premature age. Much of the world's bondage is poured at the feet of girlhood.

Don't fancy that the dew of youth, with the completion of roses, is alone able to inspire passion. A woman's best years are those from thirty to forty. The old saw about "sweet sixteen" is exploded.

Don't be afraid of if you want to be young. Dance and sing and, above all, laugh. Ride, drive, row, swim and walk a mile—or make it three—daily. Keep your heart young and thus defy Father Time.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

GROWNUP DAUGHTERS.

Mothers Should Realize They Are Women and Treat Them as Such.

The most common source of friction between mothers and daughters," says a writer in the New Orleans Picayune, "and one that is largely responsible for driving girls into matrimony inconsiderately and making home years for careers, is the inability of mothers to realize that their daughters are grown and have the rights of grown people. There is apparently no other thing so impossible as for parents to see that their sons and daughters are being treated like babies. This is particularly true as regards matches. Sometimes a father rises to the height of granting his son liberty to do as he pleases, but as long as a daughter remains under her mother considers she has a perfect right to dictate to her about her clothes, who she shall and shall not talk and believe and how she shall breathe. I have known a number of forty-five who have never been permitted, even to pick out a pocket handkerchief for themselves, and I have heard a lady ejaculate the day after she was married, 'Thank God, I'll never have to wear another pink dress!' a uniform she had worn consistently ever since she was 16 years old because her mother happened to admire pink."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

To clean zinc wash thoroughly with soap and dipped in turpentine.

A damp pantry and warm cupboard are both bad places in which to keep bread.

Dry orange peel slowly in an oven and use instead of chips. It makes an excellent fuel.

Oilcloth which is too badly worn to be used on the tables will cover the pantry shelves nicely and is easily cleaned.

Never put down a carpet on a damp floor, for this, often the result of hurry and impatience on the part of weary house cleaners, is a frequent cause of carpets becoming moth eaten.

A sewing machine needle may be more easily threaded by a person with failing sight if she places behind it a piece of white paper. The white background makes the eye of the needle much easier to see.

Bad Ventilation.

Bad ventilation deforms more children and destroys more health than any accident or plague. There is reason to believe that not a few of the scrofulous diseases common among children proceed from the ignorant habit of being put to sleep in beds and perambulators with the head under the bedclothing and so inhaling air already breathed, loaded with contaminating bad exhalations from the skin. "Madam," said a doctor to a woman, "you are poisoning the blood of your children's lungs. How would you like to drink the water you wash in? Well, when you have the baby's head up you force him to use air that is just as bad and just as impure."

Neatness In Girls.

Neatness is a good thing for a girl, and if she does not learn it when she is young she never will. It takes a great deal of neatness to make a girl look attractive. A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a sloven, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty and her eyes bright, but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek and her finger ends are black with ink and her shoestrings are dangling and her hair is out of order her collar is not buttoned and her skirts torn she will not be liked. Learn to be neat, and when you have learned the lesson it will almost take care of itself.

A Helpful Hint.

We were always troubled with the stain on our tea and coffee pots, tea kettles, etc., coming off and very often burning our hands over the hot steam in taking the lid off until an uncle happened to see our difficulty and remedied the evil. The articles necessary are a screw and a cork. Put the screw part through the under side of the lid through the hole left by the former knob and next took the cork and fastened on to the screw.—Exchange.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Condensed milk can be used in cake making, but less sugar will be required.

Young white onions are very nice cooked in boiling water, sliced and served on buttered toast like asparagus.

To remove fat from soup pour through a clean cloth that has been soaked in cold water. The fat will remain in the cloth.

Cold boiled bacon soak it in water for three or four minutes. This will prevent the fat from running and will make the bacon go farther.

Stale bread, if broken into rough pieces, dipped in sweetened milk and baked on a buttered tin till dry and crisp, is delicious to eat with butter or cream.

Pastry may be rolled either toward or away from the manipulator, but should not be rolled back and forth. The easiest way is to direct that stroke as the pocket in the paste that is nearest and roll lightly to the end.

A Soup With Meat Value.

Lentil soup has meat value. Wash the lentils, cover them with cold water and boil over night in the morning drain. Add a quart of stock, a pint of water, a bay leaf, a sprig of thyme, a tablespoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of salt and simmer for about two hours until the lentils are tender. Press through a colander, then strength a slave and return the puree to the kettle. Rub a heaping tablespoonful and one of flour together, add them to the soup and stir until boiling. Add a small onion sliced, boil to a rolling point and turn at once into the soup tureen. Sprinkle over the soup a tablespoonful of finely minced parsley and serve with croutons. To give variety moisten a tablespoonful of curry powder gradually in half a cupful of milk and add it to the soup instead of the butter.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Tight Lacing.

Some years since a series of experiments for the purpose of showing the effects of lacing were made with mouse monkeys by an enterprising scientist. Those which were corseted and lived at ease in the comfortable cages of fashionable women died in the space of a few days, as though stricken by some mortal malady, and others lingered and succumbed after a few months from some disorder of which the cause was the undoubted one.—Dr. Arabella Keenly in Woodstock Country Review.

Cornstarch Pudding.

Cooking school teachers say that cornstarch pudding is seldom properly cooked, being generally underdone. To seldom gets enough cooking, they say, to take away its raw flavor. A cornstarch pudding should be set somewhere of an hour, the whites of the eggs not being added until after it is cooked, is said to be not only palatable, but nutritious also.

The Trained Nurse.

The age has become ready for the profession of nursing is causing more or less discussion. It is estimated that there are now about 30,000 in the professional career at twenty-seven. If she is to be considered trained she must have had some experience for herself in this fourteen years. It is a well known fact that many nurses of this "age limit" still possess all the physical qualifications that were theirs when they first finished their studies, with the added value of ripe experience. On the other hand the "age limit" is a factor to the effect it behooves the aspirant to honors in this profession to ponder well the financial pros and cons before entering it.

For Stock Collars.

A dainty device for keeping the twentieth century girl's white shirt waist starched collars immaculate when not encircling her fair throat is made of a round bandage of white silk of delicate hue, with an interlining of wadding, sprinkled with sachet powder. A circular piece of pasteboard covered and wadded serves for a lid and also for a pincushion, and a pin for the fancy pins worn at the front and back of stock collars.

Cooking Utensils.

You can brighten tins and other cooking utensils by putting them in a pail with water and place on the fire with plenty of water and a liberal amount of washing soda. Let them boil for twenty minutes, remove the wash boiler from the fire and let the tins take the tins out for three hours. At the end of that time they will be, when washed, bright and new looking.

CALLING AND DRESSING.

Look as Charming as Possible When Paying Visits.

We may all condemn, from time to time, the vain woman who devotes a large portion of her time to adjusting her wardrobe and posing before the looking glass, but is there anything more really provoking than the woman who never thinks it worth while to "dress up"?

We invite her to spend the evening with us, and we assume some extra finishing touches, and behold she comes in wearing her ordinary attire. We must excuse it, she says. She really has been so busy all day and is coming home from business. Or else she placidly apologizes, assuring us that she would have dressed for the formal call, and she hopes we will not mind it. She runs away early, for she has been so busy and is so tired.

It is even more exasperating when she says nothing, leaving us to infer that she did not think it worth while to don pretty things for us to look at.

A damp at once descends on the occasion. We wonder at our own absurdity in sprucing ourselves up and almost always feel grudging against the visitor for her tactlessness.

The popular girl is the one who compliments her hostess by trying to look as fresh and charming as possible. She would of course avoid the other extreme of overdressing, but should certainly discard everyday attire and put on something in the nature of festivity.—Philadelphia Ledger.

DAINTY LAMP SHADE.

It Costs but Little to Make and Produces a Charming Effect.

When the lamp is lighted at night, the effect produced is very conspicuous object, and for that reason it should be a pretty affair that will reflect credit upon the taste of the household. Lamp shades need not be expensive to be artistic. They may be beautiful and cost but a trifle, comparatively speaking. The one shown in the illustration does not call for much material, which in other ways have outlived their usefulness, and is quite in the bureau drawers. To make this shade buy a simple paper design ready made and cover with soft green muslin or silk let or violet silk, finishing with puffs. If extra elaboration is wanted, trace around the narrow band as shown in the picture. But the ribbon design is not necessary as a charming effect, which is easy to attain.

SILK LAMP SHADE.

To Make Chocolate.

The daughter of a certain New York family, who is fond of making candy, and the family, and the drink as she serves it is especially delicious. Her secret, which she willingly gives away, lies, she says, solely in the fact that the drink's made hours before it is served. Plain unsweetened cocoa is used, a half pound cake for ten cups. The chocolate is broken into pieces, put in an earthenware vessel and slowly dissolved in warm water whose heat is gradually increased till the boiling point is reached, and it is allowed to boil for fifteen minutes. The porcelain or earthenware vessel in which it is cooked is then closely covered and left to stand over night or even for the part of the range for several hours. Just before it is to be served boiling milk is added, and the mixture thoroughly to a quick boil. By this process the chocolate is thoroughly blended, and the unpleasant oily taste which all raw taste is taken is produced.—Harper's Bazar.

Bed Hangings.

Bed hangings are again in fashion. The daintiest and lightest of colorings are used. Pink and blue chiffon shadow nets, tambour muslins, soft India silk, to brocades in all their exquisite pastel shades, are among the most delectable and quaint colorings both of design and dye of the more conventional patterns that will ever be required need of popularity. The textures for the hangings are beautiful. Rumbour nets are delightful, with draperies of the same. The French white work is exceedingly attractive, with curtains of the most chiffon material. Japanese fabrics are always popular and can be had in pure white, with a knotted fringe, or in tan or tea colored silk edged with lace of the same shade. Mahogany and dull yellow shams of lace over colored linings tone with the hangings. Spreads of old linen and worn lace, which still an antique lace are being used again by those who are fortunate to possess them.—London Express.

The Children's Lunch Box.

What is the morning at school to a small child without a lunch box? What fun it is to open it and here the recess hour partly taken up in the consuming of a dainty sandwich and a bright red apple and enjoying every minute of what to them is a hard earned rest. Now, the lunch box or basket should first of all be neat in appearance, so the child may not be ashamed to bring it out before his friends. A basket is really the best from a sanitary standpoint, for it not only looks neat, but may be kept neat and clean inside and out by frequent washings, which is not the case with boxes. The basket should be washed about once a week and dried thoroughly in the sunlight if possible, and then it will always be sweet and clean.

FOXBORO.

Rev. Mr. Peck, Presbyterian minister of this place, is again at work in our midst. We are glad to be able to say that Mrs. Peck of Oakley in Napanee, who have been very ill, are now very much improved.

Mrs. Richard Wickett, who has been spending the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Jos. Ashley, Michigan, is seriously ill with pneumonia. Mr. Ben Reid is still on the sick list.

We are sorry to learn that Miss Shaw, of Albert College, who is a daughter of Mr. John Shaw, of this village, is at present very low with appendicitis.

The ratepayers of this school section have at last decided that the time has come for a new school house in the village. They purpose building in vacation this summer. It will be, when completed, the most modern and one of the best in this locality.

Mr. Hiram Ashley was appointed to attend the meeting of the Presbytery at Kingston last week.

Miss Flo Thompson, who has been spending a few weeks in Peterboro and Toronto, returned home last week.

Mrs. David Moore spent a few days last week with her daughter, Mrs. Mott, Ivanhoe.

Mr. Neil Vanallen is getting the material on the ground for his new residence which he intends building this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard are now living in their new home in our village.

Miss Martha Reid, of Belleville, is employed for a few days with her sister, Mrs. Lewis Bradshaw, who has been quite sick.

Mayor Chown, of Belleville, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist Church on Sunday morning last. He gave a very instructive address in the interest of the British and Foreign Bible Society. Rev. Mr. Thompson preached to a large congregation in the evening from Daniel 2:44.

READ IT THROUGH.

'Twould Spoil This Story to Tell It in the Headlines.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1901, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon, of Metis Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I had a subscription list around the house and in less than an hour had secured enough to buy the medicine, and I then started in and gave it to every child in the neighborhood that had a cough and in every case it proved a cure." For sale by all druggists.

Saving Milk.

A tiny pinch of carbonate of soda or salt put into the milk as soon as it comes from the cow will prevent it from turning sour, and if it seems inclined to turn and is slowly heated to nearly the boiling point it will keep in a condition of soda then stirred in the sour cream will disappear. Some people also add a tiny pinch of sugar.

AN EFFICIENT TREATMENT FOR CATARRH.

In Successful Decorating

Successful decoration must be the outcome of study—of thought rather than of mere chance.

In the chance room there will surely be something wrong.

Possibly the color. Perchance Drawing — Likely both.

Whether Chamber, Drawing Room, Living Room, Library or Den, the room must be treated with thought of surroundings, of furniture of complexion, of lighting, of size.

The environment of a room with North or East exposure must not be like, while either West or Southern exposure may use blue to advantage

How about Crimsons, Greens and Browns—where may these colors be used—just ask your decorator, if he is worthy the name he can tell you.

We solicit your test of our ability on this or other decorative subjects.

RUSSIA HAS NO FRIENDS.

REASONS FOR HER UNPOPULARITY LUCIDLY EXPLAINED.

(American Asiatic Association Journal.)

A diplomacy of unblushing falsehood and a policy of brute force are the weapons which Russia has steadily employed in her advance from the Baltic to the shores of the Pacific. A frontier that no treaties could confine and a lust for territory that no concessions could satisfy have been the unfailing accompaniments of the secular advance of the empire of the Czar. It is a perception of the fact that Japan is fighting the battle of civilization that, apart from all considerations of trade and commerce, has created a sentiment among the American people which will hardly fail to determine the attitude of their Government during the struggle and at the conclusion of the present conflict.

The Czar may not have known the fact, but his representatives at Washington ought to have known and communicated the fact of the overwhelming force of American sympathy that the claims of Russia in the pending conflict. The American public is an observer of foreign events as keen as the European public, if not, even more so. The American may not be able to draw the finely spun conclusions that Europeans may be able to draw from the course of events nearer his home, but generally affecting him, but it is the far greater probability that the soundness of his judgment is all the more assured because he lets theories go by the board and acquaints himself with facts.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

A PRETTY PLAY.

"Lovers' Lane" has duplicated the success of "Way Down East," which has made several fortunes. It is a fresh, wholesome portrayal of small town life in New England, full of local color and realism. It introduces quaint and humorous characters, and unfolds a love story that is neither mawkish nor meretricious. "Lovers' Lane" is the kind of play that people go to see and speak of to their friends, and which can be seen more than once with pleasure and profit. There are no new ways of popularity. The play is the thing, not the players, although the management have supplied a splendid cast and beautiful scenic illusions. The orchard scenes, for example, are among the most beautiful as well as costly, that have been seen in any modern production. At the Carman opera house, next Saturday night, March 12.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Alleged Confirmation of Defeat of Russians Near Vladivostock—Russia's Serious Affront to United States Officers—Decisive Naval Battle Believed to Have Taken Place in the Vicinity of Vladivostock.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, March 9.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Telegraph states: "News has reached here of an engagement between the Russians and Japanese at a point 100 miles from Vladivostock. The Russians fled, abandoning their arms and stores."

Berlin, March 9.—The Lokal Anzeiger loosely asserts that Russia has refused permission to the United States to send military attaches with the Russian forces in the field, while permission to continental powers is freely given. This, says the paper, is considered a grave affront, implying, as it does, that United States officers are not fit to be trusted with Russian military secrets.

Tokio, March 8.—It is believed here that there already has been a decisive naval engagement in the vicinity of Vladivostock, and tidings of it are anxiously awaited.

The Japanese fleet, did not, it is said, go to Vladivostock for the purpose of bombarding the town, but to locate and attack the armored cruisers Bromhiel, Rusiak, Purik and the cruiser Boyarin, the Russian fleet stationed there.

It is understood here that when the Japanese fleet arrived there on Sunday last it found the Russian squadron absent.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Stratford beat Midland last night, and the Toronto papers calmly award the O.H.A. intermediate championship to the former team. Of course there is a possibility that the courts may order the O.H.A. to reinstate Belleville and allow them to play Stratford for the championship, but that is about as fair treatment as the Toronto magnate has been handing out to us all season. Well, let the black and white crowd have the title, for it carries with it precious little glory this year. The O.H.A. may put Stratford on the back and call their team champions, but the address of the real champions is Belleville, and every fair-minded sporting man in Ontario will tell you so.

Kingston Beechgroves beat Listowel 9 to 5 last night, and captured the junior O.H.A. championship. The ice was very soft, and critics say that, had it been hard, the western lads would have won. However, you always hear somebody making excuses, no matter who wins. Congratulations to the Kingston Kids, who haven't lost a game this year.

The Brandons and Ottawas will clash to-night in the first game for the Stanley Cup, and experts say the westerners shape up better than any team which has been after the mug in recent years. But then we've heard that same story about all the challengers. The Brandons may win, but they've got rather a strenuous time ahead of them.

Local hockey lovers will be pleased to learn that we are to have another first-class game here this evening. On Friday night the Brockville O.H. A. seniors will be on hand to line up against the locals, and a fast and exciting match should be the outcome. The Brockvilles, at the beginning of the season, put the Kingston Frontenacs out of the running by a score of 9 to 1, and a short time ago gave Cornwall's Federal league team a decisive beating. They should make the locals strike their best gait, and probably will. Be on hand to cheer the real O.H.A. intermediate champions, and don't let the visitors have a chance to hand us them, even though they've had hard luck and their trouble to contend with so far this season. The American may not be able to draw the finely spun conclusions that Europeans may be able to draw from the course of events nearer his home, and generally affecting him, but it is the far greater probability that the soundness of his judgment is all the more assured because he lets theories go by the board and acquaints himself with facts.

Belleville Rugby Football Club will hold their annual meeting in the Y.M.C.A. parlors this evening, when officers for the ensuing season will be elected. A full attendance is requested.

Stratford Shut Midland Out.

Stratford, March 8.—The O. H. A. championship was won to-night by the Stratford intermediates in the last game of their lives before a crowd of 3,000 or 4,000 people, who screamed themselves hoarse during the whole of the play in consequence of the excellent play of both sides. There is no doubt the teams were evenly matched. Both are good skaters, good stick-handlers, quick passers and all-round good hockey players. The Midland team is not quite as heavier, but they have some star players in Kemp, Thompson, Miller and Gould, especially Thompson, the goal-keeper, who is excellent. The play was clean, very few penalties being inflicted, except for minor offences.

The Indians excelled themselves, the play most of the time being in the visitors' territory, and although the first half was fast, they could not overcome the quick passing and fine team playing of the Garrie out. The ice owing to the thaw was soft and heavy. The puck had no show to it. These conditions were expected to have given the visitors a great advantage, owing to their weight; but nothing seemed to daunt the Indians. The game was fast and furious throughout, especially in the second half. Edwards and Kemp were badly hurt accidentally and carried off the ice. The greater part of the second half was played with six men a side.

Midland must be feeling awfully sore, as a lot of money was put up on them at long odds in their favor. The score was 2 to 0 in the first half, and 5 to 0 in Stratford's favor when the whistle blew.

MEN'S TROUSERS.

A Possible Church Union.

(Montreal Star.)

An informal meeting of great significance was held in Montreal on Monday last. Representatives of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches met to discuss, in a "free and friendly" way, the subject would say, the possibility of union between these three churches which have so much in common and so little to divide them. The men who attended this meeting were of the highest standing in their respective churches; and they were one and all in favor of the coming together of their respective bodies. The Presbyterians were led by Rev. Dr. Cowan and Rev. Dr. Warden, the Methodists by Rev. Dr. Carman and Rev. Dr. Sutherland, and the Congregationalists by Rev. J. W. Pedley and Mr. Henry O'Hara. One Methodist minister who could not be present—Rev. Dr. Shepherd—wrote that he was out-and-out for the scheme.

This warm the appearance of one of the signs of the times. Nationally and religiously, the spirit of the age is against small bodies and in favor of large and powerful combinations. We are Imperialists, even in religious, Canada has created the union of the Presbyterian Churches and of the Methodist Churches; and both unions have resulted in splendid success.

A preliminary union is now in force in the Methodist and Presbyterians already co-operate in the western mission fields, thus saving much unnecessary duplication and much useless and costly over-lapping. The Methodist Church, moreover, feels that this arrangement has resulted in an extension of the usefulness of both bodies in that vast Northland of the West; and what is possible in the case of the new organization and the establishment of new outposts ought surely to be much easier in the settled East, where neither denomination has much to gain or lose.

The first fruits of such a union would be a telling economy in all branches of church work. The central officers need not be duplicated. The machinery for superintending endeavor could be welded into one, and much overlapping of agencies avoided. In small communities it frequently happens often do the work now divided among the three bodies, and the energies and money expended upon the fields would be materially left vacant. In the fighting machine, a united Methodist, Presbyterian Congregational Church would be much more effective than the three bodies marching separately.

The foreign and home mission fields would gain, and be saved the internal movements in the self-supporting districts. Upon practically all points of the Canadian settlement Methodist churches are spread, and, fighting together, they would fight more effectively. The second co-operation of the Sunday would be replaced by a constant and intimate union of forces to-morrow. Oneness would be the watchword. There would be identical, they would be an army, and not a loose collection of sympathetic companies.

The committee was appointed to arrange for further conferences and the future will be watched with the liveliest expectations.

COLDS ARE DANGEROUS.

How often you hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. The is of such common occurence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. It always cures and is pleasant to take. NOTES FROM TRENTON.

DWELLING DESTROYED BY FIRE —CENTRAL ONTARIO RAILWAY BLOCKED — GREAT ACCUMULATION OF MAIL MATTER.

Trenton, March 9.

At an early hour this morning a frame dwelling house situated on Mill street, which was destroyed by fire, together with its contents. The building was owned and occupied by an Assyrian family who recently acquired the property. The family barely escaped with their lives, in their night clothes. The fire left here this morning on the C.O.R. with the intention of trying to reach Bancroft. There has been no train north on this line since a week ago last Monday.

On Sunday last 60 bags of mail were taken from the post office here for various points north. Owing to the blockade on the C.O.R. the mail for Frankford, Marmora, Havelock and other places had to be taken in sleighs

The Rawdon Liquor Case.

The Rawdon township celebrated liquor case was continued here yesterday afternoon before Police Magistrate Flint and again this morning. Two of the accused, Messrs. J. McConnell and J. Whitton, have been acquitted. Argument by Mr. Anderson on behalf of the Crown, and Mr. J. E. Hallwell, for the defendants, was heard and judgment in some of the cases has been adjourned.

Cameron's Cunning Coup.

On Sunday last Walter Cameron, who had been an employee of Mr. W. L. Woof, of Shannonville, obtained a team and cutter from his late boss with the alleged intention of driving to Belleville to procure some clothes which he left here. On the way of the man or outfit has since been found, and it is surmised that he has gone across the border. Mr. Woof values the outfit at $200, which is a considerable loss to him.

Think Salaries Are too Low.

Hamilton, March 8.—At a recent meeting of the Hamilton Presbytery Rev. John Young said the curse of the presbytery was the low salaries paid to pastors. Some of the members thought the call to Rev. J. J. Maudrone, of the Owen Sound presbytery, by the congregations of Ancaster and Alberton should be set aside because these congregations offered him $750 a year and a manse. The call was sustained, however, as the members agree that it would not be right to punish Rev. Mr. Maudrone for what was described as the presbytery's spasm of liberality. The congregations will be urged to make the salary $750.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous services. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FAILURES IN CANADA.

DUN'S REPORT FOR THE MONTH OF FEBRUARY IS FAVORABLE

Insolvencies in the Dominion of Canada during February were another numerous nor large in amount of defaulted indebtedness. All commercial failures in Canada during the month numbered 96, against 103 in the same month last year, and 124 in 1902. Liabilities aggregated $709,367, a slight increase as compared with the $695,181 reported for February, 1903, but a decided improvement over the losses two years ago, which were $1,134,000. In manufacturing there were 12 suspensions, involving $182,223, against 13 last year for $134,500, while 76 trading failures occurred with liabilities of $459,524, against 88 in February, 1903, for $519,331, and 107 two years ago, when the losses were $900,974. Other commercial failures, not properly included in the two principal classes, were two in number and $67,650 in amount, which compares with liabilities of $11,500 last year, and $157,000 two years ago. There was also one small failure of a private banker for $20,000, an unusual occurrence in the Dominion where financial defaults are exceedingly rare. The only commercial class reporting a large numour was general stores, out of which there were 32 failures, out all were small in amount, while the heaviest liabilities occurred in dry goods, the aggregate of which $134,233, out the largest was not $50,000.

CURE FOR PNEUMONIA.

SIMPLE REMEDY WORKS WONDERS, SO IT IS CLAIMED.

(At the Board of Health office a small lot of circulars are being handed out to those interested, and because of the announced value of the cure for pneumonia it is herewith printed:

"Take six to ten onions, according to size, and chop fine; put in large cooker over a hot fire, then add about the same quantity of rye meal and enough sugar to make a thick paste. In the meanwhile stir it thoroughly, letting it simmer 5 or 10 minutes. Spread this in a cotton or large enough to cover the lungs, and apply to the chest as hot as patient can bear.

"In about 10 minutes apply another and thus continue by relieving the poultices, and in a few hours the patient will be out of danger. This simple remedy has never failed to cure this too often fatal malady, usually three or four applications will be sufficient, but continue always until the perspiration starts freely from the chest.

"The above remedy was formulated many years ago by one of the best physicians in Germany, and has ever known, who never lost a patient by this disease, and was his renowned secret of success. Was handed down after the best medical talent had proven should be set aside because these congregations offered him $750 a year and a manse. The call was sustained, however, as the members agree that it would not be right to punish Rev. Mr. Maudrone for what was described as the presbytery's spasm of liberality. The congregations will be urged to make the salary $750.

CONSUMPTION CURABLE

GOOD BLOOD MAKES THE LUNGS STRONG AND EXPELS DISEASE.

The time to cure consumption is not after the lungs are hopelessly involved and the doctor has given you up. Consumption preys upon weakness. Strength is the only means of safety. Do not let the blood become thin and watery. That is an open invitation to disease to take possession of your system. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best blood and nerve strength builder known to medical science. The record of this medicine proves beyond reasonable doubt that when the symptoms of consumption develop it builds up, strengthens and invigorates the patient to so point where the disease disappears. Here is a bit of positive proof. Miss Blanche Durand, St. Edmond, Que., says: "While out boating in September, 1901, I got my feet wet and took cold. I took the cold in the usual way but the cough seemed to cling to me. As several months passed by and I was not getting better, I went to a doctor in January, 1902, and he told me that my lungs were affected and I was in consumption. Returning home a friend to whom I had much confidence strongly urged me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I began taking the pills and soon found they were helping me. The cough grew less severe; my appetite improved and my strength began to return. I continued taking the pills for about two months, when I found my health fully restored, and I have not since experienced any weakness. I am now Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and my life."

Such cases as these prove the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich, red blood, and in this way reach all diseases due to bad blood and weak nerves. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THEY WERE OF ONE MIND

Opposition Backs Government For a Dominion Subsidy.

Resolution to Memorialize Dominion Government to Aid the Temiskaming Railway Quickly Passed—Bill to Aid the Soo Industries to the Extent of $2,000,000 Explained and Read a First Time—Routine Business in House.

Toronto, March 9.—The Opposition heartily concurred in the Government resolution to memorialize the Dominion Government to grant a subsidy to the Temiskaming Railway, but before the resolution was passed the Government was severely criticized for its inaction in allowing two years to pass before taking the matter up seriously. The resolution is as follows:

Moved by Mr. Ross, seconded by Mr. Gibson: That this House do respectfully memorialize the Government of Canada to grant aid by way of subsidy to the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway to the same extent as subsidies have been granted by the Parliament of Canada to other railways in the different provinces of Canada, and that the Honorable the Speaker of this Assembly be authorized to transmit such memorial to the Right Honorable Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of the Dominion Government, at his early consideration.

After discussion the motion was passed.

The Soo Bill.

Premier Ross brought down his bill in the Legislature yesterday to grant aid to the colonization of industries. Contrary to the custom, the Premier explained the bill, proposing to explain the features of the bill. He said it was within the knowledge of everybody that the great enterprise at Sault Ste. Marie had given rise to many difficulties. He then outlined the history of the concern, and later its connection with the industries. He then gave reasons why the Government should aid the enterprise, the principal one being the association of the Provincial Government with the concern for the purpose of developing the resources of the Province. No rails were being produced in Canada. Not one rail for our 21,000 miles of railway in Canada was produced in Canada except those produced at the Soo, and it was existing that this condition of affairs should exist no longer. Moreover, the Government, in the proposed giving was exactly in line with the railway policy, viz., to develop the great hinterland of Ontario.

Reasons For Giving Aid.

In brief, the reasons for this assistance were: 1. We are practically saving $35,000,000 investment; we are preserving the advantages of the pulp, power, and power mills at the Soo, and saving the rail mill, and getting connection with the C.P.R. and making valuable a large tract of country.

The Government proposed to guarantee $2,000,000 of the bonds of the Algoma Central Railway, and these funds will enable the company to acquire their existing investments for the reorganization of the industries. The company proposed to complete the railway, to bind themselves to carry passengers and freight at low rates, to supply motive power and to accept payments in cash or bonds. The company's obligations to the Province amounting to $7,000,000. The amount advanced by the banks to pay the wages at the Soo will be discharged to the last dollar. Many of the Canadian creditors, said the Premier, could ill-afford the loss of their accounts.

For this assistance the company proposed to organize a company to carry on the works, to indemnify the province. The guarantee of the $2,000,000 was for two years, and in the event of the company making default the province was at liberty to take possession of the railway and dispose of other securities. The bonds would bear interest at 4 per cent.

The railway had cost $6,750,000. The security of the province was in the first place the railway and in addition the ships of the company, valued at $2,500,000. These items alone constituted a very substantial security. There was also a railway from Depot Harbour to Creighton which cost $500,000. Altogether the Premier figured the subsidy and security at between seven and eight millions. That might be considered ample.

There would be three Canadians on the board of directors, two of whom had already been agreed upon. It would be said in objection that it was known that Canadian watchfulness would not be wanting to make a success of the enterprise. It was for the House to say whether it would permit the enterprise or allow it to be scattered to the winds, and it could not appear that the money could be started without the help of the Government.

Mr. Whitney said while there would be no formal opposition to the first reading of the bill he wished to be understood as not being able to concur in any way in this last-quoted-up ate attempt of his hon. friends to build up their fallen fortunes. Was in this country, and he included the gentlemen opposite, believed that if the Government had a majority of ten it would attempt any such arrangement? Several members of the House who were financially interested in the matter and it was a strange thing if the Premier, as the leader of Liberalism in this province, should allow himself to be dragooned into coming to the aid of a dying enterprise with two millions of money in order that the Government should retain that power.

The Premier had said the enterprise would fail without this aid, and this statement was the condemnation of the scheme. Was it possible that an enterprise which took $35,000,000 to create would fail for the want of $2,000,000 of Government aid. Those who recalculated the promise of the millenium that would come to pass if the 7,400 acres of mile were given to this company would consider the opinion of the Government to-day in the light of what had occurred. Mr. Whitney moved in amendment for $2,000,000 of bonds valueless.

The bill was read a first time.

Routine in the House.

Mr. James' bill respecting the Town of North Bay passed its third reading.

Mr. Latchford's resolution was adopted permitting the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to lend to the Temiskaming Railway Company from the consolidated revenue fund to the amount of $2,000,000, and to accept the bonds of the Commission as security with interest at 3½ per cent.

Mr. Gibson's bill to amend the act respecting religious institutions passed.

The House went into Committee on Supply after recess.

The Prohibition Bill.

As the House was about to adjourn, Mr. Whitney reminded the Premier that during the last week he had intimated that the Liquor Bill might be brought down towards the end of this week. Could the Premier say on what day he expected to bring down his bill?

Attorney-General Ross replied that he could not say what day.

"Well, perhaps the Premier will say if the bill will be brought down at all?" was the further inquiry of the leader of the Opposition.

"No, I can't say."

SLASHED WITH KNIFE.

Escapade of a Finlander at the Village of Rodney, Ont.

Rodney, March 9.—Dugald Currie, who lives about two miles outside of Rodney, was driving home last Saturday evening and when out of the village about half a mile overtook three young men walking. Recognizing one, whom he was acquainted with, he asked him to get in and have a ride, and, not having room in the buggy, omitted to invite all. One, a young fellow who seems to have come from Finland, took offence apparently from the partiality shown indeed on getting in by first jumping on the back of the buggy, afterwards getting in front and taking hold of the reins and driving the horse and vehicle to the side of the road. When Mr. Currie and the other young man — Robinson tried to protect themselves the fellow pulled a knife and slashed Currie, cutting and wounding his cheek while Robinson got a slash into his flesh in the back and bled profusely. Monday morning he arrived at Rodney for his arrest, and Constable Lody went to where he was working and brought him in, lodging him in jail. Boaze, as Currie says, seems to have played a part on the desperate young fellow.

REVOLT AND A CRISIS

Chamberlainite Members of Unionist Party Break Away.

Sent Ultimatum to the Premier That They Would Offer Strenuous Resistance If Mr. Wharton's Amendment Were Persisted In—Matter Went to a Vote and the Majority For the Government Was 46.

London, March 10.—(C.A.P.)—The Chamberlainite members of the Unionist party revolted Tuesday night, thus producing a Government crisis. Right Hon. J. L. Wharton (Conservative) in view of Captain Pirie's (Liberal) free trade motion, offered an amendment expressing approval of the explicit declarations of His Majesty's Ministers that their policy of fiscal reform did not include any general system of protection of preference based on food taxation.

112 Unionist tariff reformers under the chairmanship of Right Hon. Sir Herbert Maxwell (Conservative), held a meeting and sent an ultimatum to the Premier, stating that the amendment was calculated to place the Government in absolute opposition to the Premier's programme and they were prepared to offer it strenuous resistance. As the Unionist free traders were divided with regard to the amendment, Mr. Wharton's amendment was withdrawn entirely thus leaving the issue clear for Captain Pirie's resolution, which ran that the House noting the frequent and continued advocacy of the policy of preferential and protective tariffs which was encouraged by the language of certain of His Majesty's Ministers deem it necessary to express its condemnation of the scheme.

Seen No Difference.

C. A. Cripps, M. P. (Conservative) argued the case for a preference being granted to the colonies and maintained that there was not any difference between Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain on the main principle.

Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, Liberal leader, dealt with the famous unpublished document submitted to the Cabinet in September. The Premier, replying to Lord George Hamilton, jumped up and repeated that the two documents were before the Cabinet. He and some friends had put the second alternative first, that no mistake might be made, said Mr. Balfour.

Mr. Asquith replied that "We know by the statement of Lord George Hamilton that the second document advocated the preferential taxation of food, therefore, we are entitled to assume that the Government policy does not exclude the preferential taxation of food."

After General Election.

Premier Balfour, in reply, said that after a general election the Government would be able to adopt a policy of dealing with retaliation and dumping. We want a general election because of this great fundamental change of policy. He was surprised that any members of his party should think the declarations of the Government were not sufficiently explicit. He plainly propounded retaliation and stated that he did not think the public was ripe for the taxation of food for a fiscal union with the colonies, based on such taxation. Never before was a Government been subjected to cross-examination as in its existing policy, but in its policy if returned after a general election. He did not intend to certain members sitting with the Ministerial party, but not belonging to it, but the bulk of the party, he believed, was willing to support the Sheffield program, which was the program he put before the country. In the elections to-morrow those fearing developments in the fiscal policy ought to use their influence to keep the change within reasonable limits.

Majority Forty-six.

Lord Hugh Cecil said that as the leader of the House had not repudiated the Birmingham programme he would vote for the resolution. The vote resulted in a Government majority of 46.

After More Information.

At yesterday's meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce, on behalf of the Newcastle Gateshead Chamber, an amendment was proposed to the resolution of the London Chamber favoring the adoption of measures for negotiation, but urging the Government to appoint a Royal Commission to inquire into and report upon the whole fiscal policy of the nation. The amendment was adopted, 58 members voting for and 45 against.

One Form of Reciprocity.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, acknowledging the resolution passed by the Australian Free Trade League, said the lowering or abolition of tariff barriers constitutes one form of reciprocity which a free trade country can recognize or accept. Sir Henry firmly believes that England is irrevocably committed to free trade.

Quebec, March 10.—Mostly all the rural members of Parliament passed through Quebec yesterday morning en route to Ottawa to their Parliamentary duties. Every one of them spoken to expect a short session and a dissolution of Parliament in June next.

ARCHBISHOP MACRAY

Primate of All Canada Died in Winnipeg on Wednesday.

Sketch of His Life—Was a Precocious Youth and Stood High in His Classes —His Clerical Appointments—Honors That Came to Him—Were of the Highest Nature—Possessed of Charming Manner.

Winnipeg, March 10.—Archbishop Machray, Primate of all Canada, who has been seriously ill for several days, died last evening from pneumonia. Deceased was in his 72nd year, and one of the best known theologians and collegians in the Anglican church in America.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

The Most Rev. Robert Machray, Archbishop of Rupert's Land and Primate of all Canada, was the son of an advocate of the same name living in Aberdeen, Scotland, where he was born on May 17, 1831. He entered King's College, University of Aberdeen, in early boyhood, for the purpose of receiving a clerical education, and graduated from Cambridge with high honors in mathematics in 1853, being advanced in the same year to deacon's orders. In 1856 he was admitted to the priesthood, and in the same year received the degree of M.A. and was elected dean of his college. He officiated for a number of years as vicar of Hedgley, a village situated about five miles west of Cambridge, prior to his appointment as second Bishop of Rupert's Land, which comprised the entire district known now as Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, and included a portion of Ontario. He assumed the see in 1865, the same year in which he received the degree of doctor of divinity. On the division of the diocese in 1871, Bishop Machray was chosen metropolitan under the primacy of the Archbishop of Canterbury. On the union of the Canadian Anglican churches, in 1893 he was elected Primate of Canada and appointed by Her Majesty, prelate of the most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George. He was for many years Chancellor of the University of Manitoba and chairman of the Provincial Board of Education and of the Advisory Board of the Department of Education. He favored separate schools, but did not consider them practicable for such a country as Manitoba on account of its scattered population. He considered that what was necessary was some definite religious teaching in a non-sectarian manner. In 1865 he received the degree of LL.D. from Aberdeen and D. D. from Manitoba in 1888, D.D. from Durham and D. C. L. from Trinity University, Toronto, in 1893, and from Oxford in 1897.

He was possessed of a most charming manner, which rendered him extremely popular among the clergy and laity, and his sermons were marked by practical good sense. While he made no pretence of oratorical ability, his ardent devotion very frequently carried him to a high degree of eloquence and spiritual fervor. He was eminently a missionary bishop, being full of practical energy and fervent piety.

The deceased Primate visited England last year, and while there met with an accident, from the effects of which he suffered for a long period, and it is thought that this may have caused a weakening of his physical condition, which rendered him particularly liable to the disease which carried him off.

Death of Vicar General.

Hamilton, March 10.—Rev. Father John Keough, vicar-general of the Hamilton diocese, died yesterday morning after a long illness. He was formerly a rector of St. Patricks' Church here, and was also stationed at Dundas and Paris. He was one of the oldest priests in the diocese.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN ILL?

Unconfirmed Report Says He Is Suffering From an Intestinal Disease.

London, March 10.—(Toronto Globe Special.)—Considerable anxiety regarding Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's condition is being manifested on account of the circulation of reports among members of the House of Commons that he is suffering from an intestinal trouble. It was whispered about yesterday that he was in the incipient stages of softening of the brain. Where this report originated could not be learned, nor was it possible to obtain information either confirming the report or denying it. It finds little credence among the friends of Mr. Chamberlain, although they are disturbed by it.

Eight-Year-Old Drowned.

Toronto, March 10.—The Don River claimed its first victim for the year yesterday afternoon, when Stanley Moffatt, the 8-year-old son of P. C. Robert T. Moffatt of No. 4 Division, broke through the ice and was drowned. The accident occurred at about 10 minutes to 6 o'clock. The body has not yet been recovered.

Von Waldersee at Rest.

WHO ARE THE TRUE PATRIOTS?

The former editor of The Toronto Globe, commenting upon the present Ontario Legislature, thus truthfully describes both parties:

"No one who has watched the proceedings in the Legislature has ever failed to observe that the Opposition now sits on the right of the Speaker. The aggressive force lies on the left. From the Conservative members come all the propositions having the reform of the law in view. Bills improving the educational system, the assessment system, the legal system, the election system; suggestions having to do with the social concerns of the people, the promotion of agriculture and industry, the defence of labor, and the equalling of the conditions under which we live, originate on the Conservative side, and the Government simply SITS STILL AND OPPOSES THEM.

"Many valuable measures have been side-tracked in the past few days. Mr. Hoyle's bill to protect the public in the matter of company promotion was one of these. Mr. Lumsy's bill to bring the rural school system into harmony with the needs of the country was another. The proposal of Mr. Hugh Clark with reference to election protests was a third. Sometimes the Ministers profess ignorance of the subject dealt with, and have the proposition killed with the promise that they will look into the question when they have the opportunity. At other times they are distinctly opposed to reform, and get rid of the issue either by a demand upon the majority of three or by referring it to a committee for burial.

"Very frequently the opposition to advanced measures is prompted by a base motive. The Ministers object to the project, intending, as has been the case in other sessions, to appropriate it as their own later on, and to include it among other plagiarisms on the list of laws which they publish as the products of their own ingenuity, when a general election comes. For years opposition has been prompted by the determination that no law shall pass with the name of a Conservative member attached to it. But to-day the situation is somewhat different. There is a straight opposition to reform, because the power to appreciate the needs of the province expired when the able men went out.

"Whatever may be said in support of the view that the public departments require, after 30 years of secrecy, an examination, and under that head there is no room for argument, a good deal more can be said in favor of the reinvigoration of the Legislative authority which is now at its lowest ebb, and is simply a machine for registering good propositions.

"It is, of course, natural that the Government should become, a species of opposition, because, after all, it is but representative of the majority of the people. It stands there with a vote of seven hundred and registered against it, and is a DISHEARTENED JUNTA. But this sort of thing cannot be tolerated. We sought to have a Government with the brains to devise and the ability to do something more than serve out subsidies and register votes in the negative."

In the face of these facts, such parties as The Globe and the smart fry keep up a howl that the Opposition has "no policy."

TIMELY TOPICS.

One of the chief topics of conversation in this city at present is the matter of who shall keep the Police Court records? As our readers well know, the duties in question are supposed to be performed by the City Clerk, though for some considerable time, up to a short while ago, the Chief of Police performed them, or perhaps we ought to say, performed what were supposed by the general public to be the duties. It might be well, before going further, to explain what the real duties of the Police Court Clerk are:

He is supposed to write out all summonses, information, etc., take down all evidence in the court and generally, according to the Statute, be under the orders of the Police Magistrate, in addition keeping a record of all cases, receiving fines and costs and turning them over to the City Treasurer. Those are the duties of the Police Court Clerk, but they have not for years been performed because the Police Magistrate himself has issued the summonses, etc., and has taken down the evidence, and the Police Magistrate, we are told, has no objection, so long as his health remains good, to continue doing the same thing.

What, then, remains for the Police Court Clerk to do? Simply to enter in a book kept for the purpose the title of each case which is tried in the Court, and the finding of the Magistrate. He does not need to be present while the case is being tried, and can obtain his information from the Police Magistrate afterwards, at the same time taking over what fines have been collected.

We are told that the above method can be carried out, and from our knowledge of Police Court procedure, we believe it to be feasible. Under the circumstances, then, has there not been considerably more than enough said on this matter than the circumstances warranted? If it is the duty of any official to do the work in question, and the work can be performed with so little effort, why was so much fuss made about it, and why was the late Chief Police servant of the city threatened so harshly? Surely an easy solution of the matter should soon be found.

The Kingston News and Times shows signs of increasing prosperity, having installed new machinery and evidently taken its place as a thoroughly up-to-date newspaper. We wish Kingston's Conservative organ the success it deserves.

Madame Patti has cancelled all her U.S. engagements and will leave for England at once. Poor patronage was the cause. The Yankees refused to loosen up on their dollars to hear a back number. They are not so "easy" as some Canadians.

A regrettable omission occurred in our editorial of yesterday entitled "The End of Forty Years' Effort," in which the sentence occurs: "Mr. John Charlton, banished from public life," etc. It should have read: "Banished by ill health from public life," etc.

People who remove ice from grass-covered sidewalks should be careful not to injure the face of the walk. Several pavements in this city show big dents as the result of this careless practice.

Orillia is the latest place to get into line and appoint a deputation to urge the completion of the Trent Canal.

The Port Hope Guide, discussing the organization of a lacrosse team in that town, says: "It has been suggested to trounce the first person who proposes a horse brew team." That's the way to foster a spirit of pure amateurism, we don't think!

There have been two cases of highway robbery in Peterboro during the past week. Neither of them were in connection with hockey matches.

Kingston now has five championships, three hockey and two football. Pretty good for a place which is inhabited by commonplaces.

"SARKASM."

(Hamilton Spectator.)

We regret to learn from the Toronto Mail that our late lamented friend, Senator Tilman, of the United States, has been a political struggle, even should he consent to President Roosevelt's nomination by the Republican party," it seems, according to the Mail, that it is Senator Foraker, of Ohio, who is "an opponent to Hanna in season and out," who is likely to put our dead friend to trouble. What a country it must to where a dead and buried politician is not permitted to remove from the political struggle!

One of the surest signs of spring is the reappearance of our old friend Mr. Buskin, the colporteur, who this morning made his 31st annual appearance. He seems to have the start of the first robin this spring.

The fact that Australians are still throwing eggs at Elijah Dowie shows conclusively that there has been no strike of the bens "down under."

The resolution passed by the local University of Toronto Graduates' Club which appears in another column, shows that body to be wide-awake and progressive. Copies of the resolution have been sent to the Premier and the County's representatives in the Legislature, and the executive of the local Board of Trade will, we are told, consider it at their next meeting. To the thoughtful observer it must be patent that North Hastings furnishes especially broad fields for reforestry owing to its having been originally heavy timbered, and well watered, while our mines and mineral development cannot fail to be benefitted by laboratory work. Our Provincial University should be put on at least as high a plane in this respect as McGill, Cornell and other institutions that have identified themselves with progress.

LOVERS' LANE.

The coming of the handsome and immense production, "Lovers' Lane," by Clyde Fitch, to the opera house on Saturday, March 12th, will be awaited with keen interest by the public of this city. Never has play had the heralding this one has. All are well acquainted with the remarkable runs in New York for five months and in Chicago for three. A beautiful idea is conveyed in the title. "Lovers' Lane" is a stretch of roadway leading from the parsonage to the church where the minister has given forty years of his life to heart and soul and so the villagers have grown to call that roadway, which links the two sacred places "Lovers' Lane." The company carries a complete scenic equipment and a cast of 30 metropolitan artists.

Good Play of a Golf Enthusiast.

"The Wilkie shot is what we call a special stroke in the game of golf," said a New Orleans man. "This stroke is so called all over the south and was given its name because it was made by a man named Wilkie, a member of the New Orleans Golf club.

"It was one of the prettiest plays I ever saw and was made during a match. Wilkie drove off from the ninth hole, and his ball landed in a small creek, which was one of the hazards in the course. The ball was sighter than the water and floated. To take it out and begin play over again meant the loss of two strokes and the hole, so Wilkie waded into the water, which was about two feet deep, and played the ball from there. He made a pretty stroke and was on the green, making it in two. He holed out in three, which is bogey for that hole. It was a cold day, and that water was not pleasant, but the act gained Wilkie lasting fame, and his stroke will always with us be called a Wilkie shot."

The Gist of the Netherlands.

The Dutch girl does not enjoy anything like the amount of freedom granted to her English or American sister. She is a very carefully chaperoned young person, and when she goes to the theater it is with her elders, not merely with a friend or two of her own age. At the dances she attends, songs, recitations and music for the entertainment of the elders form a part of the regular programme, and the chaperons sit at tables socially enjoying their coffee or other refreshments, while the young folk glide over the waxed floor to the strains of the latest waltz. Dutch maidens have to make the best of their opportunities of amusement, for when it pleases their parents to seek the quiet of home they must meekly accompany them. In their country the idea of a girl being unchaperoned at a dance is not to be thought of—at any rate, not yet.—Exchange.

Whistler Before Whistler.

Mortimer Menpes told the following story of Whistler, who was to deliver an address one day to the Society of British Artists: "The master at length entered, faultlessly dressed, walking with a swinging, jaunty step, evidently quite delighted with himself and the world in general. He passed down the gallery, ignoring the assembled members, and walked up to his own picture. And there he stayed for quite fifteen minutes, regarding it with a satisfied expression, stepping now backward, now forward, putting his head and dusting the surface of the glass with a silk pocket handkerchief. We watched him open mouthed. Suddenly he turned round, beamed upon us and uttered just two words—'Bravo, Jimmy!'—then took my arm and hurried me out of the gallery, talking volubly the while."

A Battle of Languages.

Three or four languages strove for mastery in ancient Gaul, which is now France. German was spoken by the 12,000 Frank invaders. Popular Latin was spoken by 6,000,000 Gallo-Romans. Literary Latin was the language of the church and of literature. Low Latin was afterward the language of the administration. German was the first to succumb. In four centuries it ceased to be understood by the soldiers, and in seventy years more it had become an object of ridicule. But it survives in more than 500 words, expressing the things of government, law and war, and thus forms no insignificant part of the French language.

Charity.

Every good act is charity. Giving water to the thirsty is charity. Removing stones and thorns from the road is charity. Exhorting your fellowmen to virtuous deeds is charity. Smiling in your brother's face is charity. Putting a wanderer in the right path is charity. A man's true wealth is the good he does in this world. When he dies mortals will ask what property has he left behind him, but angels will inquire, "What good deeds hast thou sent before thee?"—Mohammed.

WOMEN DOCTORS.

There Are About Six Thousand of These Practicing in This Country.

It will surprise many readers to be told, on the authority of Dr. Katherine G. Townsend, writing in Everybody's Magazine, that the average number of medical women graduates each year is about 900, and it is estimated that there are nearly 6,000 women physicians practicing in this country.

Years ago a medical woman had a hard time to make ends meet with the proceeds of her labor. At this period each large city will show the names of several who are earning fifteen, 20 of even and twenty thousand dollars annually.

Fifty-five years ago this country had not one woman physician. Colleges would not graduate them, men abominated them and women had a contempt for them.

Elizabeth Blackwell was the first woman to gain a diploma from a medical college. She was graduated from Hobart college, Geneva, N. Y., in 1849, but it was not until she had applied to twelve colleges that the "sacred" portals were opened to her. Her sister, Emily Blackwell, had similar difficulty in entering a medical college. She finally graduated, however, and these two sisters settled in New York and founded a dispensary which developed into the present New York Infirmary For Women and Children, with its house staff of eighteen physicians, all women.

A HEALTHY OLD AGE

The Goal of Every Man's Ambition

THOUSANDS of human beings are suffering under the burden of a sickly, premature old age, because of diseased kidneys. These organs once diseased give out to all parts of the body a deadly poison.

The face loses its color, the eye its lustre, the brain its ambition, and the muscles their energy, and many of the most troublesome ailments result.

Bu-Ju cures all forms of kidney trouble, and brings back youth and vigor by rooting out the evil. It is a never-failing cure for every form of kidney ailment. It cures rheumatism by eradicating the cause of rheumatism, kidney disorders. If you are suffering from any form of kidney trouble, commence taking Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, at once. You cannot afford to neglect the many symptoms that point to diseased kidneys.

Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont. Markham, Ont., Dec. 1, 1903.

Gentlemen:—I had suffered almost continually for seven years from kidney trouble. Could scarcely walk and was unable to do a farm duties. Hearing of Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, advertised and procured a box from my druggist. After taking the first few pills I felt much relieved and after taking half a box was able to do a full day's work. I know one box of Bu-Ju saved me 50 doctor bills, and think they are the finest pill made. I give this testimonial freely.

Stood by the Reporter.

The late George W. Childs, the proprietor of the Philadelphia Ledger, was a man who supported his subordinates when they were in the right. During a bitter congressional campaign one of the candidates called upon Mr. Childs and said:

"Mr. Childs, I have always considered you my friend. Am I right in that assumption?"

"Yes," said Mr. Childs in his quiet way, wondering what was coming.

"Well, I come to complain about your political reporter. His reports of my campaign have done me much damage."

"I understand," said Mr. Childs, "that your reporter has been printing your own speeches. Is that true?"

"Y-e-s," was the hesitating reply.

"Then," said the publisher, "you are the guilty man. You are killing your own candidacy, and the Ledger is simply giving a faithful picture of the performance. Blame yourself and not the Ledger reporter."

And that was all the satisfaction this influential politician could get from the publisher.

THE GREAT EASTERN STOCK Co.

The Underprice Store

Can it be Done

Truly good bargains benefit both parties, seller and buyer.

Great Enterprises dependent upon public support must have public service as their basic principle.

These statements may seem a trifle toplofty. You'll possibly think them advertising bombast, but they are printed with a serious purpose and by common consent this store shall become the leading place in the development of modern retailing. Public confidence is becoming fixed and some service to the intelligent people must underlie this confidence.

Intelligent comprehension of our tark of course inspires the service rendered.

Good understanding with our public is most hopeful and to make the understanding clear we must have clean advertising and in this way state a few of our notions.

First—To cheapen the cost of Merchandising.

2nd—To promote facility of trading by concentration of first great stocks.

3rd—To save the time of purchasing.

4th—To benefit employees by giving them better values, thereby making this the economic trading centre of Belleville and you may feel assured that this store will be full of comfort to the small purse and economic spirit.

Interesting or Nothing

Do you think of the Underpriced Store?

What do you think of the Underpriced Store?

It is bad for us if you think ill of us

It is worse for the Underprice Store if you don't think at all.

These axioms being true, the Underprice Store is nothing if not interesting.

New Arrival of Goods Daily.

And you should visit this storm centre for economic buying at every shopping time, or miss the best genuine bargains to be found. Bad freighting has delayed many goods but we are showing more fine things, more low priced things, more exactly up-to-date things on each succeeding day, here shall appear authoritative styles as fast as conditions shall permit, and it will be worth a ride of many miles to feast your eyes on a store full of Underprice Merchandise.

This week the store has grown doubly brilliant with new things, delightful to view, gratifying to possess, and this store is yours for pleasure and if your pleasure reaches a desire for possession of the merchandise shown, we are doubly gratified of course, however if you are not a purchaser we want you to come anyway as bargains are always in evidence and we recognize the first impression a customer on entering this store must have is sincerity of purpose on our part, also we recognize that a few crumbs of comfort may be gathered here and there, but if you want a whole loaf of satisfaction buy here. Nuff Sed.

MAKE YOURSELF NECESSARY .. TO SOMEBODY ..

(Emerson)

We have made ourselves necessary to a great many "somebodies," when it comes to the question of Clothing. We know of nothing that is more of a necessity to-day than good Clothing.

Our showing of New Spring Styles in men's Suits has never been equalled, even in our own store, and an inspection of them will most surely convince you how necessary we are to a man's comfort and welfare.

No matter what your taste for clothes is, we can please it. The brightest of Tweeds—the prettiest shades of blue in serges and worsteds, with a range of prices that make choosing an easy matter. Say, $5 to $15 and all the betweens in prices.

A few minutes of your time spent among the suits will tell you more than we can if we used a page of this paper.

Ottawa, March 10.—As pointed out early last year, the British Government will be asked for the loan of a couple of British warships, one for the Atlantic and the other for the Pacific, on which to train Canadian seamen. The application will be made by Hon. Mr. Prefontaine personally. It is the intention of the Minister of Marine to proceed to England after Parliament rises and interview the British Admiralty on the subject.

Fifty Drowned.

London, March 10.—A special despatch from Paris announces that the French steamer Laperouse (of 2,350 tons, which left Rangoon, Feb. 17, for Cochin-China and European ports) has been wrecked in a storm on the coast of Cochin-China. The despatch adds that it is believed 50 persons perished in the wreck. The steamer carried 100 passengers, mostly Annamese.

Loans on Irish Land.

London, March 10.—The first month's operations under the Irish Land Act were on quite a modest scale. A Parliamentary paper shows that in November loans to the amounts of £9,317 were applied for, £7,655 was provisionally granted, and £192 actually issued. For the sale of estates loans were applied for, amounting to £69,623.

One's Clothes and One's Worn.

Whenever a marked personal care is exhibited for the cleanliness of the person and for neatness in dress there is also almost always found extra carefulness as regards the finish of work done. Work people whose personal habits are slovenly produce slovenly work; those who are careful of their own appearance are equally careful of the look of the work they turn out. And probably what is true of the workroom is equally true of the region behind the counter. Is it not the fact that the smart salewoman is usually rather particular about her dress, is averse to wearing dingy collars, frayed cuffs and faded ties? The truth of the matter seems to be that extra care as regards personal habits and general appearance is as a rule indicative of a certain alertness of mind

TIMELY TOPICS.

If things turn out as they are confidently expected to do, certain Belleville people will shortly come into possession of their shares of a neat fortune, amounting, we are told, to no less than $15,000,000. The heirs of the estate in question, which is now in chancery in England, live in this city and different other places in Ontario. They have for years been prosecuting their claims, and of late with every prospect of success. In fact, the only thing missing now to bring matters to a successful conclusion is the marriage certificate of the great-grandfather of our fellow-citizens. That is being diligently searched for, and when it turns up, as it is believed it must, there will be nothing but money for many people who are quite qualified to enjoy it when they do get it. Good luck to them; we wouldn't mind being one of the heirs to an estate of fifteen millions ourselves.

His appetite at present, he says, is so good that as it might be. He made an inspection of the steamer's electric lights last night, and found them fully up to the standard.

FANTASTIC TOPS.

Queer Spinning Devices Used by the Little Moro Chaps.

In my service as a soldier with Captain Pershing's command in the Mindanao campaign of 1902-03 I had a very good opportunity to watch the little Moro lads in their games. Their tops were of peculiar ingenuity and interest. Fig. 1 is a drawing of their simplest form of top. The Moro lad selects a piece of hard wood with smooth and even grain and proceeds to cut out a block of the material. Then he gradually works the piece of wood to a cone shape and often devotes several hours a day cutting, chipping, smoothing and shaping the top until he gets it into the form desired. Usually the mahogany wood is used.

The boy makes slots in the circumference of the top and inserts little ears of wood. When the top is spun, these ears make humming sounds. The point of the top is a bit of metal properly worked down and a point ground there on. The Moro lad uses hemp, rawhide or catgut for his top cords.

One curious style of combination top is shown in Fig. 2. It consists of the main portion, along which the cord is wound—or hung, rawhide or catgut—and the several separate saucer shaped parts. These parts are set one in the other, and when the top is thrown and all spin together the centrifugal force causes the upper saucers to lift and float off two or three yards before they fall to the ground. The saucer-like forms are tediously worked down from hard wood by the boys during the long hours of the day.

Another strange style of Moro top is represented in Fig. 3. It is an egg shaped affair, cut out of hardwood material, with a furrow in the middle. The top is spun upon the pointed end of a metal shaft which runs vertically through it. This is called the fighting top, as the boys use it with great force upon other tops, throwing it so hard as to split them with the point.

The snake top is represented in Fig. 4. It is made from roots which grow in this form. Much skill is needed to obtain the proper balance. Usually the native lad has the top with him for weeks, working it down, playing with it and adjusting the balance before he can spin it.

The top spins only a little while before it topples over, but I noticed that the youngsters had more fun with these awkward long necked tops than with any others.—Ex-Soldier in Youth's Companion.

A Bit of Self Defense.

Here is a little bit of strategy that is at once the most harmless and amusing as well as one of the most effective things in the way of self defense: Let the opponent with whom you are practicing reach out for you with his hands or else ask him to attempt to strike you. Thrust both arms between his, take a firm grip upon the lapels of his coat and pull his coat off and downward over his shoulders until the sleeves are brought down so that the shoulders of the coat are held securely just above the elbows. So simple is this trick that any boy can hold at utter disadvantage a fellow combatant who possesses twice his strength.—St. Nicholas.

Trick With a Penny.

To pierce a penny with a fine sewing needle does not at first seem an easy thing to do, but it is really very simple when done in the following manner: Stick the needle lengthwise through a cork, allowing the point to project a little. If the needle is longer than the cork, cut off the head with nippers. Place the penny and the cork on a soft board and hit the cork sharply with a hammer. The needle is kept by this from slipping aside, and as it is harder than the copper of the penny the coin is easily perforated even by the finest point.

Nettie's Explanation.

Little Nettie had been given the task of rocking the baby to sleep, and her big brother came in and found him still awake.

"Why, Nettie," she said, "isn't your little brother asleep yet?"

"No, mamma," she replied. "I fear isn't make him teep hims eyes but toned."

Well Supplied.

There was once a little boy only three years old who was being taught how to count. One day he was talking so much that his uncle asked him how many tongues he had. The little fellow replied:

"I have three tongues, one in my mouth and one in each shoe."

AUTHOR OF

"THE LEAVENWORTH CASE."

CHAPTER I.

For a detective whose talents had not long competed at headquarters, I possessed an ambition which, fortunately for my standing with the lieutenant of the precinct, had not yet been exposed to ridicule. Though I had small reason for expecting great things of myself, I had always flattered myself that if a big case came my way I should be found able to do something more than astonishing more, that is, than I had seen accomplished by the police of the District of Columbia since I had the honor of being a member of their number. Therefore, when I found myself plunged, almost without any own volition, into the Jeffrey-Moore affair, I believed that the opportunity had come whereby I might distinguish myself.

It had complications with Jeffrey-Moore affair; greater ones than the public ever knew, for the case of the kind, it ran both in and out of Washington.

This is why I propose to tell the story of this great tragedy from my own standpoint, which is the only one I risk the charge of attempting to exploit any interest connected with that celebrated case. In its course I encountered as many disappointments as triumphs, and I never knew how affair a heart as sore as it was mentioned, for I was never at a loss and—

Well, I'll let the station-house the night Uncle David came in. He was always called Uncle David, even by the servants, and was most kind to his sister; so I am showing him no disrespect when I mention that in first giving him a title which as completely true. Everybody will find him Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without nauseating or weakening effect on the market. "It was all in the papers," he called back. "Read them. But first sure to find out who has taken a light in the house that we all know has not even a caretaker in it.

It was good advice. My duty and my curiosity both led me to follow it.

Perhaps you have heard of the distinguishing feature of this house; if so, you do not need my explanations. But, if, for any reason, you are ignorant of the facts which with in a very short time have set a fresh seal of horror upon this old, historic dwelling, the Filigree House, I will read what has made and will continue to make the Filigree House to be Washington one to be pointed at in daylight and shunned after dark, not only by superstitious colored folk, but by all who are susceptible to the most ordinary emotions of fear and dread.

It was standing when Washington was a village. It antedates the Capitol and the White House. Built by a man of wealth, it bears to this day the impress of the large ideas and quiet opulence of those times, but the shadow which speedily fell across it, seemed to be marked only even in those early days.

Its owner, one of the backers of the epithet of "haunted," families that have moved in have as quickly moved it out, preferring to live in terror of what no happiness was to be found there and this, although impossible under its roof. That there was some reason for the dread of certain spirits which were not without their tragic circumstances, I gathered somewhat. Death had often occurred there, and while this fact can be stated in regard to most houses, it is not so often that one can say, as in this case, that they are all old fellow which I should hardly presume to mention, but it not been for the event occurring which has recalled them to all men's minds and given to this long empty and lonely mansion a light burning an importance which has spread its fame from one end of the country to the other. I refer to the ghostly and alarming the wedding lately celebrated there.

Veronica Moore, rich, pretty and gifted, had always evinced a strange liking for this frowning old home of her ancestors, and on the occasion of legal time of her life, conceived the idea of giving herself and to the society at large that no real ban lay upon it save in the imagination of the superstitious. Hence, being about to marry the choice of her young heart, she decided that it should be opened for the wedding ceremony, with what results I know. Though the occasion was a joyous one and correspondingly gay, no one came to cheer to such a function, it had not escaped the old-time shadow. One of the guests was reminded by the scene of ancient and unhallowed memory, the other, more subtle, felt that, there thrown open to the crowd, had been found of the mysterious cause

ROSS' DESPERATE BID FOR VOTES.

AN OTTAWA LIBERAL JOURNAL GIVES THE TOTTERING CABINET SOME CANDID ADVICE.

A. J. Magurn, formerly of this city, a prominent Liberal, in his weekly Ottawa journal, Events, commenting on the "Proposed Ontario Liquor Law," says:

The Ross Government in Ontario is reported to be preparing a measure governing the traffic in liquor along the lines of the Scott Act. Besides this it is to say, the abolition of all bars and the withdrawal of all licenses throughout the whole province and the substitution of Government-controlled shops. It is understood that in cities and towns the number of such shops would be one for each ward. This would make, in Ottawa for example, eight shops where liquor would be dispensed and the consumption of it on the premises probably prohibited. That is to say, every one would be at liberty to purchase liquor by the pint or quart at such shops, but would have to take it home and consume it there. This, we have always contended, is a bad feature of such a system.

A question has arisen in the minds of some members of the Legislature as to whether the proposed legislation will establish barrooms would mean the banishing of the liquor from the bars. It is obvious that if the barroom is to be abolished, the license must be withdrawn and without a license the hotel will not be able to keep or sell liquor, or even to furnish to their guests with meals.

There can be no objection to denying that the cry of abolition of the barroom would be a popular one in Ontario, taking the population as a whole. It would be a popular one with a great many persons even in the cities. The men with well-balanced minds, with responsibilities, with practically the care of the whole people on their hands, are not in a majority at the polls. They never are and never will be. If a responsible Government is unbiased enough to bring in a measure for Ontario of the kind described, a political crisis must be looked for, and not a reason in the interests of the province, its development, its prosperity, its morality and its welfare. If the Ross Government introduces a measure of this kind, it is a bid for votes. It is not the measure of a united Cabinet. It is like all bad measures, a desperate one, and it would, in our opinion, be very much better for the Ross Government to fall with some dignity than to fall with a bid to grasp at votes which will not be delivered.

The general impression is that the Ontario Government ever came was after the introduction and passage of a measure of total prohibition, passed two years ago. We argued then that total prohibition in Canada could only be achieved through federal legislation, and we still believe that the provinces are perfectly helpless to do anything more than enforce a good license so better results would be obtained in Ontario if the present license law was enforced. The Legislature should enact that any man who sells liquor on Sunday should thereby forfeit his license—not that he should be fined and given another chance to break the law, but that it should be thereby put out of court that the first and single breach of such a law should be punished by the deprivation of the license. This would ensure an absolutely sober Sabbath, and we further believe that the license Inspectors themselves would be sufficient to agree to such an enforcement. As to experimenting in liquor legislation, it has a very doubtful effect on business. Superfluous shows that, as a rule, it does not accomplish the object aimed at.

Much better to prohibit the sale of liquor to a man under the age of 22 and require the license holder also to live up to this or forfeit his license. No Sunday sales, no sales to young men under 22 and no sales to drunkards, these strictly enforced would effect a great improvement.

HOW LORD 'BOBS" SAID GOOD-BYE TO WAR OFFICE

CHARACTERISTIC LEAVE-TAKING OF ENGLAND'S GREAT LITTLE SOLDIER.

(London Daily Mail.)

On Monday evening, Feb. 22, as a spare, short man, gray haired, and smartly dressed in civilian attire stepped alertly from the main entrance of the War Office, the stalwart sentry drew himself to attention and raised his rifle to the salute. The dapper little man, lifting his hand, acknowledged the salute, and passed on into the street. That was the last good-bye of Lord Roberts to the War Office.

No ostentation, no dramatic scene, marked the final departure of the great soldier. The farce of a hundred Lobbs said good-bye to his life's work with the outward complacency of a merchant's daily leave of his office. Dauntless fighter and gallant gentleman always, he observed in the last trying moments that same bravery and modesty which have continually distinguished him throughout his career of half a century.

And so—Good-bye to All!

The leave-taking began directly the new Army Council was announced and each day that has passed since then has seen some of his old friends and subordinates visit him, has provided opportunity for a parting grip of the hand. The chiefs of each department in the War Office, one and all, have been visited as a matter of course, but Lord Roberts found time also to say good-bye to most of his subordinates.

Little was said; there was too much feeling for many words. With those who had known his history, his and hers, fleent rule, admiration has been supplanted by affection. In the younger men there was to all something quaint in the sight of this little active figure in the overcoat walking along the dingy passages, seeking clerks and searching to say good-bye.

Hero of Many Fights.

The trim little figure in the overcoat had many historic, but at best the echoes of fame ringing throughout the world.

It is over 52 years ago that Second-Lieutenant F. S. Roberts first donned the uniform of the army. It took him nearly twenty to obtain his substantive majority, but in a little over six years after that he was a major-general.

Since his baptism of fire at Delhi in fighting days he has fought in seven great campaigns and over 50 battles in India, Afghanistan, Burmah, Abyssinia and South Africa.

Twenty times has he been mentioned in despatches and he has received the thanks of her late Majesty, the present King, the Governor-General and Government of India (three times) and of both Houses of the Imperial Parliament (twice).

He is a Earl, a Knight of the Garter, a Knight of St. Patrick, Knight Grand Cross of the Bath, Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India, Knight Grand Commander of the Indian Empire, has the Order of the Black Eagle, is a Field Marshal, and the holder of innumerable decorations and other minor orders and distinctions.

Why the Mexicans Call Us Gringos.

In the southwest, especially along the Mexican border, Mexicans are vulgarly called "greasers" by the American cowboys and miners. The Mexicans have retaliated by contemptuously referring to the Americans as "gringos," considerable that they are using a word of American origin first applied to themselves.

During the Mexican war the army of Santa Anna was composed mostly of Indian peons who could neither shoot, drill nor fight. To distinguish these irregulars from the regular Mexican troops the Americans called them "greenies," and the Mexicans, with their Latin pronunciation, converted it into "greenos," then "gringos." Later they applied it to those from whom they had first learned it, thinking it meant something especially bad.

Gunpowder Bags.

It is possible to weave a very attractive fabric—a regular novelty—from at least—out of ordinary gunpowder. The cloth looks very much like silk and when ignited instantly disappears without leaving a trace behind.

The fabric is used for making bags to hold gunpowder, which in this shape are looked into big guns. When the bags, made of canvas, as is customary, they are not consumed by the explosion, and what remains of them after firing has to be removed from the powder chamber of the weapon. But if gunpowder can be substituted for canvas the sack actually becomes part of the explosive charge, and no trace of it is left after the shot has gone.

Sound Enjoyment.

The spirit of modern life is to plunge into experiences vigorously and get the most out of them. This was the spirit that animated the man who preferred to hear Caruso sing rather than read a mere "clever to it." Similarly virile was the attitude of Mr. Skillings, who had just been to order a new family carriage.

"Now, I suppose you want rubber tires?" said the agent.

"No, sir," replied Mr. Skillings. "My folks don't mind the wind. When we're riding we want to know it."

Beginning Young.

The feminine instinct begins young. The little girl who never wore dress coat for the first time in an east wind was not thinking of the east wind. Her instinct knew, however, that she suggested that people who allowed their clonks to blow over their heads sometimes caught cold. "Oh, no, mother," observed her daughter complacently, "I've got a cetch cold when it's such a pretty lining!"

Snap Went the Trap.

"My father has always told me," began Edgar, "that pretty girls make the best wives, and I mean to—"

"You must be a girl who is not pretty at all, then," said Mr. Montgomery, "for home loving instincts, one who is unselfish and"—

"Oh, Mr. Montgomery—Edgar—this is so sudden, but you may ask papa!"

Ready to Growl.

Manager—We must put a great deal more life into the first scene. Can you get some one to growl so as to resemble a bear?- Assistant—I think so. There are six or seven stage hands who have not received their wages for three weeks. I'll call them.

An Unforgivable Fellow.

"I didn't close my eyes once last night."

"That so? Insomnia is a miserable thing, I must say."

"Oh, I slept all right enough. They used themselves."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS.

FUNNEL FOUNTAIN.

All You Need Is Just a Common Funnel and Some Water.

Boys always love to fuss with water or to watch a fountain play, and here is a sort of fountain and pump combined which is so simple that it would be a pity if any boy should be deprived through ignorance of the pleasure of seeing it work.

The apparatus needed is only a common tin funnel, the bigger the better. It is worked by plunging it, with the mouth down, in a bathtub or washtub half full of water. If you press the funnel down, you will find that the water under it, not being able to get out of the way quickly enough, will be pressed up into the funnel and because of the tapering form of the latter a jet of water will be forced out of the top. Lift up the funnel and will rise to a height that will surprise you. With a funnel which has a wide mouth and a small tube you can make a fountain ten feet high.

Of course you understand that the fountain does not play all the time, but that a jet shoots up each time you force the funnel down.

You see also that this is not a parlor entertainment. The trick should be done out of doors if possible. If not, you might try it in the bathroom or the laundry if you remember that it is neither necessary nor desirable to force the jet quite to the ceiling nor yet to make it shoot across the room.

SPOOL BUILDING.

Interesting Pastime For Ingenious Boys and Girls.

There is nothing more interesting for an ingenious boy or girl. Given a lot of spools and a ball of florists' wire, so much can be done that it is impossible to give a detailed description. To collect spools is a much easier job than the old fashioned practice of collecting buttons. Odd buttons are sometimes valuable in piecing out a set, but empty spools are usually thrown away. A person of experience can always collect them, and the smallest and most insignificant is not to be despised. The young architect can plan a house, and the builder of a suspension bridge can string his spools securely on wire and produce a complete and steady structure. Strong little tabarets may be made of them, and a solid wood disk for the table part; the spools may be used for the legs and rounds. The collector's ket may be made of them, strung one on top of the other, with a wooden bottom, and fitted with pegs and hooks. The smaller spools make pretty picture frames, especially if painted white or green. They may be used in a large set of ornamental ways, they may be collected from a dozen different sources, and there are many to whom a amusement for innumerable rainy days.

Cordial Greeting.

East is about four years old. He went fishing with his uncle the New York Mail and Express, in a small pond in the suburbs.

He tied a bent pin to the end of a long string and waited for the unsuspecting minnow to come along and bite. While he was waiting the nursemaid wandered away to exchange greetings with a friendly policeman. When she returned she said:

"East, dear, did you catch anything?"

"Es, Maggie," he answered. "I got a little cunning fish, and he was so glad to see me that he just wagged his tail like everything."

Mother Goose's Grave.

"Was there ever a real Mother Goose?" This is a question often asked by boys and girls.

Yes, there was, and she lived in Boston. Her grave is still to be seen in the old "Granary" graveyard, close to the old Park Street church, which is next to the famous Common.

Only a tiny headstone marks it, and on it are graven these words:

"Here lies Mary Goose, wife of Isaac Goose. Died 1690, aged 40."—Boston Herald.

The Moon Train.

A train comes nightly from the east
Across the country and the sea;
Its headlight is the big round moon,
Its smoke the clouds close by.

Those clouds of smoke across the train
I long to have appear;
I watch the train's brilliant light
That makes the path so clear.

The little sparks of stars fly out
Along the moon train's way,
I'd like to hear the engine puff,
And some bright night I may.

I'd like to see the passengers.
Perhaps a boy like me
Rides on the train to China now;
But, oh, I cannot see!

The splendid headlight blinds my eyes.
The train seems but to creep,
And long before it reaches here
In bed I'm fast asleep.

No Such Thing As Luck

In Successful Decorating

Successful decoration must be the outcome of study—of thought rather than of more chance.

In the chance room there will surely be something wrong.

Possibly the color. Perchance Drawing. — Likely both.

Whether Chamber, Drawing Room, Living Room, Library or Den, the room must be treated with thought of surroundings; of furniture of complexion, of lighting, of size.

The environment of a room with North or East exposure must not be blue, while either West or Southern exposure may use blue to advantage

How about Crimsons, Greens and Brown—where may these colors be used—just ask your decorator, if he is worthy the name he can tell you.

Or solicit your test of our ability on this or other decorative subjects.

The New Year.

Mr. Edgar Minter Leads in the following rather belated poem, which, perhaps, was delayed by the many snow blockades.

No new year dawns alike on rich and poor
Let us not turn the needy from our door
In God's sight surely all are one,
No matter how small fortune runs
Have we regrets and misgivings of the past
Or do our consciences reflections cast
How many Sabbaths have we spent in vain,
How many methods have we used for gain,
What little kindnesses withheld
Which should our very natures weld,
Day by day let us try to live more,
Day by day let us strive to live more true,
Before the new year comes again
God make us wiser, better men.
—EDGAR MINTER.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

There is every prospect of good fast ice to-morrow night, and the game between the locals and the Brockville rooters should be a good one. Don't miss it. This may be the last chance Bellevillians will have to see first-class hockey in a long time.

Toronto Marlboros took a scratch team to Peterboro last night and got beaten 20 to 4. They will have to chain the boys now, to keep them from going after the Stanley Cup.

The funniest break of the season comes from Midland, which is thus reported in The Globe: "The height of foolishness has been reached in a dispatch from Midland, which blames the O.H.A. for Midland's 5 to 0 defeat at Stratford. How was it done? Oh, easily enough, says the despatch. Only seven men a side should play, according to the rules, but the O.H. A. allowed Stratford to have eight men. Here they are: Edmunds, Lightfoot, Lloyd and Horn, on the forward line, with three defence men, "making a total of eight men," according to the arithmetic of the writer of the despatch. If that was not enough it is universally understood that the cup must not come north." The representatives from the northern district, the despatch says, are not responsible for allowing Stratford to play eight men and in general to "turn down Midland."

Globe: The Belleville Intelligencer thinks the Stanley Cup Hockey Court may in time decide that Belleville has a right to play for the O.H.A. intermediate championship. Just when that time will come is not very clear, but it is a fact, though, the same. And what will the O.H.A. do if the court decides that its action in regard to McMillan was illegal? Belleville will be in the position of a man robbed of its rights. What position will the O.H.A. executive be in?

It looks to be all off with the Brandons. The team which can beat Ottawa is not visible at present.

HOCKEY.

Ottawas Won First.

Ottawa, March 9. — "The pluckiest team that has yet tackled the Ottawas" was the unanimous verdict of over 2200 people who saw the Brandon hockey team battle at the Aberdeen Pavilion to-night for the Stanley Cup. It was a nice, clean, fast, scientific game, free from roughness, and gave a full measure of satisfaction to the big crowd. The visitors acquitted themselves well, but put up a good game, but not the kind that carries off the silverware.

The Brandon forwards were good on combination, but they did not play the same style of game as Ottawa. When the whistle blew for time the score stood Ottawa 6, Brandon 3. At half-time it was 3 to 2 for the home team, and five of the Ottawas put up one of the best games, and won much applause.

THE TRANSPORTATION COMMISSION.

WILL PROBABLY MEET AT PETERBORO ON MARCH 24th.

(Peterboro Review.)

The following letter from Mr. John Bertram, chairman of the Transportation Commission, has been received by His Worship Mayor Hall, and will be of interest since it relates to the approaching session of the Commissioners at this point:

34 Victoria St.,

Toronto, Ont., March 8th, 1904.

Hon. M. Hall, Esq., Mayor, Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Your favor of the 7th inst., received this morning, and in answer to your questions would say that the object of the Transportation Commission is to enquire into and report on the different routes of transportation from west to east and vice versa, the object being as far as possible to facilitate and cheapen the outflow of produce through Canadian territory; to do this we have to compare Canadian ports in transit, and the different routes by land and water to the St. Lawrence and maritime provinces ports.

It has been represented to the Commission that the Trent Valley Canal if completed would form the most direct and cheapest route whereby grain could be carried from Fort William to Montreal, and it is principally to hear evidence on this point that we propose to sit at Peterboro. No doubt if the Canal were finished, there would be incidental advantages to manufacturers and others in the district, and while giving due weight to any evidence offered on that point, it is more for the purpose of examining the general question that the Commission was constituted.

You quote universal opinion in the district that the best time to meet would be when the Canal is open during the summer—if such has to be taken up as the Commission can get at it, and while by no means will we force a meeting on the 24th of the month, if that date does not suit parties interested, the meeting can be postponed indefinitely. Yours very truly, (Signed) JOHN BERTRAM.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

NUPTIALS OF TWO POPULAR YOUNG TYENDINAGA PEOPLE LAST NIGHT.

A pretty home wedding occurred last evening at the home of Mrs. Thomas Grandon, Tyendinaga, when her second daughter, Miss Sarah J., was married to Mr. Wilbert Winters, also of Tyendinaga. Rev. Mr. Connor, of Shannonville, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large circle of friends. The bridesmaid was Miss Emma Grandon, sister of the bride, groom, and Mr. Wilbert Winters was groomsman. The wedding march was played by Miss Sadie Lennon. The bride wore a dress of white silk and carried a bouquet of white carnations, whilst the bridesmaid was gowned in white organdie and carried pink carnations. After the ceremony the wedding supper was partaken of. The couple left for the east and will visit Ottawa and Montreal. On their return they will go to their home in Tyendinaga. The groom is a brother of Mrs. A. J. Benson, of this city.

His Annual Visit.

Geo. Buskin, of the International Colportage Library, is making his 21st annual visit to Belleville on behalf of the work of disseminating the Holy Scriptures and Scripture Literature through the north-west districts. 2,350 copies were supplied last year by its agency in this district, and many cases sent to lumber camps for which thanks have been received from the men. 64 various editions of tracts and books have been published by the Bible Society for its work in Canada. A dictionary has also been published for the Ojibway Indians at a cost of $600. An indebtedness of $3,000 has aggrated during the past eighteen years which the missionary is very desirous to discharge. The depot at 202 King St. E., Toronto, is still kept continually open, and an improvement and enlargement of the work is necessary. The donations of Belleville last year in its behalf were $20.43, which the missionary gratefully acknowledges.

MRS. GEO. D. DICKSON DIES IN TORONTO.

SAD EVENT OCCURRED THIS MORNING—WAS A FORMER RESIDENT OF BELLEVILLE.

Mrs. Geo. D. Dickson, who was for many years a well known resident of Belleville, died this morning at Toronto. Deceased, whose maiden name was Miss Crawford, was born in the western portion of the province, but spent the greater part of her life here. A few years ago, after her husband's death, she removed to Toronto, where she had since resided. Mrs. Dickson was a member of the Anglican Church. A family of one, Angus, and three daughters, survive. The remains will be brought here on Saturday afternoon for interment.

Shirts, collars, cuffs are worn out during the time you do not wear them, that is while being washed. See that you save wear by using Lesaive Phenix. Nothing portrays more than a frayed collar or cuff. 9-2t

There is no grease, stickiness or other disagreeable feature about McKeown's Celery-Kola. It is concentrated healing. One bottle will cure. Thousand shakes. Costs 15c or 25c.

Amicably Settled.

We are informed that the differences of opinion which have for sometime been agitating St. Andrew's Church have been amicably settled, and at a recent congregational meeting it was decided to conform to the rules of the Presbytery, without, however, admitting the Presbytery's right to dictate to the congregation. It is likely that on Sunday, March 20, the pulpit of the church will be officially declared vacant.

Stricken With Paralysis.

Mr. John Gibson, who resides on Great St. James street, and who has been the subject of the city for a number of years, was last evening stricken with paralysis. His condition is serious.

ONTARIO NATURAL GAS.

Dr. Jessop of Lincoln Asks That Its Export Be Stopped, or That Dominion Government Put Duty On.

Toronto, March 10.—A discussion on the export of natural gas from Ontario took place in the Legislature yesterday afternoon. It was precipitated by Dr. Jessop's (Lincoln) motion:

"That, in the opinion of this House the Government of Ontario should at once memorialize the Government of Canada to prohibit the exportation of natural gas from Ontario into the United States of America, or failing that, to place an equitable export duty upon all natural gas exported."

The discussion was quite lively, and was participated in by Dr. Jessop, Hon. R. Harcourt, Messrs. Downey, Whitney, Beatnie, Auld, Carscallen, Hon. J. M. Gibson, and Hanna, who did not think the motion went far enough, and moved in amendment that the words be added:

"And that failing action by the Dominion Government, in the course of six months, the Government of the province cancel any license relating to the export of natural gas."

After Mr. Gross had spoken, Mr. St. John had an amendment to the amendment ready when the Premier moved the adjournment.

Name Law.

The questions on the order paper were not of absorbing interest. Mr. Downey learned that the revenue derived through the game warden of the province amounted in 1902-3 to $97,325.33 and the expenditure through the same channel was $62,267.85.

Mr. Pyne was informed that the crown prosecutor in a recent murder trial lived at Cobalt. He had acted in several Crown cases since 1899. Mr. Gibson thought everything possible had been done to bring out the facts in the Brantford murder case.

The Hamilton, London and Erie Railway Bill was given its first reading.

No Railway Subsidies.

Mr. Whitney rose to draw attention to the position taken by the Opposition in the matter of railway subsidies. They were against bills except in special cases. They had distinctly more than once declared that it was wrong and unfair to the House to be asked in the last week of the session to rush through these votes. He was not aware if it was to be the case this year that the Government should follow their policy of delay. They would vote against these subsidies for the simple reason that no information was afforded about them.

The Premier stated that information was to be collected on the grounds on which applications would be made and the evidence in the public service affected. In a day or two the return would be placed before the House. It did not follow that there might not be some later cases.

To Aid James Bay Railway.

Premier Ross and the members of his Cabinet received yesterday morning a deputation from the Town of Orillia and its vicinity, asking that the Government assist the construction of the James Bay Railway from Toronto to Sudbury. This is the third deputation received by the Government on the same mission this session. The deputation received the promise that the matter would be given due consideration by the Government.

ORANGEMEN IN SESSION.

Progress of the Year Exemplified in Reports of Officers.

Brantford, March 10.—The Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West opened here yesterday afternoon in Victoria Hall. The blockaded railways prevented a number of delegates residing on the routes of branch lines from attending. The Grand Master, John McMillan, in his address, referred with pleasure to the courtesy extended to him everywhere in the order.

Mr. Lee, the Grand Secretary, reported two new county lodges formed during the year, Sault Ste. Marie and Nipissing, and two new district lodges, Temiskaming and Thunder Bay.

The report of E. F. Clarke, M.P., Grand Treasurer, showed that, after paying all liabilities, the sum of $1,470 was still on hand.

Grand Master Sees Up.

Dr. Sproule, sovereign grand master of British America, telegraphed he would be unable to be present, owing to the snow blockade. Many other delegates are also unable to be present for the same reason.

Killed By Accident.

Peterboro, March 10.—The death of James Craig, a nephew of John Craig, postmaster of the Craig House, Lakefield, occurred yesterday morning under peculiar circumstances. Tuesday night, before retiring, he partook of a light lunch consisting of sardines. After he had eaten a small quantity he noticed a bitter taste and did not eat any more. He retired in his usual health, and slept for some hours, when he awoke, feeling unwell. A doctor was hastily summoned but Mr. Craig rapidly became worse, and died at 6 o'clock in the morning, death evidently being due to poisoning. The deceased was one of the most widely known men in the county.

Charities to Resign.

Cayuga, March 10.—It is stated that the Hon. John Charlton will resign his seat in the Commons, and that Hal. Doney will be his successor nominee in the consequent bye-election in North Norfolk.

May Not Be Granted.

Ottawa, March 10.—It is said that Ontario's application for a subsidy for the Temiskaming Railway will not be granted.

Died While Wiping Machine.

Hamilton, March 10.—The inquest on the death of Clarence Hall, the young man who was fatally injured in the wheel plant last Monday morning, was finished last evening. No one saw the accident, but the testimony of Hall's fellow workmen showed that he was wiping the machinery with some waste, which caught on a shaft and drew him in to the cog wheels. The jury found that death was purely accidental, and blamed no one.

ONTARIO MEN GET PRIZES.

Judging Continued at the Live Stock Show at Ottawa.

Ottawa, March 10.—The Central Canada first annual horse show was formerly opened by His Excellency the Governor-General in the Exhibition grounds yesterday. Upwards of 60 horses are being shown. Lord Minto regretted the existence of a tendency in Canada to be fastidious and careless about the selection of mares for breeding. It was all well enough to be particular in the choice of sires, but people here should be careful to pick the best dams, too.

Judging was continued at the live stock show yesterday afternoon. There was a good attendance, and the most of the fancy stock was bought at top-notch prices by Dairy Commissioner Ruddick.

Among the prize winners were: Shorthorns, Clydesdale stallions, imported—1, Smith & Richardson, Columbus, Ont.; 2, Robert Ness, Howick, Que.; 3, 4, 5, Smith & Richardson, Columbus; 6, John Hay, Lachine, Que.

Clydesdale Association Cup Sweepstakes, for imported Clydesdales—Robert Ness, Howick, Que. Thoroughbred horses, aged stallions—1, H. Thompson; 2, A. W. Clarke, Welboro. Young thoroughbred stallions —N. R. Sutherland.

Governor-General's prize, sweepstakes—Won by H. Thompson.

Hackneys—Aged stallion—1, Robert Beith, M.P.; Bowmanville; 2, Robert Ness, Howick; 3 and 4, John Hay, Lachine.

Young Hackney stallion—1 and 2, Robert Beith, M.P.

Standard-bred, aged stallion—R. W. Stewart; Aylmer; 2, J. W. McIntyre.

Young stallions—1, R. W. Stewart, Aylmer.

The principal winners in shorthorn cattle were: Hon. W. C. Edwards, Rockland; and James Rennie & Sons, Blackwater, Ont.

In Galways the prize money was taken by R. Reford, of Guelph, who had the whole class to himself.

In grade cattle, also, G. B. Hood of Guelph, and Robert Young and J. Penny divided the prize money.

In the class for three export steers the first money was won by Jos. Stone, and J. B. Hood of Guelph, in second and third places.

The sweepstakes prize in cattle was won by Robt. Young.

JAPS DEFEAT RUSSIANS

Collision Occurred Near Hailu, Corea, Northwest of Chemulpo.

Japanese Are in Force 70 Miles East of Newchwang, After Having Driven the Russians Out of Pyengyang—Japs Little Fellows Are Well West of the Yalu—No Idea of Mediation—Significant Silence Regarding Vladivostock.

London, March 10.—A despatch to The Times from Wei-Hai-Wei, dated March 9, says: "It is reported on good authority that a collision between Japanese and Russian troops has occurred near Hailu, Corea (50 miles northwest of Chemulpo), which resulted in the defeat of the Russians."

Significant Silence.

London, March 10.—Up to a late hour last night the Japanese Legation had heard nothing of fighting at Port Arthur or of the Russian Vladivostock squadron. It is considered significant that none of the Russian officials despatches make any mention of the Vladivostock cruisers. The news from Washington of the appearance of the Japanese forces at Pungyangkang is regarded as important.

According to the Tientsin correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, the Japanese advanced from the Yalu River, captured Pyengyang and drove out the Russians in the vicinity of the Pyengyang coal mines, and are in force 70 miles east of Newchwang. The Russians with 75,000 men are entrenched strongly at Liaoyang and Haitcheng, where fighting is imminent. Some small engagements already have been fought, the Russians retiring with losses. This correspondent says further that the Japanese are using the same tactics and advancing along the same route they followed during the Chinese war.

Japs Well West of the Yalu.

The Yinkow correspondent of The Paris edition of the New York Herald also vaguely reports the Japanese to be in force at Pyengyang and Antung and well to the eastward of the Yalu River. Some of the military critics it is inconceivable that Japan can really have executed such an extended and successful turning of the Russian position on the Yalu River, which is thought would have necessitated the employment of a large force than Japan has at her command. It is believed that Japan can possibly have at this point.

The London Telegraph says that if the news of this strange and marvellous movement is confirmed the mistake is true, there is nothing to prevent the Japanese from entering Mukden and the railroad. There has been nothing to compare with this move since Napoleon's campaigns in Europe by appearing in the plains of Italy, than the Japs. Its effect throughout the east will be stupendous.

Rumors of mediation in the Far East continue to circulate, but exactly the British Government has no idea that mediation is possible. Foreign Secretary Lansdowne, replying to a letter on this subject, which suggested mediation under the Geneva convention, said His Majesty's Government feared that such an offer could not usefully be made to the belligerents at the present time.

Under date of March 9, a correspondent of The Times at Tokio says: The Russian advance south of Possiet Bay continues.

Japs on Russian Flank.

Washington, March 10.—The Government has received advices by cables from the Peo, expressing fear Antung, to the effect that Japanese land forces have appeared at Pungyangchang and at Taiping. Both points are furnished. The first named is about 45 miles north of Antung in Manchuria, and the latter is a few miles inland from the mouth of the Yalu river, according to the calculation of the naval officers here. It is believed that this movement has placed the Japanese on the Russian flank and perhaps in the rear and on their line of communications. It is believed that Tuesday's attack on Port Arthur by Japanese torpedo division perhaps to cover this movement of the Japanese forces which were probably landed from transports in some point west of the Yalu River.

Fight East of Newchwang.

Yinkow, March 10.—The British consul strongly and officially urges the foreign women and children to leave Newchwang before the river opens. The British station gunboat Algerine left here yesterday for Chefoo, and the Russian gunboat Manchuria will not be replaced. The family of the United States Consul-Mr. Miller, leaves to-morrow.

The tension among Russians also continues. There are circumstantial native reports of fighting east of the railroad, and there is growing evidence of a Japanese advance.

Russian Torpedo Lost.

Tokio, March 10.—It is reliably asserted that when the Japanese attempted to block the entrance on Feb. 24, a Russian torpedo boat destroyer, while trying to re-enter the harbor, struck a mine and sank. Of the 13 Russian warships inside the harbor at Port Arthur on Feb. 9, not all are disabled except five. Finally, it is reported, that Vladivostock fort, at Port Arthur, was half destroyed by the Japanese shells, and that only three battleships are available. About 800 Chinese and Russian workmen are busily mending the repairs on the warships.

Japs Attack Vladivostock.

Port Arthur, March 10.—It is rumored here to-day that a Japanese squadron has appeared off Vladivostock.

Main in Hull Repaired.

Port Arthur, March 10.—The hole in the hull of the Russian battleship Retvizan, which was made during the first attack by the Japanese, has been repaired and the battleship has been refloated.

MR. SPEAKER BELCOURT

Junior Member For Ottawa Now First Commoner of Canada.

Chief Justice Taschereau Acts As Deputy-Governor, and Capt. Chambers Gets His Initial Performances As Black Rod—Eight Liberal Members Who Have Accepted "Offices of Emolument Under the Crown"—Opening To-day.

Ottawa, March 11.—There was no lack of ceremony in the proceedings which began at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and ended half an hour later with the election of Napoleon A. Belcourt, junior member of Ottawa, to the Speakership of the House of Commons. Capt. Chambers, the new gentleman usher of the black rod, broke in upon a fairly well filled House of jocular members a few minutes after 3 o'clock and summoned them to wait on the Deputy Governor, Chief Justice Elinor Taschereau, in the Senate Chamber. He was received with the good-natured tolerance that his predecessors in office enjoyed. With somewhat less elaborate bows, nervous English and halting French, he made his little speech and retired.

Deputy-Governor Told Them Why.

The Commoners followed him to the Senate, where Sir Elinor Taschereau briefly related the circumstances under which the two Houses has assembled. He gave due and formal notice of the intention of the Governor-General to open Parliament to-day. It was a case of Col. Smith, Sergeant-at-Arms, marching his House over to the Senate and then marching them back again. The return trip was accomplished in less than ten minutes.

The members were hardly settled in their seats when Sir Wilfrid Laurier entered the Chamber. He looked considerably stronger than when the House convened last year. There was more spring to his step and more firmness in the carriage of his shoulders. Applause from both sides of the House greeted the Premier's arrival.

A Busted Liberal Principle.

The Clerk of the House took it on himself to read a list of members who had retired from the House since the last session of Parliament and those who had been reelected. In no less than eight cases the explanation supplied for the retirement of a member was "to accept an office of emolument under the Crown." These announcements were greeted by many "Oh, oh's," and "hear, hear" from the Opposition benches.

They made Sir William Mulock look the least bit uncomfortable. In the less happy days of the Liberal party Sir William was a fierce assailant of the custom of giving members of Parliament offices of emolument under the Crown. He went so far ah to frame a bill aiming at the suppression of the evil. Since then, he has not pushed his conscientious scruples in this direction.

A Notable Eight.

The mention of Fraser, Carroll and Maclure, who dropped their seats for judgeships called forth the weight of Opposition merriment. Blair and Bernier ran a close second. The other three, Emmerson, Brodeur and Lemieux, who have been elevated to the Cabinet ranks, provoked no demonstration of any kind from the Opposition benches, and mighty little from the Government side of the House. Emmerson was clearly the favorite. The re-elected ministers then entered the Chamber and took their seats. The newly elected members will make their bows to-day.

The Conservatives cheered vociferously when the Clerk read out the names of Daniels, Armstrong and Donnelly, victors in St. John, East Lambton and East Bruce. As a retaliating measure the Liberals cheered the announcement of the Governor's victory in Quebec and Prince Edward Island.

Mr. Speaker Belcourt.

In a very few words Sir Wilfrid Laurier proposed N. A. Belcourt for the position of Speaker. He spoke in terms of sincere appreciation of the retiring speaker, Mr. Brodeur, and hoped that Mr. Belcourt would be equally successful in upholding the honor and the dignity of the House. R. L. Borden shared the confidence which the Premier reposed. Sir Wilfrid's motion was then put to the House. It was unanimously adopted. Sir Wilfrid then offered his arm to the new Speaker and escorted him to the chair of the first commoner of the land.

Speaker Belcourt returned his thanks first in French and then in English, with the indulgence of the House, and the examples of his predecessor, said he hoped to be able to give satisfaction in the Speaker's chair.

Tarte in Opposition.

Hon. John Costigan sat on the Government side of the House for the first time since 1896, in the seat formerly occupied by J. Israel Tarte. Mr. Tarte was not in the House yesterday, but it is understood that he will have a seat among the Opposition members. F. D. Monk came to the Capital at noon yesterday, but he did not go near the Commons Chamber. His accustomed seat beside R. L. Borden is reserved for him.

Just before the House adjourned Mr. Borden asked if the papers relating to the Alaskan Boundary award, and which were promised last session, had yet been printed. The Premier replied that some of the papers were in the printer's hands, and another batch of them would be brought down next week.

Tax Horse Reaching Out.

New York, March 11.—Sir William Van Horne conferred with Secretary of War Taft yesterday. The possibilities of steam and electric railways in the Philippines.

GRAND MASTER SCOTT.

Orangemen at Brantford Elects Officers—Some of the Order's Plans.

Brantford, March 11.—The Grand Lodge of Orangemen of Western Ontario concluded its sessions here last night. In the afternoon a proposition was submitted by a special committee that a plan of sick and funeral benefits be established in connection with the order. All details were explained by the committee. During the next few weeks the various lodges will discuss the matter. The committee endorsed the scheme, and it is likely to be brought into force by the order.

Considerable excitement was caused by the election of officers. The new grand master, Lieut.-Col. Scott, of Galkerton, got in by acclamation, but there were lively contests for most of the other offices. However, the gathering was a most pleasant and creditable one throughout. The meeting next year will be held in Midland.

Went a Good Thing.

London, March 11.—Lord Strathcona, in referring to the recent remarks in the House of Lords, says it has sometimes occurred to him that it would be a good thing if the members of the House of Lords should have imposed upon them something in the nature of a test with regard to their knowledge of the outlying portions of the Empire. It would be a good thing for both the Mother Country and the colonies.

Four Burned in Gasoline Fire.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 11.—Four unidentified men were burned to death in a box car containing gasoline, which caught fire, ten miles east of this city, yesterday. Two others barely escaped with their lives.

Kite Flying Disastrous.

Toronto, March 11.—Quentin Crawford was last night found guilty by the sessions' jury of conspiracy to defraud the Bank of British North America. He got into the trouble through "Kite flying" cheques.

Storm Rages in the West.

Winnipeg, Man., March 11.—A very severe March storm raged through Manitoba Wednesday. Trains were tied up yesterday at several points. The snowfall is the heaviest of the winter.

Cracked Safe For $300.

Mallorytown, March 11.—Thieves broke into the postoffice here and stole $300 in cash Wednesday night. The safe was cracked.

TOLD IN A FEW LINES.

Glasgow University will confer the honorary LL.D. on United States Ambassador Choate.

The Japanese in San Francisco have raised, it is said, $260,000 for a patriotic fund, and the Pacific Coast States are also collecting funds.

The University of Vienna has been closed, the German students having threatened reprisals against the Czechs for their demonstrations at Prague.

The Province of Manitoba has retained Right Hon. Richard Borden Haldane, leader of the Appeal Court of England, as counsel in the swamplands appeal to the Privy Council.

Protection For Stock.

Ottawa, March 11.—The National Stock Breeders' Association waited on Hon. Mr. Fisher (to-day the Hon. Mr. Sifton yesterday and presented the resolutions passed by the convention, and which have been published before. In reply Hon. Sydney Fisher said the resolutions presented would be carefully considered, and whatever was possible to do to protect and foster the live stock interest of the country would be done. Mr. Sifton spoke briefly, saying that he would be glad to co-operate with his colleague, Mr. Fisher, in doing what he could to protect the live stock interests.

TIME SOMETHING WAS DONE.

It is to be deplored that Lord Rosebery was perfectly correct when he stated recently that no Legislature in Canada outside of Manitoba has yet passed a resolution supporting Hon. Mr. Chamberlain's preferential trade policy. The Parliament of Canada should have endorsed the policy during last session. True, Mr. Borden did all that was possible to induce the Premier to introduce such a resolution, or to pledge the Government support to one proposed by a private member. Sir Wilfrid Laurier would then only have supported the programme for which he voted in the Colonial Conference of Premiers, and which he then promised to promote in Canada. As the Premier has evidently been influenced in the other direction by Mr. Bourassa and his comrades, Mr. Borden would do well to go forward the session on his own account, taking the risk of the defeat of his motion.

Then, as the St. John Sun points out, there are other Legislatures. The Nova Scotia House has prorogued without expressing an opinion, but the New Brunswick Legislature is just meeting and that of Ontario is in session. The taunt of Lord Rosebery should find its answer before many days.

In the meantime Mr. Chamberlain can point to resolutions adopted by Boards of Trade in nearly all the larger cities in Canada.

A DRUMMOND COUNTY RAILWAY SENATOR.

Some people may not know that Mr. William Mitchell, of Drummondville, Quebec, recently appointed to the Senate, is one of the men who sold the Drummond Counties Railway to the Government of Canada. The parties who made this sale bought an option on the road and then regulated the sale at a price which gave them several hundred per cent. on their investment. Whether Mr. Mitchell's appointment to the Senate is a reward for the above "sharp" transaction is not stated in the Government organs.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Doesn't it give you a pain to wake up these mornings and see the frost on the pane?

What we need, and need badly, is hot air. Will the West Ontario Reform Association kindly make a note?

If the backbone of winter don't break pretty soon we'll have to blast it.

Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise won't be a marker to the Lord Mayor's ball given by the Toronto Sunday-school Association every day in the week, but Rev. Mr. Moore, being a member of the Lord's Day Alliance, would not go in Sunday cars, preferring to drive the distance through a rainstorm. Some certain Philistines are scarifying Rev. Mr. Moore for what they term his inconsistency, and say that by driving a dumb animal over bad roads through a rainstorm he laid himself liable to prosecution by the Humane Society. The Philistines in question seem to forget that consistency is a jewel, and that Rev. Mr. Moore, being a clergyman, does not wear jewellery, especially during Lent. The matter in question is one which would admit of many differences of opinion, though there seems hardly any doubt at all that, had the preacher's horse, like Balaam's ass, been enlowed with the power of speech, it would have up lifted up its voice and advised its reverend driver to stop splitting hairs and take the electric car. However, Rev. Mr. Moore saved his principles, even though he may have thrown chances of injuring his horse and his health.

The Japs have got the war correspondents bottled up now, but they won't be able to hold them. No newspaper man ever goes to the front without a corkscrew.

The prophecies of an early spring this year have proved false, as, compared with last year, this spring is going to be late. That the same conditions prevail elsewhere as in Belleville may be gathered by the following from the Toronto Examiner, which, in comparing this spring with that, says: "Last year the robin was seen in the city on the 4th; by the 12th it had completely disappeared in the country. The skunk was in full flood on the 10th. The first robin was seen this year on the 12th, and were plentiful after the 17th. Blackbirds arrived on the 16th. Roads began to get dry on the 18th, and on the following day bicycles were on the streets. Watering carts were out on the 21st. Swallows did not arrive until April 17th."

Oswego Times: If Lord Nelson were in command of the Russian fleet in the East there would be no such one-sidedness in the matter of initiative as the world has been witnessing there. The sank would be the motto and the foe that escaped without seeing would be different from any foe he ever met. The Russians were caught napping, what never could be said of Nelson, and appear to lack sand when awake.

That's all right, of course, but isn't it strange to hear a Yankee newspaper praising Nelson, while hurling down Dewey, whose deeds were said by them to have completely eclipsed those of England's naval hero, now "gets a hand" at all? Wonders will never cease!

The first robin has been seen in Hamilton, but then Hamilton is popularly supposed to be next door to a warm place.

Some of our local hotelkeepers, who are charged with violations of the Liquor law, can thank their stars they are not in the predicament of a Dallas, Texas, saloonkeeper who surely has a few troubles of his own just now. The Grand Jury has found 1,147 indictments against him for violations of the Liquor law. The cases are clear and his fines will amount to $75,000, while he will also be liable to sixty-three years' imprisonment.

The latest rumor is that Stratton will succeed Ross as Premier. Forget it! Forget it!

Toronto Saturday Night Printing Co. was paid $900 for advertising the advantages and beauties of the asylums and prisons of the province. No wonder Saturday Night finds much to admire in Ross and his colleagues, and has never a good word for Whitney.

Some of our citizens say they have already seen robins, but as yet there is no justification for the home-coming robin.

A pleasant incident occurred yesterday at the session of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West, at Brantford. A report says:

"At 11 o'clock Mayor Halloran, a Roman Catholic, with Ald. Leigh and Brewster, was given an enthusiastic reception on opening to present an address. The Mayor said they regarded the Order as a body of men organized to maintain civil and religious freedom. They wished the Grand Orange Lodge and continued prosperity."

Good for Mayor Halloran; the world needs more broad-minded men such as he.

COUNTY COUNCILS ACT.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT'S AMENDMENT TO LAW OF LAST SESSION.

Premier Ross introduced in the Legislature on Wednesday a bill to amend the County Councils Act. It alters the Act of last session along the line indicated by the Premier when bringing the bill down to a deputation of municipal representatives. Instead of giving Township Councils alone the power to abolish the present system of constituting County Councils by the election of representatives for county divisions, it provides that upon a majority of the Township and Village Councils voting in favor of changing the system the County Council shall submit a by-law to the electors at the next County Council election. If carried, the old plan of forming County Councils will be the system, but only by Reeves and Mayors shall constitute them, and not by Deputy-Reeves.

(The amendment will not be operative until January, 1906, so no County Council elections will be held before then.

THE RAILWAY BLOCKADE.

NOW NEARLY TWO WEEKS SINCE A TRAIN REACHED BANCROFT.

The northern portion of the Central Ontario Railway line is still blocked. On Wednesday morning a train left Trenton intending to reach Bancroft, but up to last evening it had only got as far as Springbrook and much difficulty was experienced in reaching that place. The road is said to be filled up with ice and snow to a depth of four feet in many places. It is now nearly two weeks since a train has been able to reach Bancroft, and during that period but little mail has been received in the village.

HARD TIMES AND CRIME PREVAIL IN SOUTH AFRICA

SO SAYS A RETIRED VETERAN OF THE LATE WAR — BOERS ARE ONLY HALF-HEARTED IN ATTEMPT TO REBUILD HOMES.

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

"Thousands of men who went to South Africa after the close of the war expecting to find good times and opportunities for making wealth easily are now walking the streets of Johannesburg and other cities penniless and idle," said W. J. Barber, of Moosomin, who reached Winnipeg yesterday on his return from the land where he fought the Boers.

Mr. Barker served in the South African campaign with the Strathcona Horse and the second C.M.R., and after peace was restored he settled in Johannesburg, where he found remunerative employment.

"For all the openings that were to be found," said he, "there were more than enough men, who, like myself, had fought in the war and wanted to stay in the country, but they came in by thousands from Australia and the United States and many of them did not have the pluck, when they found no engagement to stay, to pay their way back again. The result of this great over supply of labor was less remuneration for work in nearly all lines, and I got tired of it."

Speaking about South Africa in general Mr. Barker said he considered it at present at undesirable living place for anyone who had known the pleasures of life in Western Canada. The farming industry was yet demoralized and the Boers who had returned to their farms were only half-hearted in their attempts to rebuild their homes. Those who returned to houses that were wrecked in the war were satisfied with a few rough patches on the walls that were barely sufficient to make them habitable.

"The country, especially the cities," continued Mr. Barker, "is overrun with law-breakers, and the authorities have no end of hard work in keeping down crime and punishing criminals. It is a wonderful sight to see the contents march out to the mines in the morning or return at night. There are enough of them in each day's procession to make an enormous regiment. Hundreds strong they are marched through the principal streets on their way to work and back again. There are a great many natives doing time, but they are not by any means in the majority in that business in Johannesburg."

THE SPRING MILLINERY.

All sizes and shapes of hats are seen, but if there is one more in favor than another, it is the jaunty little trianone, which is particularly adapted to military effects. It is shown in various kinds of straw, in lace, tulle and even in flowers. So generally becoming is the shape that many are loth to give it up for ever whims of fashion. A white straw braid having fine gold threads in the weave is a novel one. Some pagne-colored straw is one of the season's favorites, and is seen in dressy as well as plain effects. The red hat threatens the popularity of the violet creation that has been, from time immemorial, the harbinger of spring. Many smart hats are fashioned from chenille and hair lace mixed with fancy straws, arranged in alternate rows, and frequently varying in color.

Hidden flowers and those that are fashioned from straw are among the novelties for decorating the spring headgear. Many of those floral trimmings closely resemble the natural blossoms, while others bear no resemblance except in form, but are none the less effective. Lace that is fine and thin will be fashioned into bonnets this season, and there is a revival of the Oriental lace, but it is of a handsomer variety and finer mesh. Cerre lace is another of the thin varieties that is in favor, and Chantilly is effectively employed in both black and white.—From The Delineator for April.

Orders for bookbinding should be left at this office. It is surprising how nice a volume can be made of those magazines, even though they are somewhat soiled from much handling. Books, magazines or periodicals bound or rebound in any style at very reasonable prices. Blank books, such as journals, ledgers, day books, with any kind of ruling, made to order. All work warranted first-class. THE INTELLIGENCER, Belleville.

Gun Barrels From Nails.

Horseshoe nails kicked about the roads of the world by horses hammered into all sorts of useful articles are far from the useless fragments we might think them. Gunmakers tell us there is no iron so well fitted for their purpose as that derived from horseshoe nails and stiffer wire from fields. The nails, made originally of the best stuff obtainable, receive from the constant pounding of the horse's feet on hard surfaces a peculiar annealing and toughening, making them a most perfect substance for the manufacture of the finest gun barrels.

Illusions of the Theater.

It is a most polite, whether women should be taken to the theater at all at a young and impressionable age, seeing in what a totally unreal light the modern young man is presented by the average dramatist. Behind the footlights the handsome, clean shaven fellow has principles as unimpeachable as his dress clothes, a soul as speckless as his dazzling waistcoat.—London Ladies' Field.

Somewhat Confusing.

"So that heiress married a titled foreigner?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne.

"How do they get on?"

"It's a little confusing at yet. Whenever she wants to know who the distinguished members of her family are she has to ask him, and whenever he wants to know how much he is worth he has to ask her."

Business.

"How shall I prove the sincerity of my devotion?" asked the young man who had been so long coming to the point that doubt had begun to accumulate against him.

"Call the parson in as a witness," suggested the young lady, who meant business.

End of Their Engagement.

Gee—It was rather abrupt the way Tom broke his engagement with Miss Easy. Whiz—How did he do it? Gee—He simply took her hand in his and, examining the diamond, said: "Ring off!"

NO DIFFERENCE.

No distinction is made as to the kind of Piles that Hem-Roid cures.

The names Internal, External, Bleeding, Blind, Itching, Suppurating, etc., are simply names of the different stages through which every case will pass if it continues long enough.

Piles are caused by congestion or stagnation of blood in the lower bowel, and it takes an internal remedy to remove the cause.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid is a tablet taken internally.

It is a permanent cure and no case of Piles has ever been found it failed to cure.

A Turkish Love Story.

Do the Turks love their women? Yes, both in life and in death. In life, read the love songs and in death the epitaphs to the beloved ones passed to the silent realm.

It is true the Turk goes to the Arabic, the Greek, the Italian, for love songs, but he sings these to his lady's eyebrows, and the story he tells of the quality of his love rises to the purity of the heavens.

One knocked at the beloved's door, and a voice answered from within, "Who is there?"

Then he answered, "It is I."

Then the voice said, "This house will not hold thee and me."

And the door was not opened.

Then went the lover into the desert, where there is nothing but Allah, and fasted and prayed in solitude.

And after a year he returned and knocked again at the door.

And again the voice asked, "Who is there?"

And he said, "It is thyself."

And the door was opened to him.

Match that in your Vedantas if you can.

Waking the Sleepers.

In a diary kept in 1646 is it asserted that "Allen Bryddes has been chose to wake the sleepers in meeting and, being much proud of his place, must needs have a fox taile fixed to the end of a long staffe, wherewith he may brush the faces of them that will have naps in time of discourse." This energetic individual was likewise armed with "a sharpe thorne" for the benefit of those who "be most sounde." There is a record of the sight of this unplanned upon Mr. Tomkins, who was sleeping comfortably in the corner of his pew when Allen "thrust his staff behind Dame Ballard to give him a grievous prick upon the head, whereupon Mr. Tomkins did spring much above the floor and with terrible force did strike his head against the wall and also to the great wonder of all 'prophanelle' exclaim in a loud voice, 'Thou the woodchuck!' he dreaming, as it seemed, that a woodchuck had seized him and bit his hand."

Eskimo Tastes.

There is certainly no accounting for tastes, and surely the strangest is that of the Eskimos. Tallow is their candy. It is put up in bright red packages made out of the feet of waterfowl. The women cut off the red feet of this bird, which is called the dovekie, draw out the bones and blow up the skin so as to make pouches, which they fill with the reindeer tallow for their little folk.

None of the food that the Eskimos eat seems very inviting to us, but they are extremely fond of it and are very apt to overeat. It is said by explorers who have gone into Greenland that it is no uncommon sight to see an Eskimo man who has eaten an enormous meal of the raw, frozen flesh of the reindeer, seal or walrus lying on his back and eating blubber until he cannot move.

A Love Charm.

A young woman who thought she was losing her husband's affection went to a seventh daughter of a seventh daughter for a love powder. The mystery woman told her:

"Get a raw piece of beef, cut fat, about an inch thick. Slice an onion in two and rub the meat on both sides with it. Put on pepper and salt and toast it on each side over a red coal fire. Drop on it three lumps of butter and two sprigs of parsley and get him to eat it."

The young wife did so, and her husband loved her ever after.

Couldn't Get Away.

"My dear," said the physician's wife, "why don't you take a good long rest? Go away somewhere and enjoy yourself. You're working yourself into the grave. You haven't been out of town for five years."

"My dear," the celebrated practitioner said, "I dare not leave. If I did so most of my patients would discover that they could get on just as well without me, and my practice would be ruined."

Sometimes the Light Is Good.

"But you are not always bothered with poor light, are you?" inquired the complaint clerk at the gas office.

"Oh, no, not always," replied the quiet citizen.

"Ah, I thought so. It's only at certain times that you notice it, eh?"

"Yes; only after dark."

Vexing Delay.

"Our new company is capitalized at $40,000,000."

"Great! Let me see your prospectus."

"Oh, we haven't got out a prospectus yet. The—er—the darned printer wants his pay in advance."

A Promising Camp.

One of the most promising districts in British Columbia is that lying about the thriving city of Kamloops, B.C. The unlimited resources of the Pacific province are shown here in all variety; Grazing lands, where thousands of cattle live and grow fat on the nutritious bunch grass; fruit lands in the valleys, farm lands on the benches, and mining lands on the mountains with good transportation facilities, an enterprising community and a glorious climate, will make the Kamloops district.

A large amount of progress has been made in all lines, but the riches to be wrested from nature's treasury vaults in gold and silver and copper attract most attention. As a mining camp the district has not been boomed by the unscrupulous promoter but development has gone on quietly until to-day it is proved beyond a doubt that in all the rich mentals of the great Dominion, Kamloops is second to none. The Cherry Creek Copper King mines, whose advertisement appears in another column, have secured one of the most promising properties in the camp, which was secured on very favorable terms. John Redmon, M.E., in his annual report on the camp, says:

"This group of claims, which is well known, possess some promising features. Extensive workings on the continuation of the Iron Mask lead. The following extract from the Company's prospectus fairly describes the ore body and is conservative description:

"The veins on the 'O.K.' which have been opened up by surface work and a shaft east and west at the 60-foot level is a true fissure about 90 feet in width at the shaft. The strike of the lead is northeast and southwest, with a dip to the southeast of about 30 degrees. The ore bodies are lenticular, occurring throughout the vein filling. From these lenses a high-grade pyrite copper ore assaying from 10 per cent. to 10 per cent. copper and from $4 to $8 in gold is taken. A sampling of the fissure where exposed in the shaft on a pay average of 12.60 per cent. copper and $6.75 in gold.

"A parallel vein on the Prince Charles has been opened up by a small shaft and a good body of medium grade pyrites ore uncovered. The extent of this body is apparently large but must be proved by further development. Average assays of this body give 70 per cent. copper and $6.75 in gold.

The company embraces some of the most responsible and successful business men of the Interior, and in setting forth its plans with a view to bringing forward its property to the most prominent mining enterprises."

A perusal of their advertisement will show the plan for securing the shareholders.

THE GREAT EASTERN STOCK Co.

The Underprice Store

Can it be Done

Truly good bargains benefit both parties, seller and buyer.

Great Enterprises dependent upon public support must have public service as their basic principle.

These statements may seem a trifle toplofty. You'll possibly think them advertising bombast, but they are printed with a serious purpose and by common consent this store shall become the leading place in the development of modern retailing. Public confidence is becoming fixed and some service to the intelligent people must underlie this confidence.

Intelligent comprehension of our task of course inspires the service rendered.

Good understanding with our public is most hopeful and to make the understanding clear we must have clean advertising and in this way state a few of our notions.

First—To cheapen the cost of Merchandising.

2nd—To promote facility of trading by concentration of great stocks.

3rd—To save the time of purchasing.

4th—To benefit employees by giving them better values, thereby making this the economic trading centre of Belleville and you may feel assured that this store will be full of comfort to the small purse and economic spirit.

Interesting or Nothing

Do you think of the Underpriced Store ?

What do you think of the Underpriced Store ?

It is bad for us if you think ill of us.

It is worse for the Underprice Store if you don't think at all.

These axioms being true, the Underprice Store is nothing if not interesting.

NEW ATTRACTIONS—Silk Skirts, New Shirt Waists Dress Goods, Laces, Gloves, in fact there is an arrival of good things daily for the snappy buyer.

New Arrival of Goods Daily.

And you should visit this storm centre for economic buying at every shopping time, or miss the best genuine bargains to be found. Bad freighting has delayed many goods but we are showing more fine things, more low priced things, more exactly up-to-date things on each succeeding day, here shall appear authoritative styles as fast as conditions shall permit, and it will be worth a ride of many miles to feast your eyes on a store full of Underprice Merchandise.

This week the store has grown doubly brilliant with new things, delightful to view, gratifying to possess, and this store is yours for pleasure and if your pleasure reaches a desire for possession of the merchandises shown, we are doubly gratified of course, however if you are not a purchaser we want you to come anyway as bargains are always in evidence and we recognize the first impression a customer on entering this store must have is sincerity of purpose on our part, also we recognize that a few crumbs of comfort may be gathered here and there, but if you want a whole loaf of satisfaction buy here. Nuff Sed.

The Clever Brahman.

Speaking of the great power the Brahmans in India possess in localizing thought, a prominent Brahman said recently: "We would consider a game of chess as played in this country mere child's play. An ordinary Brahman chess player could carry on three or four games at a time without interference. The usual game played by the Brahmans consists in checkmating with one pawn designated when the play begins. I have seen a man perform a long problem in multiplication and division, at the same time noting the various sounds and discussions going on about him in the room. I have seen a man compose a triple acrostic in Sanskrit in a given meter, at the same time having three well versed men trying to overthrow him in his argument on religion."

A Great Old Man.

One Henry Jenkins died in England Dec. 6, 1670, at the alleged age of 169 years. He is said to have been a fisherman for 140 years. Though he could neither read nor write, his reach of memory was such that he would relate by the evidence in court in matters in which his memory went back 120 and 140 years. And why he is said to have taken a horse load of arrows to Northallerton to be forwarded north in time for the battle of Flodden. At the age of 100 years he used to swim a wide stream in Yorkshire with ease. He lived until four years after the great fire of London, was poor all his life, but endured cheerfully by thatching and salmon fishing.

Sandy's Reasoning.

A lady meeting her gardener in the grounds said to him: "Sandy, I am surprised that you do not marry. You have got a free house, coals and gas, also a weekly wage of 30 shillings, so I think all you want to complete your happiness is a wife."

And to lend weight to her argument she added, "Adam, who was the first gardener, was given a wife."

"True for ye, ma'am," replied Sandy, "but he hadn't her long till he lost his job."—London Tit-Bits.

Civilized and Enlightened.

Teacher—Can you tell me the difference between civilized and enlightened peoples? Boy—My dad says civilized nations manage to get along all right if they are let alone, but that enlightened nations know enough not to let the civilized nations alone.

His Other Cheek.

"When an enemy smites me," said the pious looking hypocrite, "I always turn the other cheek."

"Why," asked the man who knew him, "do you want your enemy to go around with both hands disabled?"

TIMELY TOPICS.

No wireless message from Mr. Johnson to-day; must be electrical disturbances in the air.

Nobody in this vicinity seems to be worrying very much over that proposed Liquor Bill of Rose's. But then the Hon. Geo. W. has tried to fool both sides too often.

It would be quite an idea, though, if people had to buy their malt extract from a Government official in each ward, and would, in Belleville, supply jobs for seven more members of the West Hastings Reform Association. The Fishery Inspector would be busier than ever for a time.

A local factory has received a large order for doors and windows for the Point Anne cement works, which, we hear, are to rush operations when the gentle springtime comes.

IS IT CURABLE?

A QUESTION OFTEN ASKED BY THOSE AFFLICTED WITH PILES.

Is a strained joint curable? Is local inflammation curable? Of course, if properly treated. So is piles.

People often become afflicted with piles and ask some old "chronic" who has gradually grown to a wrong treatment, and naturally he discourages them by telling them that their case is hopeless.

They in turn discourage others, and thus a disease that can in every case be cured by careful and skilful handling is left to run, and the energy of thousands who might be themselves of the trouble in a few days.

Pyramid Pile Cure will cure the most aggravated case of hemorrhoids in an astonishingly short time, painless too. Pyramid Pile Cure—in a number of instances perhaps—has had many friends in a hospital under a pile specialist.

It is a remedy that none need fear to apply even to the most aggravated, swollen and inflamed hemorrhoidal tumors.

If you are afflicted with this stubborn disease you can master it quickly.

This remedy is no longer an experiment, but a medical certainty, and is sold by druggists everywhere for fifty cents a package.

Write Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., for their free book on the cause and cure of piles.

Dromedaries Smoke Cigars.

There is no reason why a dromedary should not be partial to a good cigar. Most dromedaries, according to a menagerie proprietor, are particularly fond of tobacco smoke and can be made to do almost anything under its influence.

"Travelers in Egypt," he asserts, "retly more on tobacco smoke for their control over these huge beasts than anything else. When traveling on long journeys the dromedaries are in many cases required to travel night and day without rest, and they are kept awake up to their tasks by smoking cigars. The driver carries a triangular piece of wood in his mouth, in one end of which like a cigar holder. This is inserted in the mouth of the beast, the cigar being lit and pressed into the hole in the same fashion followed by man.

"The dromedary immediately closes its eyes and puffs away through its nostrils until the cigar is burned away. The indulgence appears to refresh it, and the keeper has no difficulty in persuading the animal to plod on without further rest."—Pearson's.

Broad Enough.

A large and stout woman called on a friend and while waiting for her was served as a dainty by the friend's little children that she asked one of them:

"What are you staring at, little girl?"

"Why, you see, mamma said you were so narrow in your views, and I was wonderin' what view she got."

Not to Be Blamed.

THE GOVERNMENT ROAD.

Second Reading of Temiskaming Railway Bill Not Opposed By Conservatives—Northern Termini G.T.P., Etc.

Toronto, March 11.—The bill of Hon. F. R. Latchford, making provision for the extension of the Temiskaming Railway to a point at or near Lake Abitibi for or to form a junction with the proposed Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, was given its second reading in the Legislature yesterday. This is one of the two measures that was slipped as a reason for the early calling of the Legislature, although two months have elapsed since the legislators got together. The Commissioner of Public Works, who has been ill for the past week and is still suffering from hoarseness, explained the features of the bill and outlined the necessity for the extension. Briefly, the bill gives the Government power to loan the Railway Commission $2,000,000 and the Commission power to take over certain lands where stations will be built and sell them for town lots, the proceeds going towards construction. It also gives power to increase the bond issue from $25,000 to $30,000 per mile.

Mr. Whitney did not oppose the extension of the railway, but grasped the opportunity to make a few observations concerning the Government's claim of the existence of the clay belt comprising 10,000,000 of arable land, which had been discovered in the region the proposed extension is supposed to traverse. Some comments were made on the somewhat illusory scheme known as the Grand Trunk Pacific, and doubt expressed whether the transcontinental railway, which the Temiskaming Railway is expected to meet, will be built.

Power Continues Debate.

Premier Ross continued the debate after recess, accounting for the delay in bringing down the bill. The Premier enumerated some of the advantages of the railway, one of which was that there would probably be a two-cent passenger rate on the railway.

Mr. Powell Opposed.

Berkeley Powell followed. He had failed to see any good reason why the railway should be extended in such a hurry. He also said the expenditures so far exceeded the estimates by about 3,000,000.

Mr. Conmee contended that it would be impossible to form an exact estimate; such a thing had not been done in the history of railway construction in this country. The railway should be extended to Lake Nipigon.

The adjournment of the debate was moved by Mr. Murphy of Ottawa.

Agriculture and Arts.

Hon. Mr. Dryden moved the second reading of his bill to amend the agricultural and art act. The bill adds a number of townships in the newly settled portions of the Province, which shall be organized into districts for agricultural shows. It also provides that grace officers may seize gambling instruments on fair grounds without warrant and take the owner before the nearest magistrate.

Hon. Mr. Gibson's bill respecting weather insurance was explained by the promoter. He said there was no provision for insurance against wind and tornado, and as a company known as the Tornado Mutual Insurance Co. had applied for a charter it was necessary to pass an act."

First Readings.

Mr. Gross introduced a bill to amend the high school act; Mr. Taylor, a bill to amend the game protection act. Mr. Taylor's act provides that game hunters must wear some distinctive clothing, such as scarlet bands on their caps.' It was suggested by the frequency of accidents in the forest through hunters being mistaken for deer. A similar law is in force in the State of Maine.

Hon. Mr. Gibson introduced a bill to amend the loan corporations act.

Third Readings.

These bills were given their third reading: To confirm bylaw 447 of the city of Hamilton to amend their law respecting the security of public offices.

Hon. Mr. Latchford told Mr. Smyth that the fisheries report would be down in a few days, and Hon. Mr. Davis said the Crown Lands Report would be in the hands of the printers.

Hon. Mr. Stratton brought down a return showing that there were three saloon licenses granted in the Province under the Mahon and six wholesale licenses in rural municipalities.

Gas Co. Is Victor.

In the Private Bills Committee yesterday morning the Consumers' Gas Company scored a victory over the city, no change being made in the company's bill except the reduction of the asked-for increase in capital from $3,000,000 to $1,500,000, which the company decided upon the day before.

Conservatives Gain in Quebec.

Montreal, March 11.—The Conservatives made a showing in this province yesterday, where elections took place for the Legislature in four counties, which were all Liberal, merely represented by supporters of the Parent Government. Yesterday the Opposition captured Maskinonge and Portneuf, each by over 200 majority. George Lafontaine being elected in the first-named constituency and Louis Hand in Portneuf, which goes Conservative for the first time in 20 years. In Berthier Joseph Lafontaine (Liberal) is elected by 110 and Dr. Mathieu (Liberal) in Shefford by 400.

Thamer Charged With Forgery.

Berlin, Ont., March 11.—John H. Thamer, who was arrested at Springhage, and brought here, was arraigned yesterday before Police Magistrate Weir on the charge of having forged the name of Jesse Clemens to two notes for $2,500 and $900. The case was adjourned until March 17.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. Thousands of cases of it has given such satisfaction.

A long cottage makes a heavy season.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Cholera Morbus, Dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and greasy food, is the cause. Use Dr. Low's Remedy. Too much cannot be recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. Only a few drops need be taken in water when the symptoms are noticed and most trouble is experienced.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis, difficult breathing and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It is the only safe, certain and the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, relieves the severe shocking paroxysms of the tube which causes difficulty in breathing. Liberally use Bickle's and that dangerous tightness experienced in the throat, and the distressing cough and sleeplessness will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, a certain remedy. It is speedily and effectually always all irritation, and healthens in the throat, and heals the parts, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and melodious. It presents wish to save the lives of their children, and to relieve them from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them use Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, "and-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken a dose, it will cough no more. Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is for sale by all druggists according to directions.

If you have a good business, it is always better to stay where you are.

Will sometimes pay a man to advertise, prevent his return. Carter's Little Liver Pills are small in size but not in truth. One pill a dose. See advertisement. Small pill. Small dose. Small price.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he sows.

To Those of Secretary Occupation. Men who have sedentary occupations, like the professions, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are subject to attacks of disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active lives. Burdock Blood Bitters never will find in Farmale's Vegetable Pills a restorative without equal for their efficacious action on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

The biggest brave does not always make the biggest fuss.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Billious headache, to which women are especially subject, and men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated for a time, with confuses food, and there is a constant and distressing nausea. The tongue is coated, stomach from bile which has become highly acrimonious. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in nearly all the effects of biliousness they bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache to cease.

Seven hundred British subjects are literally insane.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for Dyspepsia.—Those who use Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are loud in their praises of Liver Pills. Thousands of letters are received by the makers, and these prove this fact. Try them.

Much talk, many lies.

Tone and Vitality — Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics in Ferrozone, are given full use, are found in Carter's Iron Pills. Ferrozone is the best tonic. Sold by druggists, or 50c. per box. Sample free at Dr. Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but got no relief. At last, I continued to grow worse, one day I was advised to try a bottle of Burdock & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy from then began to improve. I continued using Burdock & Lyman's until when a dozen bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed I feel perfectly confident that the cure is complete and permanent. Any one afflicted with this dreadful complaint I heartily recommend Burdock & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any one. (Signed, Ephraim Bedell.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I ventures to write you that I have received great benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. For years I have used it regularly for over ten years and recommended it to all my fellow farmers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in the cure of colds, coughs and incipient consumption."

No prayer ever failed to be heard and answered in Heaven.

Holloway's Corn Cure is the medicine to remove all kinds of corns and warts, and only costs the small sum of twenty-five cents.

Never be afraid of doing little because you can't do much.

"DAY AND NIGHT" ACHES

The incessant grind of the kidney filters, must be watched and cured by South American Kidney Cure—It never fails.

"Kidney Disease affected my back so that I couldn't work at all, and could not sleep for the pain. I used many bottles of South American Kidney Cure, and I can positively and another to the long list of cures that the great remedy claims, for I can work fourteen hours a day now and sleep soundly all night, and other relief had got me help from them."

AUTHOR OF

of was a strained look, a set expression at every turn the almost maddened haste with which the house had been abandoned. The dining-room especially roused the feelings which prefer from pleasant. The table, evidently set for the wedding breakfast, was still crowded in such breathless hurry that the food had been tossed from its dishes and now lay in mouldering heaps on the floor. The wedding cake, which must have been dropped, possibly in the effort to escape it, had been stepped on and crushed flat, presenting a nasty and withered flowers made all the corners unsightly and repulsive. Even among the unwholesome floors at once disgusting and dangerous. The parlors and hanging out of this room were in no better case. Shrinking from the sight as well as the smell therein, I passed out into the kitchen and so by a close and narrowing passage to the negro quarters clustered in the rear.

Here I made a discovery. One of the windows in this long disused portion of the house was not only unlocked but partly open. But as I came upon no marks whatever at this outlet had been used by the escaping murderer, I soon turned back to the front of the house and thus to the stairs communicating with the upper floors.

It was on the rug lying at the foot of the stairs that I found myself on the first of a dozen or more burned matches which lay in a distinct trail up the staircase and across the floors of the upper halle. As these matches were all burned as short as is customary with them, the evident that they had been used to light the way of some one in search of refuge above, possibly in the very room where the body of the victim which had first drawn us to this house. How then? Should I pursue this trail? Or should I follow the boys' before pushing in upon a possibly beautiful woman in the bridal, fascinated, I think, by the beauty of the trail which lay before me.

But when, after a careful following of the course taken by the boys and by preceding me, I came upon a lighted match just at the head of the upper passage, I own that I stopped a moment before following it to the end, to see what could be behind a tightly closed door! But my hesitation, if hesitation it was, was of short duration. My natural impatience and the consciousness of my responsibility, the dictates of my judgment, and, I must add, my own want, would not let me hold off. I soon had the knob in my grasp, I gave a slight push with the door and, lo! a flood of light leap into life along the passage, and there I was in the very midst of the whole room stood revealed.

The instantaneous banging of a shutter in one of its windows prevented my further gaze. But the room which we had seen lighted from below. Otherwise it was as I have said, I able to detect, in my first hurried glance, any other light than that from a candle or candle sputtering in its own grease at the bottom of a candlestick which stood on a table at my left. But this was enough. It revealed to me at once the whole room as it had been left by its occupants, and the full horror of the deed which had been committed.

Instantaneous as had been my impression of the shutter in one of its windows, it was long enough for me to see that the bed was soaked with blood, and that the blood-stained knife with which the unspeakable deed had been done lay in the bloody pool of the great settle standing at its edge.

I have already described the impression which one not at my first entrance by this ancient and characteristic piece of furniture.

It was intensified now as my eye fell upon the bloody knife and was added to the discomfort of its high straight back and of the musty and possibly mouse-haunted cushions. A crawling sense of dread and of the most instinctive repugnance; but because of the fascination which I felt for the grip upon me, although the place, the circumstances and the terrible presence of death were enough to rouse the imagination past all reasonable bounds, I found the cause of a discovery I had made—a discovery which was destined to add condition that all who had been found dead in the room, should be found dead as if from the end of this monstrous, unfortunate piece of furniture. Do you ask what this discovery was? It can be told in a few words. The body of the second bed teen' mate dumortable for the two who were found in it was wide enough for me, the seat and back at least spacious enough to hold a mattress of feather, fastened to the wood with heavy wrought nails. The mattress was there, and was entirely bare, hard and inexpressibly forbidding, but it was unoccupied, unused, or even a moment of casual rest. The natural inference was that the body of this hapless piece of furniture had been a very selfish man who had died in the act of his own comfort. But might he not have had some other reason for his apparent unselfishness? As I asked myself this question and noted how the high back of the settle, which guarded this cushioned retreat was flattened out from the pressure of a head and of carter and glass, feelings to which I can give no name and which I confessedly believed myself proof against, began to take the form of a horrible dread and terror. Before I realized the nature of my own impulse or to what end I was moving, I found myself moving slowly and steadily toward this formidable seat, under an irresistible desire to fling myself down upon those cold cushions and see what the breaking of some farfetched shutter—possibly the one I had noticed in the rear of the house at the end of the street—recalled me to the duties of the hour, and I remembered that my investigations were but half completed and that I must be interrupted any moment by [illegible] lives from headquarters. Then from the accursed charm, which inspired me the moment I escaped it, and quitting the room by a door at the farther end, sought to find in some of the adjacent rooms those distinct traces I had failed to discover on this, the actual scene of the crime.

I was a diligent and careful search, revealing nothing to excite my interest to our inner expectancy, drew my attention or appalled my sense.

To all appearance there was less here than below to affect a man's courage. No inanimate body with the mark of the slayer upon it lent horror to these walls; yet sensations which I had easily overcome in the library below clung with strange persistence to me here, making it an effort for me to move, and giving to the gloom and refraction of my own image in the mirror I chanced to look into, a power to shock and horrify which has never been repeated in my experience.

I may seem both unnecessary and out of character for a man of my calling to dwell upon these chance sensations, but only by doing so can I fully account for the moments that elapsed before I summoned sufficient self-possession to draw aside the closed curtains of the bed and take the quick look inside which my professional position seemed demanded. But once I had broken the spell and taken the look just mentioned, I found my manhood return and with it my old-time power to control. The open gaping, chattering criminal, yet was it not quite empty. Something lay in it and this something, while commonplace in itself, was enough out of keeping with the place and hour to rouse my interest and awaken my conjectures. It was a lady's wrap so rich in quality and of such a festive appearance that it was astonishing to find it lying in a heap on the dusty crumbling old house. Though I knew little of its value, I was familiar enough to know the value of lace, and this garment was covered with it.

Interesting as was this find, it was followed by one still more so. I found it in the folds of the cloak, lay the withered remains of what could only have been a bridal bouquet. The slightly now and scentless, it was still a beautiful specimen of the florist's art. As I noted how the main bunch of roses and lilies-of-the-valley had been held long satin ribbons to the lesser clusters which hung from it, I recalled with a sudden shudder the use to which a similar ribbon had been put in the room above. With a shudder called up by this coincidence I forgot to speculate how a bouquet carried by the bride could have found its way back to this upstairs room of the old house, or how it had been hidden from the parlor below without speaking of the strange fact that it must she was told of the wedding banquet and that this room, which had been the scene of the murder, should be lying-bed was not strange, but that it should be here.

That it really was the wedding bouquet and that this was the room in which the bride had dressed for the ceremony was apparent to the most casual observer. Still, it became an established fact when in my further search I found in the corner of a handkerchief with the name Veronica embroidered in the corner.

This handkerchief had an interest apart from the name on it. It was of dainty texture and quite in keeping with the lace veil, wreath and other belongings of its fastidious owner. But it was evident that the deed it was strangely soiled, and this soil was of a nature I did not readily understand. A woman would doubtless have comprehended immediately the cause of the stain which I found on it, but it took me several minutes to realize that it was of carmine, delicate as a cobweb, had been used to remove dust from what? From the mantel-shelf probably, upon one of the ends of which I found it. But one look along the polished boards of this shelf was sufficient to show me that it had been dusted in this room this shelf had not. The accumulation of days, if not of months, was there. From one end to the other of its unrelieved length and where the handkerchief had lain, and—the greatest discovery of all—I found it was placed just to the left of the center showed where some man's finger-tips had been. Nothing but a powder like finger-tips could have caused just the kind of smudge which I was examining. Nothing but Gently reassured, and indeed quite convinced that wherever the criminal lurked at that moment he was not in the room with me, I turned my attention to my surroundings. First, my points of interest. Foremost among these was the big four-poster which stood on the left-hand side of the room. I have never seen its like in my experience. It was greatly attracted by its size and the air of mystery imparted to it by the heavy drapery curtains of faded brocade. In fact, this bed, whether from its massiveness or from some influence inherent in it, had a fascination for me. I felt, indeed, as though I could not forbear surveying it long and earnestly. And I did survey it long and earnestly. I could not, not oblong; hence, the pressure had been greatest above and below. But these impressions in the dust of the shelf were not the only ones that were made by a person steadying himself for a close look at the article placed there. Two more were for that reverted chair, and for the handkerchief which I had found. But one's interest in this picture had been greater than was apparent to me at the time. Each other very near-sighted or whose temperament was such that they were inspection would satisfy an aroused curiosity.

Such was not an idea, or rather impressed upon me the necessity of preserving the outline of the dust in the mantel while they were still plain to the eye. Taking out my pocket-book, I tore from it a piece of my sharpest blade around each separate impression. I still have them for all time in the well worn varnish of the mahogany.

This done, my thoughts recovered to the question already raised. What had been in this old picture to arouse such curiosity in one bent on evil if not crime? Was there a crime? I have said before that the picture as a picture was worthless, a mere faded sketch in crayon of two boys in their best clothes, evidently which I myself had felt, though not to this extent, the force of its fascination. A fresh difficulty had been added to my task of unravelling discovery, but difficulties only aroused my interest. It was with an odd feeling of elation that, in further examination of this room, I came upon two additional facts equally odd and irreconcilable.

One was the presence of a penknife with the file blade open, on a small table under the window of the single casement shutter. "Scattered about it were some silver shavings and a bit of light from my lantern fell upon them, but which were so small as to call for a magnifying glass to make them out. The other was in connection with a closet not far from the great bed. It was an empty closet, so far as its various shelves and its two small drawers which I found standing half open at its back, told in the middle of the floor an overturned candlestick similar to the one below, but with its candle burned out and its candle crushed and battered out of all shape on the blackened floor. There was also slight, the foot which had stamped upon it. It is well endeavor to put out the flames had been a frenzied one. Now, by whom had this frenzy been shown, and when? Within the last few hours? I could detect no smell of smoke. At some former period, then? say on the day of the bridal?

Glancing from the candle at my feet to the one giving its last sputter in the tumbler on the farther table, I found myself perplexed.

Surely, no ordinary explanation fitted these extraordinary and seemingly contradictory circumstances.

CHAPTER IV.

I am in some ways hypersensitive. Among my other weaknesses I have a wholesome dread of being startled. This is probably why I failed to press my theory on the captain when he mentioned in connection to mention the various small matters which I had found in the room above. But he and the experienced men who came with him were not to be deceived by the suicide in this lamentable shooting of a bride of two weeks. Such a bride as this was! Such a deed, especially as one of the latter had been the bridegroom! I proposed to accompany them upstairs, but the captain thought that I had been seen burning. No, I would keep my discoveries to myself. I did not even mention them till I found the captain alone, asking him to give me the time for examination to remain in the house till Mr. John arrived.

I had been told that an officer had gone for this gentleman, and when I heard the sound of wheels in front, I made a rush for the door, in my eagerness to see the man of whom I had heard so much.

But it was a woman who alighted. A big, handsome woman, of great agitation, one of the men hastened down to meet her. But Mr. Hildreth, I asked Hilbard, who had suddenly reappeared upon the scene, was not with her.

He said that she was probably the sister of the bridegroom, and he inside. Upon which I remembered that Mr. Hildreth's only relative was Miss Tuttle—she was but half-sister to Miss Moore—had been mentioned in the accounts of the wedding before members of the press, and had been at all engagements and magnificent beauty.

This did not take from my interest, and finging decorum to the winds, I approached the foot of the stairs to the threshold which she must soon cross. As I did so I was startled to hear a voice such as Uncle David's organ still pealing from the opposite side of the hall. But at a moment so serious and while matters of apparently overwhelming interest were in the house to which he had himself directed the attention of the police, such a voice was quite stolen-to the extreme. Not very favorable impressions on the character of upon if not insulting indifference on the part of the mourners, or possibly an indifference which did not appear quite natural even in the case of his trained eccentricity—I resolved to know more of this old man and, above all, why he was not being interrogated with the exact relations which had existed between him and his unhappy niece.

Meanwhile Miss Tuttle had stepped within the circle of light cast by our lanterns.

I have never seen a finer woman, nor one whose features displayed a more striking combination of calm, calmly reflected in the room, and, I, for one, endeavored to show him to the light in the background. But I soon stepped forward again. My desire to see the captain was too great, the impression made by her appearance too strong, for me to remain over lightly by one on the lookout for a boy to the remarkable tragedy of before us.

Meanwhile her lips had opened and she was saying:

"My sister! Where is my sister?"

The captain made a hurried movement to stop her, but was met with the laudable intention, doubtless, of preparing her for the shock which, in her excited state, returned and opened a way for her into the drawing-room, as a door was to be turned aside from her course. Passing me by with a slight bow, for the library which she entered with a bound. Then, with a little cry, she fell prostrate upon the hearthrug.

Her unconscious body was carried upstairs by the captain and the doctor, but difficulties only served to increase

AFTER FIFTEEN YEARS

EARTH IS AGAIN MRS. FLORENCE MAYBRICK'S TO INHABIT.

Most Famous Murder Trial in the Last Quarter of the Nineteenth Century—History of the Case Which Caught Norther's Fancy—The Famous Trial —Great Petitions for Her Release.

Florence Maybrick, after having served nearly fifteen years in prison for the murder of her husband, James Maybrick, is a free woman. The earth is again hers to inhabit. Sunshine, the winds, trees, and the sea are words which must now take on a new meaning for her. Perfect liberty as one understands it who has never been to the bad enjoyment attained by Mrs. Maybrick can never be known to her again. Wherever she goes she is marked. "There goes Mrs. Maybrick," whispered excitedly wherever she is known, will blot her to the past as with fetters. Official duty. It is probable that in a few weeks she will be as free as the air. At present she is out of Aylesbury Female Convict Prison on ticket-of-leave. At regular intervals she must appear before some police official and give an account of herself. Failing in this, she may be rearrested. She has also been restrained from appearing on the stage, or from writing a book on her case, or otherwise drawing upon herself any more attention than it is possible to avoid. Such a prohibition was placed upon Frank James and one of the Younger brothers, notorious Western desperadoes who paid the penalty of their misdeeds, and are now earning honest livelihoods. The British Government has done its best to give Mrs. Maybrick her quietly accept the boon, and withdraw herself from the world's stage. Years ago she played her part out. They want to hear and see no more of her.

The Trial of the Case.

It is to be hoped that the end of Mrs. Maybrick's imprisonment will also be the end of the case which is the most famous murder trial of the third quarter of the nineteenth century. It has been discussed practically ever since James Maybrick was found dead in his Liverpool home one day in 1889. Only too often have these discussions been bitter in the extreme. At one time, indeed, they had provoked a spirit in the United States which was not in favor of a quarrel with Britain. In the United States the responsible journals abandoned the subject years ago, convinced that no good purpose could be served by commenting on it, but among less scrupulous newspapers the case has been a stock topic at all times. When it was announced last March that the British justice was almost through with Mrs. Maybrick, there was a flood of articles. Later on both Ambassador Choate and Secretary Hay announced that they knew nothing of the British Government's intention, and further, that they were unlikely to do so. Mr. Maybrick's behalf. This was the signal for another Maybrick hysteria. A writer in the Buffalo Times excelled his contemporaries in the bitterness of his remarks. As had been done often before, this gentleman—Mr. Thorn—made the case a peg on which to hang a batch of arguments showing that the British Government was rotten to the core, that the late Queen Victoria was personally a criminal against Mrs. Maybrick, and that King Edward should abdicate. For fear that Mr. Thorn's egotism may cause him to cherish the false impression that he has rescued Mrs. Maybrick.

Maybrick and His Wife.

While it is probable that the great question of Mrs. Maybrick's guilt or innocence will never be so plainly established that everyone will be of one mind on it, there are many facts which have not been disputed. That Mrs. Maybrick was an unfaithful wife is one of these. That the man she betrayed was a brute was equally sure. Evidence was presented showing that Maybrick was not above using his wife as the woman he had sworn to love and cherish. He had debauched her, and subsequently cast out of the house. Then, when she was going, broken-hearted, he would not let her go. Maybrick, as may be imagined, did not beat his wife as a means of taking exercise. He was jealous of a man named Brierly, and subsequently showed himself to be as suspicious were well founded. Whether Mrs. Maybrick committed adultery with Brierly lectures her husband ill-used her, or whether her offence led to the other's brutality, is a vexed question. Violent scenes were common in the household, the two children which had been born to the couple seemingly to have no restraining influence with either father or mother. Then, suddenly, Maybrick died. The doctor's opinion, death from brain, and he was buried. The gossip of a servant fell on official ears. There was an investigation. The body was exhumed and examined, and Mrs. Maybrick was arrested.

The Famous Trial.

Then began the famous trial which marshalled the greatest lawyers in England. Sir Charles Russell, afterwards Lord Chief Justice, defended Mrs. Maybrick. The trial judge was Sir James Fitzjames Stephen. Now the legal battle raged, with the result that these facts were established: Arsenic had been found in Maybrick's body; arsenic had not been found in the house; Mrs. Maybrick, an unfaithful wife, had once tried to give her husband some broth which contained arsenic; Maybrick was an arsenic-eater; he was accustomed to have bought the poison. The defence asserted that there was not enough arsenic in the dead man's stomach to have caused his death, and that there was no proof that even this insufficient quantity had been administered by his wife. After the sentence had been passed additional evidence as to Maybrick's arsenic appetite was available. The alternative theory of the defence was that the dead man was accidentally poisoned by taking food in curing his Sir Fitzjames Stephen accepted two days. He charged against the prisoner, and the jury required a deliberation of only 38 minutes to return a verdict of guilty. The death sentence was passed. The scaffold was erected.

The Great Petitions.

Then, for the first time, the full meaning of the verdict dawned on Mrs. Maybrick's friends in England and the United States. In the former country the consensus of opinion was against her, but in her native land she was regarded as a martyr. The most largely signed petitions of modern times were circulated. Theyborn signatures of some of the most distinguished American and English names great in the history of art, literature, science, politics, and the Church. They were poured in on the English Home Secretary, and, unable to resist the pressure, he compromised by substituting imprisonment for life for the death sentence. For all practical purposes, Mrs. Maybrick has served her sentence. British justice is satisfied, and now, as best she may, she can gather up the broken pieces of her life.

NOT WORTHY OF SCOTLAND.

Sir Charles Dalrymple, M.P., on the Position of Scotland.

In the course of an address at Inverleithen on the other day, Sir Charles Dalrymple, M.P., said that he had, personally, from time to time, resented the old and almost profane remark that a Scotchman is one who keeps the Sabbath and everything else he can lay his hands upon. He was not quite sure but that he was inclined to affirm the saying. It is an excellent thing that they could see a Scotchman in those very much changed days who kept the Sabbath. He thought a Scotchman had a perfect right to keep what he got his hands upon—if it belonged to him. (Laughter.) As Scotsmen they ought to hold together, but he sometimes thought that Scottish people were needlessly touchy. They fancied themselves attacked and fancied encroachments from England when none were intended. They had only to think of the positions held by Scotsmen in the affairs of the nation and wherever British rule extended, and in many places where British rule had not extended. Scotsmen had stamped their customs, methods and individuality on all that concerned the British Empire, and from the east and from the west, and from the north and from the south people came to Scotland, drawn to the various sacred shrines—shrines of learning, shrines of practical numerosities, of literary and historical meaning. If they were not the predominant partner in point of numbers, he ventured to say that they were equally as predominant as any one else in force of character, in education, in intelligence, in energy, and in general science. There was no room for touchiness, for touchiness was a sign to greatness—touchiness was a note of smallness and was not worthy of Scotland. (Applause.)

Some Fearful Figures.

Mr. Stead, as a journalist, has an unfailing eye for the interesting contrast, the startling table of statistics, says The London Chronicle, and having noticed that one morning paper had organized a census of Paddington's well-going population, he inaugurated his new "Daily Paper" with a census of the Sunday frequenters of public houses. Paddington is selected as a typical London area. The result is startling. Of 100,000 persons in public houses exceeding by 10 per cent. a thousand to one residents of Paddington, we must infer, the majority paid more than one visit. Women in church are more than as numerous as men; of 81,625 there were found 53,000 visitants to licensed premises. But these figures need not hurry us into hysterics, much as we may regret the comparative failure of the Church to attract Paddington. Where there is often the only place where friends can meet. The real sting of the tale comes with the statement that fifteen years ago for of those less than seven thousand were in church, and more than ten thousand were found entering the public house.

A Leaf for a Toast.

What true heart has not largest leaves? An English botanist tells us that it is those that belong to the palm family. First, must be mentioned the main palm, of the banks of the Amazon, the leaves of which are more than fifty feet in length by ten to twelve in width. Certain leaves of the Ceylon palm attain a length of fifty feet and the remarkable width of seven. The natives use them for making tents. Afterward comes the cotsanur palm, the average length of whose leaves is about thirty feet. The umbrella like magnolia of Ceylon bears leaves that are sometimes serve as a shelter for fifteen or twenty persons.

The World's Coal.

Of an estimated coal area of about 4,650,000 square miles in the world China is credited with 4,000,000 square miles. The United States has about 280,000 square miles; Great Britain, 11,000 miles; Germany, 1,770 miles; France, 2,086 miles, and Belgium, 510 square miles. Area is not, however, a true measure of value. The anthracite fields of Pennsylvania include an area of only 468 square miles, but these are undoubtedly of more value than any coal area of like extent anywhere in the world.

RAINSTORMS AT $50 EACH

A CALIFORNIA MAN WHO CLAIMS TO HAVE BECOME A DROUTH DESTROYER.

(Los Angeles Herald.)

Charles M. Hatfield, rainmaker, quotes:

One inch of rain, $50. Cash on the barrel.

With a tank full of chemicals, a heart full of confidence and a team to take the road, Rainmaker Charles M. Hatfield has gone forth to put an end to the dry spell.

Last December, the hills around Newhall he began operations last night. Yesterday and last Sunday Los Angeles should be in the midst of an alleviating downpour. If it shouldn't come, then rainmaker Hatfield's calculations are askew and he will have to chalk up his second failure in 17 trials.

Rainmaker Hatfield is a sewing machine solicitor by day. By night he delves into the mysteries of perambulations of the clouds and all the queer habits of the rulins above. For years he studied the subject before he ventured on a hypothesis.

Then he made up his mind that what was needed to "prime" the pumps of heaven was an attack by explosive fumes. So Rainmaker Hatfield got him a tank, mixed up the dope that he thinks will make it skyward by a method known only to himself.

Within three days Jupiter's lachrymal glands are working like a pair of Siamese twins. Then Rainmaker Hatfield tried his prescription. He is a man who declares, "I failed to work only once.

Hatfield is sponsored in his operations by a number of Los Angeles merchants on Spring street, between 3rd and 4th, all of whom stand to this way:

Like all business men of Los Angeles these dry days, a knot of Spring street shopkeepers were bewailing the lack of rain. Hatfield was in the group.

"I will bring you an inch of rain in the next five days, and it will cost you $50," he said. "I know what I am talking about. I have failed it 16 times and only once have I failed. Come, gentlemen, I am in earnest, and only one failure — count 'em."

"You're on," cried a dozen voices and a dozen gold pieces lay, in a dozen outstretched hands. Rainmaker Hatfield waved the money aside.

"Not now," he said, "until on delivery is my method of doing business. You pay me when you get the rain."

Just what the rainmaker's method is no one but the rainmaker and he won't tell all. He seeks a high point and prays, sets up his tanks, mixes his chemicals and forces the vapor into the upper clouds. Not more than two days or more after have time to make the heavens "give down" and when Rainmaker Hatfield is trying to wring tears from the eyes of the rainless skies he considers he is wiping the dust from its throat and hoping his 17th trial will not score a second failure.

Holland's Unhappy Queen.

Queen Wilhelmina is only about 23 at the present time, little more than a girl; yet already she has lost all trace of her old rhinoceros, all trace of her old figure, says the London World. She seems to look at life now from the standpoint of a middle-aged woman. She has learned to fear than to hope. The loss of her child was for her, savior all Holland, a terrible blow. Then not only has her marriage proved a failure, not only is she for life tied to a man between whom and herself there is no sympathy, but she has had to undertake a ticket over the friend in whom she had placed all her trust.

If she was in love with her, no doubt, when she found that the friend was false she was in love loose with the Boers, and had no thought but for taking a husband for their sake; but it was a much ruder shock when she found that all the while her was dallying with the Boers she was wish on earth was to help her and to secure for life to herself a husband her—scheming to rob her people of their independence—say, rather, to assist her to do so, to work wherewith to tempt them into paths fraught with danger.

Thus she knows now that he on whom she had built as on a rock powerful protector is the enemy. Holland has most to fear; and Holland's queen has most to fear. She is practically alone in the world, and can hardly be blind to the fact that she is alone because she allowed him to entrange her from England. She knows her, so sorely are they disappointed that she has not given them an heir. Meanwhile there are industrial troubles, there are constant troubles of all kinds in her colonies, and the Achinese are proving themselves too strong for her soldiers.

No Such Thing As Luck

In Successful Decorating

Successful decoration must be the outcome of study—of thought rather than of mere chance.

In the chance room there will surely be something wrong.

Possibly the color. Perchance Drawing. — Likely both.

Whether Chamber, Drawing Room, Living Room, Library or Den, the room must be treated with thought of surroundings, of furniture of complexion, of lighting, of size.

The environment of a room with North or East exposure must not be blue, while either West or Southern exposure may use blue to advantage.

How about Crimsons, Greens and Brown—where may these colors be used—just ask your decorator, if he is worthy the name he can tell you.

We solicit your test of our ability on this or other decorative subjects.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

THE TORONTO GLEE CLUB.

The Toronto Glebe of a recent date had this to say of "Lovers' Lane," which comes to the Carman to-morrow night: "Clyde Fitch's play, 'Lovers' Lane,' which made a success in Toronto on the occasion of its first production, attracted quite a large audience last night to the Grand Opera House on its return for a week's engagement. In this play the author has somewhat felicitously and good-humoredly satirized certain types of characters to be found in small country towns, while devoting the chief attention to the love story of the minister and the difficulties he has to contend with among a narrow-minded church community. William B. Haddock appears as the Rev. Theodore Singleton, the minister, and embodies the role with considerable naturalness. Mabel Walsh as Mary Larkin, Pauline Baxter as Mrs. Woodthorpe, and Ellie Tuttle Redmond as Simplicity were the principal favorites in the supporting parts. The caricatures of the village folk were well outlined and created great amusement."

A Quiet Wedding.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at noon to-day at the parsonage minister, Rev. A. C. Mayhee, Ann street, on March 9th, when Miss Florence Graham, of Marlpon, and Miss M. J. Crank, of Belleville, were united in matrimony. The bride was tastefully and modestly attired and was unattended during the interesting ceremony, when they pledged faith to each other. The happy couple are spending their honeymoon in the city among friends and relatives who will extend congratulations for their future success and happiness.

READ IT THROUGH.

'Twould Spoil This Story to Tell It in the Headlines.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small village in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon, of Mells Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For sale by all druggists.

ALLOTMENT OF SEATS IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

OPPOSITION CLAIM THEY HAVE BEEN UNFAIRLY TREATED.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

There is found to be an expression of indignation when the House meets, over the manner in which vacant seats have been allocated on the Opposition side. As stated in the Citizen some time ago, J. J. Tarte had exchanged seats with Hon. John Costigan, who for several sessions has sat in the front row on the Opposition side. Mr. Costigan's desk mate, Mr. Mesdore, having been appointed to a judgeship, the Opposition claimed that seat also for one of its members and would have given it probably to Mr. Northrup, of Hastings, one of the best debaters in the House, but a member of long standing. The Government whip, however, declined to agree to this and instructed the sergeant-at-arms to mark the seat off for Mr. Victor Geoffrion, the Liberal member for Chambly and Vercheres, who was on unsuccessful candidate for the Speakership. The Opposition based its claim to this seat on the fact that it is one of the best seats on the Speaker's left, and also on the fact of having won from the Government the seat for St. John, N.B., since last session. The other changes on the Conservative side, as has been already noted, are Mr. N. Lash's being given the seat occupied by the late Mr. Cargill, and the moving of Mr. Gourley down to the seat heretofore occupied by the member for Macdonald.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The Peterboro Review, in its write-up of the game between the Marlboros and Peterboro, says:

"The Marlboros were to have played Belleville to-night but got instructions, so they say, from the O.H.A. to leave that Bay City punch alone."

Just as well, perhaps. Belleville people have no desire to see a team which got thrashed so badly as the Marlboros.

There may be some truth in the above story, of course, but people in this city, who should know what they are talking about, say the reason the Marlboros didn't come was because they demanded a $200 guarantee, and the locals wouldn't stand for it.

Brockville Times: The Belleville hockey team will be invited to play a return game in Brockville.

There will be fast ice and a good crowd at the rink to-night, and the game should be one of the best of the season. The Brockvilles have beaten many good teams this season and have no forward but which never lets up but hustles all the time. They are now at their best, and the fur will fly to-night when the Bay boys come together.

TO RUSH TROOPS ACROSS CANADA.

SIR CHARLES FARSONS CONFERS WITH C. P. R. PRESIDENT.

Montreal, March 10. — Major-Gen. Sir Charles Parsons, K.C.M.G., Commander-in-chief of the British forces in Canada, was in Montreal to-day on his way to Ottawa to attend the opening of Parliament. During his stay in Montreal Sir Charles Parsons had a conference with General Manager McNeill of the C.P.R., and it is understood that the chief topic discussed was the recent reports which are reported to have been entered into by the Canadian Pacific Railway and the British Government for the transport of British troops across the Dominion in case of emergency.

The present uncertain conditions in the East, owing to the alliance of Great Britain with Japan, make it imperative that the Imperial Government should be able to transport troops to the Far East with all despatch, and the Canadian line offers not only the quickest, but safest route in case of emergency.

The outcome of the discussion between Sir Charles Parsons and Mr. McNeill was, it is understood, an understanding that in the event of trouble arising in the Far East calling for the immediate use of troops, the passage across the continent would be made easily and expeditiously via the Canadian Pacific Railway.

TO BREAK UP A COLD

Right quickly nothing works so nicely as Nerviline taken real hot. It breaks up the cold, clears the head, eases the body, and when rubbed on the throat and chest relieves that hoarseness and tickle in the throat. Nerviline is the best cure for coughs, colds, coughs and winter ills in those homes. Because it does it goes right to work and keeps relief quickly. Nerviline is a 50-cent size, and worth half the power and merit of Nerviline; it's invaluable in every house. In large bottles, price 25c.

Liquor Cases.

Five hotel keepers were this morning charged before Police Magistrate, charged with selling liquor during prohibited hours. It was alleged that the offences took place on Sunday, February 28th. All were charged with second offence. Four of the parties pleaded guilty and a fine of $40 and costs in each case was imposed. The fifth party's was the case, with the result that it was dismissed.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

News of Great Land Battle in Far East Hourly Expected—Japanese About to Strike a Crushing Blow at the Russian Forces.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, March 11.—News from the Far East to-day conclusively shows that the Japanese are almost ready to deliver a crushing blow to the Russians.

The Japanese have landed in Manchuria and Corea in large numbers. It is estimated that 200,000 soldiers are ready for battle.

News of a contemplated attack on the Russian forces is hourly expected.

The Russians are in a bad way in that they are not only unprepared for such an attack but have lost hope and courage in the several reverses they have suffered on land and sea.

Paris, March 11.—A correspondent of the Figaro in St. Petersburg writes that as a result of the recent letters from King Edward to the Czar, to which His Majesty expressed in cordial terms his desire for peace, the editors of several newspapers in St. Petersburg were summoned to the office of the censor and ordered to moderate their anti-British tendencies.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Radium Sells for $12,000,000 a Pound.

New York, March 10. — Announcement has been made that the price of radium has increased $4,200,000 a pound in the last two days and may go higher. The market price last week was $8,400,000, and now it is $12,600,000. By April 1st, it is said, it may be impossible to buy it at any price. L. D. Gardner, an importer of radium said:

"Bohemia has forbidden the exportation of pitchblend, because the government discovered that the Czech industry was interfering with the Bohemian. Austria-Hungary also sadly prohibits the radium manufacturers in Paris and Hamburg from obtaining the uranium ore, and thus until new discoveries are made, there will be no more radium made. This will stimulate prospectors in the Western States and Canada."

Rosebery Says Balfour Is Therefore Not Fit to Lead.

Liberal Nat'n Denunciation of the Prime Minister Electrifies the House of Lords —All About the Two Documents Issued by Mr. Balfour—Lord Lansdowne Replies to Rosebery in Stated Manner and Explains Some Things.

London, March 11.—(C.A.P.)—Lord Rosebery electrified the House of Lords yesterday when in reply to Premier Balfour's charges of calumny in connection with his quotation from Lord George Hamilton's statement regarding the two documents, he said that calumny meant a false accusation of crime or a misstatement knowingly made or maliciously reported. He demanded what justification there was for such a characterization.

Lord Lansdowne acknowledged there were two documents—one declaring for reciprocity, the other being confidential and for colleagues only. Lord George Hamilton's misstatement was of the purport of the second giving the idea of alternatives, policies, one of retaliation and the other of preferences, was repudiated by Lord George Hamilton himself, and Lord Rosebery's interruption had gravely misinterpreted the statement made. He (Mr. Balfour's) statement that the word was used in the best of confidence was certainly no intention to impute to Lord Rosebery any deliberate attempt to misrepresent, but he regretted he regarded the charge as calumnious.

Lord Rosebery, explaining that at least there were two documents, declared that the explanation was not to sense satisfactory. He had not gone beyond Lord George Hamilton's statement, and no Minister should be so thinskinned as to resent a mistaken statement as entirely supported by the facts. Mr. Balfour's charge was unwarranted by him. "My argument was not that the pamphlets were inconsistent and mutually destructive, but that one was a halfway house to the other." It was all very well to defend Mr. Balfour's speech by saying the expression was used in the House of Lords and not only pretty Fanny's way. If a man could not curb his tongue he was not fit to lead. First, Lord of the Treasury. He did not remember such a fiasco in the language Mr. Balfour chose to use, but he had brought the matter before the House for the sake of the decencies of debate.

TOOK A STRAW VOTE.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENT IN A RESTAURANT.

An advertising agency, representing a prominent New York magazine, carried on a recent novelty trip was dining one evening in a Pittsburg restaurant.

Waite waiting for his order he glanced over his newspaper and noticed the advertisement of a well known dyspepsia preparation. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; so he himself was a regular user of the tablets, he began speculating as to how many of the other travelling men in the dining room were also friends of the popular remedy for indigestion.

He says: I counted twenty-three men at the tables and in the hotel office. I took the opportunity to interview them and was surprised to learn that nine of the twenty-three made a practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

One of them told me he had suffered so much from stomach trouble that at one time he had been obliged to quit the road, but since using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets had been entirely free from indigestion, but he continued their use especially while travelling, on account of irregularity in meals and because like all travelling men he was often obliged to eat what he could get and not always what he wanted.

Another, who looked the picture of health, said he never ate a meal without taking a Stuart's after wards because he could eat what he pleased without fear of a sleepless night or any other trouble.

Still another used them because he was subject to gas on stomach, causing pressure on heart or lungs, sometimes, but he certain distress in chest, which he no longer experienced since using the tablets regularly.

Another claimed that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was the only safe remedy he had ever found for sour stomach and acidity. He had formerly used common soda to relieve the trouble, but the tablets were much better and safer to use.

After smoking, drinking or other excesses which weaken the digestive organs, nothing restores the stomach to a healthy, wholesome condition so effectually as Stuart's Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the natural digestives, pepsin, diastase, which every weak stomach lacks, as well as nux, hydrastin and yellow parilla, and can be safely relied upon as a radical cure for every form of poor digestion. Sold by all druggists everywhere.

200,000 JAPANESE TROOPS NOW IN COREA

Nothing New Re. Yalu Military Situation.

Persistent Admiral Togo Still Shells Port Arthur and the Russian Ships—Reinforcements Being Poisoning to Join Wiju Their Defensive Base—British and American Protest re. Sinking Junks in the Newchwang Channel.

London, March 11.—Special correspondent of The Daily Chronicle at Tokio, evidently referring to the Japanese movements, claims that the transportation to Northern Corea of three divisions of Japanese troops has been completed, and that these men are beginning to advance, while two divisions and the second army corps have already been mobilized.

After Port Arthur Is Neutralized.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, telegraphing on Thursday, says: Port Arthur is neutralized, practically no more big guns go to the north simultaneously, one from the southern part of the Liaotung Peninsula, and the second from the Yalu River. The Russians are advancing northward in Corea, this correspondent continues, with the intention of making Wiju their defensive base.

A correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, writing from Shanghai recently, wires from Seoul that the Japanese have been in communication with their land movements. The roads are occupied by Japanese troops.

Withdrawing From Port Arthur.

According to a Tientsin correspondent of The Standard, the Russians are withdrawing all their warships and troops from Port Arthur to Harbin and Kirin, because of the danger of a combined attack. Further, it is doubtful whether or not they will attempt to hold either Port Arthur or Newchwang against a resolute attack.

Cabling from Tokio, a correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, says the Japanese Government has communication from Pekin declaring that Great Britain and the United States have protested against Russia sinking junks in the channel of the Liao River at Newchwang, on the ground that this prevents the egress of the warships of the two powers from the river.

The Times publishes a despatch from Tokio saying the ice on the Yalu River has begun to go and Japanese scouts have encountered forty Cossacks, the correspondent continues, at Anan, 58 miles south of Pingyang, on the road to Wiju.

Japs at Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, March 11.—The Czar has received the following message from Viceroy Alexieff, dated yesterday, at Mukden:

"The commandant of the fortress at Port Arthur reports that at about 1 o'clock this morning the destroyer Reshitelny, apparently with two boats, were seen at sea, within the area swept by the searchlights. Our batteries opened fire upon these vessels. The destroyer put out to sea at 2.40 a. m., and about 4 o'clock met the enemy west of Liaotishan lighthouse. After firing several shots, the enemy retired to the south in the direction of Pigeon Bay. Our torpedo boats returned to the harbor at 6 o'clock this morning.

"Later torpedo boats were again sent to sea to reconnoitre. They returned in half an hour, having found out that an enemy's squadron was approaching.

"At 8 o'clock the Japanese opened fire on our vessels and forts. Then the enemy had fourteen ships and fired the entire time from behind Liautishan.

"I have the honor to report the above to Your Majesty. Alexieff."

("Signed) Alexieff."

The Russians Retreated.

Tokio, March. 11.—Russian and Japanese mounted scouts met south of Pingyang Wednesday. After a brief engagement the Russians retreated. No casualties are reported on either side.

There Was No Sea Fight.

Vladivostock, March 11.—The acting chief of the staff yesterday officially stated that the reports of a sea fight between the Russians and Japanese squadrons on Sunday last are absolutely unfounded.

News by the Olympia.

Victoria, B.C., March. 11.—The Northern Pacific liner Olympia arrived from Yokohama yesterday. Among her passengers was Capt. Hill, who brought the Japanese cruiser Niashin from Genoa to Yokohama, and he tells of a row with the Russian cruiser Aurora in the Red Sea and the escape of the Niashin and Kasuga from possible capture by the Russian squadron.

Chinese Suffer.

Yinkow, March 11.—The concentration of troops at the Russian strategical base has resulted in untold suffering among the Chinese inhabitants, especially at Liaoyang, where even private buildings have been appropriated to accommodate the soldiers, and thousands of Chinese are consequently without shelter. Russian troops are encamped at all the essential points along the railroad.

Russia Warns China.

St. Petersburg, March 11.—Russia has served notice on China that the latter must not send troops beyond the great wall, and that she must exercise her influence to restrain the Chinese bandits, who are partially under the control of Chinese officers, from interfering with their railroad and telegraph lines. A refusal to heed this warning will be considered a breach of neutrality.

Bombardment Effective.

Tokio, March 11.—Vice-Admiral Kamimura, reporting the bombardment of Vladivostok on March 6, says the attack commenced at ten minutes of two in the afternoon, and the firing was kept up for forty minutes. He believed the bombardment was effective, and described relating to the enemy.

Report of March 8.

Tokio, March 11.—Information obtained from private sources is to the effect that the Japanese squadron has bombarded Vladivostock twice since March 6.

Military Train Derailed.

Tomsk, Western Siberia, March 11.—A military train was derailed at Petrokutsk, Western Siberia, was derailed yesterday. One person was killed and a number of soldiers were injured.

Balkans Pained Black.

Pittsburg, March 11.—A special to The Viedomosti paints the Balkan situation in dark colors. The correspondent declares that a collision between Bulgaria and Turkey may occur any day, and says the Sultan has refused to sign the draft of reforms submitted by the Czar, with (the Bulgarian diplomatic agent at Constantinople.)

FORESTRY IN CANADA

Fifth Annual Meeting of the Association With Interesting Papers.

Toronto, March 11.—The fifth annual meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association was opened yesterday. Hiram Robinson presided, and in an address urged the importance of warfare as the greatest enemy of the Canadian forests. Carwiss settlers, workmen, and the railway were the chief offenders. Secretary Stewart reported a membership of 1,000, an increase of 79. Tree planting is being encouraged by the Government, and 700,000 will be supplied to settlers this year.

On the opening of the afternoon session it was resolved to establish a Government nursery for the supply of forestry; and the executive was empowered to bring this about as early as possible.

Ronald Erwin Cumming, Munich, of the Royal Saxonian College, Tharandt, Germany, contributed a paper on "Forest Management in Germany."

John Bertram, presiding at the forenoon session, introduced the discussion. read a paper on "Forest Management." Any discussion which ensued is brought out more especially there-after.

Hon. E. J. Davis complimented the association on the very valuable information from Mr. Bertram, who will think over the papers submitted and write to Mr. Davis.

The other speakers were Prof. Roth of the University of Michigan, Prof. Loudon of Toronto University, Prof. Fernow (late Director in Forestry"), Prof. Godwin of Queen's, and Prof. Hunt.

It was resolved, on the motion of Father Burke, to wire on the Federal and Provincial Governments to make a survey of the forest growths with a view to the preservation of the water power of Canada.

The banquet in the evening was a great success.

Not Mentally Afflicted.

London, March 10.—Austen Chamberlain, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, authorizes the statement that there is absolutely no foundation for the report that his father is mentally afflicted. He added that his father's health was quite satisfactory, and that he was receiving much benefit from the change and rest.

Lowest on Record.

San Francisco, March 11.—A severe storm is and and has prevails over the Pacific coast. Telegraphic reports every where are prostrated. The barometer here fell to 29.23, lowest ever recorded. The wind reached a velocity of 46 miles an hour.

To Eliminate Negro Vote.

Annapolis, Md., March 11.—The House of Delegates yesterday, by a strict party vote of 64 to 37, passed the bill proposing a constitutional amendment limiting the franchise, in Maryland, the purpose of which is to eliminate the negro vote. The measure now goes to Governor Warfield for action.

MAKAROFF DRIVEN BACK

In the Port Arthur Fight Russians Lost One Torpedo Boat,

Alexieff Reports That a Japanese Boat Was Also Destroyed, But Gives Only Meagre Details—Removal of Retvizan From Harbor Entrance Will Permit Exit of Heavy Craft and Possible Aggressive Action.

St. Petersburg, March 12.—The Emperor has received a message from Viceroy Alexieff which says:

"Admiral Makaroff, commanding the fleet, reports from Port Arthur under date of March 10, that six torpedo boats which went out to sea the night of March 10, four of them being under the general command of Captain Matticsenetch, encountered the enemy's torpedo boats followed by cruisers.

"A hot action ensued in which the torpedo boat destroyer Vlastini discharged a whitehead torpedo and sunk one of the enemy's torpedo boats. On the way back the torpedo boat destroyer Strerguschetchi, commanded by Lieut. Sergueieff, sustained damages; her engine was disabled, and she began to flounder. By 8 o'clock in the morning five of our torpedo boats destroyers had returned.

"When the critical position of the Strerguschetchi became evident I hoisted my flag on the cruiser Novik and went with the Novik and the cruiser Bayarin to the rescue. But as five of the enemy's cruisers surrounded our destroyer, and as their battleship squadron was approaching, I did not succeed in saving the Strerguschetchi, which foundered. Part of the crew was made prisoners and part drowned.

"On the ships which participated in the night attack one officer was seriously and three others were slightly wounded, but two soldiers were killed and eighteen were wounded.

"At 9 o'clock 14 of the enemy's ships assembled before Port Arthur and a bombardment was begun with the heavy guns of their battleships squadron at long range.

"This lasted until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. It is estimated the enemy fired 154 twelve inch shells. The damage to our vessels was insignificant, and they are again ready for battle. Our losses were one officer slightly wounded and one soldier killed and four soldiers wounded.

"The illumination of the sea at night by the searchlights mounted at our batteries was most satisfactory, and several times isolated shots from our batteries forced the enemy's torpedo boats to retire.

"At the commencement of the bombardment at dawn the guns of the fortress replied to the enemy's fire.

"The crews of all the ships engaged gave proof of remarkable coolness in action. Below decks the work of day followed its ordinary course, in spite of the shells falling between the vessels and covering them with fragments.

"A bombardment at such a distance must be considered ineffective, but the Japanese cruiser Takeshago is reported to have been seen to suffer serious damage, the extent of the damage it is impossible to ascertain at a distance of five miles. Many shells were fired at a range of 7½ miles.

"I have the honor to report the foregoing to Your Majesty.

(Signed,) "ALEXIEF."

Further Russian Casualties.

St. Petersburg, March 12.—Viceroy Alexieff has sent the following supplementary message to the Emperor: "In the fight between our torpedo boats and the Japanese cruisers on March 11, Capt. Matteusevitch, Ensign Alexandroff and Mechanical Engineer Blinoff received slight wounds, and Ensign Zaeff was severely wounded in the head, losing his right eye.

"The commandment at Port Arthur reports the following details of the bombardment of the fortress on March 10:

"As soon as the enemy opened fire our batteries replied. Six of the enemy's ships remained behind the Liaotishin promontory and opened fire on the fortress over that shelter. They ceased bombarding at 1.15. The enemy fired about 200 projectiles, one shell from Battery No. 15 on Electric Cliff damaged a Japanese cruiser seriously. The results of the bombardment were insignificant. Six soldiers were wounded. Three inhabitants of the fortress were killed and one was wounded.

"According to Gen. Stoessael's report the officers and soldiers in the shore batteries displayed exemplary courage and fired their guns in perfect order."

No Attack Friday.

London, March 12.—Although there is some confusion of dates in the official messages from the Far East regarding recent attacks from Port Arthur and other engagements it would appear that no fresh action took place on Friday.

The official announcement from Mukden that the Russian army corps which arrived at Harfa will be held there because of the landing of Japanese troops at different points, and the various reports of the intentions of the Japanese commanders, is an unintentional tribute from Viceroy Alexieff to Japan's extraordinary success in concealing her plan of campaign and mystifying the enemy as to her movements.

A Che Foo correspondent of The Daily Mail says Japanese debarkation is proceeding at Chemulpo and points to the northward with marvelous rapidity.

The correspondent calculates that up to the present 70,000 Japanese have been landed in Northern Corea.

Harbor Entrance Cleared.

St. Petersburg, March 12.—The removal of the battleship Retvizan from the inner mouth of the inner harbor, by the method the assumption of command by Admiral Makaroff, will permit the exit of the heavy armored ships. It had been believed that the reason why the Russian ships had not made a sortie before was the apprehension of meeting with a superior force, but it is now clear that the ships were unable to get out. With the channel open, it is expected that Admiral Makaroff will make the squadron an aggressive force.

No unofficial reports of the recent fights have been received here up to this hour.

"LOT OF LIARS."

Henry Labouchere, M.P., Passes An Opinion of the Conservative Ministers.

Threatened to Resign.

London, March 12.—(C.A.P.)—The Standard learns on the best authority that Austen Chamberlain and Alfred Lyttelton, along with three minor members of the Government, threatened to resign on Wednesday unless official support was withdrawn from J. L. Wharton's motion.

Offer to Newfoundland.

London, March 12.—(C.A.P.)—The Morning Post urges the Dominion Government to lose no time in offering acceptable terms to Newfoundland. It says that the Dominion, without Newfoundland, can never carry out an effective scheme of self-defence, and the control of deep sea bait was a most important weapon in treaty disputes with the United States. The French shore difficulty was now in process of final settlement and that would remove the obstacle arising with the French-Canadians.

Guilty of Murder.

Kishineff, March 12. — Yesterday Rusnecke and Bodjlan were found guilty of the murder of a Jewish couple named Forrarji. Rusnecke was sentenced to four years' imprisonment, and Bodjlan to twenty years. Fifteen persons accused of rioting were each condemned to a year's imprisonment, and three others to four months. Thirty-six of the accused were discharged.

Britain's Estimates.

London, March 12.—An additional vote of $350,000 for the British exhibit at St. Louis, making a total of $750,000, is included in the civil service estimates for the coming year. These and the revenue departments total $233,952,885. The full estimates will show an expenditure for the years 1904-5 of about $710,000,000.

Penalty For Corruption.

London, March 12.—The Lord Chancellor's bill for the prevention of corruption, which has been issued and provides that any agent who receives, or any person who gives to an agent, a secret commission, or false receipt of account, shall be liable to two years' imprisonment or a fine not exceeding £500.

WHY THE INFORMATION WAS WITHHELD.

(The secret of the Government's secrecy in connection with the amendments to the Grand Trunk Pacific contract makes it plain why the Government was so mum. The electors of eight constituencies in which bye-elections were held were denied information as to the nature of the concessions to Mr. Hays and his associates. It is well for the Government that strict silence was observed on this question. In eight contests the Government vote, on an average, was 570 less than in the last general election. Had the G. T. P. latest deal been announced, it is certain the loss to the Government would have been much greater.)

In a contrast dated February 12th, the Government agrees to release the Grand Trunk from almost every obligation it took upon itself in the matter of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Every boasted safeguard to the people's interests is swept away, and strong as was Hon. A. G. Blair's denunciation of the scheme a year ago, one unconsciously wonders if that gentleman's vocabulary would be equal to presenting the deal, as it now stands, in its true colors. Hon. Mr. Blair, however, is not likely to do much talking now. He has been effectively "muzzled."

In brief, the period of construction of the Western Section is extended from 5 to 8 years, with a further provision against strikes; the G. T. P. liability for selling stock is reduced from $20,000,000 to $15,000,000 for both sections; the Grand Trunk deposit of $5,000,000 may be made in "cash or approved securities," instead of "cash or equivalent Government securities," and will be repaid on the completion and equipment of the Western Section, and not held, as originally intended, until the Eastern Section is completed; the G.T.P. may lease the Eastern Section, when completed as construction is completed; the guarantee of the bonds of the Prairie Section is unchanged, but on the completion of Section the Government undertakes to guarantee 75 per cent. of the actual cost, instead of a maximum of $30,000 per mile; the Government undertakes to refrain from foreclosing its mortgage on the G. T. P. until 5 years' interest is due, upon which the Government shall operate the road until such time as it will have recouped itself, when the road reverts to the company; the G. T. P. is given permission to present to the Grand Trunk $25,000,000 in common stock, which may be sold in the market in place of being held by the Grand Trunk as a company for 50 years; running rights over the Eastern Section to be guaranteed the Grand Trunk for 50 years after the expiry of the lease, in the event of the Government taking over the road; and the G.T.P. to have the right to sell to the Government, at the expiry of the lease, any portion of which may not be considered desirable by the company.

It will be seen at a glance that the few redeeming features of the original agreement are wiped out. The company assumes no risk, the hazard being the Government's alone.

Former Resident Dead.

Desoronto Tribune: William Thos. Barnhart died suddenly at his home on the Tyendinaga Reserve, on Sunday last, apoplexy being the cause of death. The deceased was born a little over 45 years ago in the County of Lennox and Addington, and when quite young moved from there, with his parents to the city of Belleville, where he resided for 28 years. He married Miss Margaret Fitzgerald, a native of Ireland, 19 years ago, by whom and four children, John, Migale, Leon and Margaret, he is survived. The funeral took place from Christ Church, Tyendinaga, on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

OFFICER SPOTTED ANDREW.

SEQUEL TO AN ASSAULT CASE WHICH OCCURRED LAST AUGUST.

On the 28th of August last Mrs. Mary Tomlinson was rather harshly used by some parties who were brought up before the Magistrate and fined. Andrew Deshane, who was implicated in the affair, left the city rather suddenly. Yesterday he returned and was spotted by Officer Hayes, who arrested him on a warrant. This morning he was brought up before the Magistrate charged with assault.

Deshane was convicted of assault and fined $5 and costs.

Mrs. Dickson's Funeral.

The remains of the late Mrs. Geo. D. Dickson, who died in Toronto, arrived here at noon to-day and were taken to the residence of Mrs. Wilkins, Pinnacle street, whence the funeral took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Services were held at St. Thomas' Church, conducted by the Rector, Rev. C. R. Beamish, and a number of citizens were in attendance. Many beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket by sympathizing friends.

LOVERS' LANE TO-NIGHT.

"Lovers' Lane," by the popular local author, Clyde Fitch, which will appear at the opera house to-night, has a wonderful record of over 100 times in New York City and nearly 100 times in Chicago. The story concerns the struggles of a progressive young pastor of a fashionable church against the narrow prejudices of his flock, woven in delicately with his oppression is the love of the minister for a gentle woman who is betrothed to another man with a checkered past. The young woman, Mary Larkin, fascinated by the strength of character and the mental and moral superiority of the young minister, falls in love with him in turn. The villagers with whom he has been at war take him back to their hearts when they discover they cannot find his equal to fill the pulpit and all go—merrily along "Lovers' Lane" again. The cast is a large one, numbering over 30 people and over a carload of special scenery.

Died in Port Hope.

It will pain many people to hear of the death of Mrs. J. H. Hewson, late of this city, which and event occurred at Port Hope on Thursday night last. The deceased lady, whose maiden name was Miss Dorothy, was the widow of the late Conductor Hewson, a man very popular in this vicinity. Three children are left to mourn the loss of a loving mother.

Died Near Foxboro.

Mrs. Mary Ann Lloyd, widow of the late Mr. D. L. Lloyd, of Plainfield, died yesterday at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. H. Gardiner, near Foxboro, where she was visiting. Deceased was ill but a few days. Mrs. Lloyd, whose maiden name was Miss Brintnell, was born in Thurlow in the year 1832, and had lived in that township all her life. For upwards of half a century she had been a consistent member of the Methodist Church and was esteemed by all who knew her. The surviving members of the family are five sons and two daughters. The sons are H. J., of Madoc; Asa, of Thurlow; Albert, of Toronto; Stephen, of Medicine Hat; and George, of Sodbury. The daughters are Mrs. W. J. Cooney, of Madoc, and Mrs. George Chase, of Detroit. Mr. E. P. Brintnell, of this city, is a brother of the deceased.

TO BREAK UP A COLD

Right quickly nothing works so nicely as Nerviline taken real hot. It sends a glowing warmth all through the body, and when rubbed on the throat and chest loosens up the cough and relieves tightness and soreness in the chest. Nerviline is used as a preventative and cure for colds, coughs and winter ills in thousands of homes, because it goes right to work and brings relief quickly. There is no remedy in the world with half the power and merit of Nerviline; it's invaluable in every house. In large bottles, price 25c.

Silent Great Men.

The list of silent great men is a long one. Especially is this true of noted warriors. Wallenstein, Wellington, Von Moltke, Cromwell, Marlborough, Charlemagne, Hannibal, Cæsar, all gave their orders in as few words as possible and demanded like brevity from their subordinates. It is said that Marlborough never allowed more than a minute for a verbal report, and of it is told of Von Moltke that when an aid-de-camp brought a written message that Prince had declared war the great general simply ordered it filed in the "second pigeonhole on the right, first tier." In that pigeonhole were complete plans for the successful campaign that followed.

Why Cut Apples Turn Color.

The rapid change of color in cut apples is due to chemical action on the exposed surface of the apple after the free admission of oxygen and not, as was once supposed, to the presence of micro-organisms, for if apple pulp is sterilized and filtered the same thing happens. The juice of an apple not only contains water, sugar and various acids, but a starch which ferments when exposed to the air.

Lindet holds that the fermenting matter and the acids also are in different cells in the uncut apple, but are brought into contact as soon as it is cut. This is, however, not to the point, as the fermenting matter can only attack the aromatic body in the presence of oxygen. So long as the skin of the apple is whole no change can take place, but directly this is wounded the oxygen begins its work, carbon dioxide is evolved, and the reddish brown appearance sets in, especially on unripe fruit.

Locke's View of Dancing.

John Locke in his "Thoughts Concerning Education" says quaintly, "Nothing appears to give children so much becoming confidence and behavior and so to raise them to the conversation of those above their age, for, though dancing consists only in outward gracefulness of motion, yet, I know not how, it gives children manly thoughts and carriage more than anything." He adds, however, that the teacher must be a good one, for "I think it more passable to put off the hat and make a leg like an honest country gentleman than like an ill fashioned dancing master." To put off the hat and make a leg explains much, by the way, in the "business" of the ordinary costume play.—London Chronicle.

Getting Out of It.

Constable, the English painter, attended an exhibition of landscapes and sea views which was the work of another eminent artist whom he detested. "Like putty," he growled as he scanned them over. It happened that a friend of the painter's was present and was so stupid as to repeat Constable's remark. When, later, Constable, meeting the gentleman whom he had condemned, congratulated him upon one of his works, the latter said, "Why, I'm told you say my pictures are putty." "What of that?" replied Constable, "I like putty."

What "Parsifal" Is.

Musically "Parsifal" is unique among Wagner's achievements. It has not the continual and flaming inspiration of "Tristan," of tragic puissance of "Goetterdaemmerung," the unflagging felicitous invention of "Siegfried," nor are the themes inveterately eloquent in denotement. But in no other work has he compassed the exquisitely dexterous art, the emotional subtlety, the lasting quaintness of this score.

Driven to It.

"I've come to kill a printer," said the little man.

"Any printer in particular?" asked the foreman.

"Oh, any one will do! I would prefer a small one, but I've got to make some sort of a show at fight or leave home since the paper called my wife's tea party a 'swell affair.'"

Sure He'd Get It.

"There!" said Mr. Jenks, stopping suddenly. "I was going to get that piece of silk for my wife, and I forgot all about it until now. Never mind," he continued, starting on again; "I'll get it when I get home all right."

When his wife's mother comes on her first visit a man has the same feeling as if there were a private detective in the house.—Atchison Globe.

THE GREAT EASTERN STOCK Co.

- - - Distributors of Underprice Merchandise - - -

Is the happy hunting ground for prudent buyers and the mecca of money savers, this fact is proven day by day and especially is this so of yesterday and to-day. "THESE SPECIALS" for these two days will hold good until 10.30 to-night, no longer.

More visitors are finding enjoyment throughout the store. More sales in our Dress Goods and Silk Department. More parcels passing through our doors. More dollars going into our cash boxes. More people lingering with enjoyment feasting their eyes on new arrivals, in fact there is more life everywhere throughout the store.

One point we cannot determine, namely:—how much of this progress is due to general conditions and how much to the special attractions created by our business policy, these forces work in harmony for us, but they contain an indefinite element that will puzzle the analyzer.

And, by the way, you may think it impertinent that we ask your attention to the details of our business, if so you are mistaken, as our business has interest for you. Of course there are other stores in Belleville, good one's, too, but a good store has power to lift other stores, each takes tone from the one next in advance. Therefore when we put this store in operation for the distribution of underprice goods, we took a strong constructive position in contemporary retail trade. "And even the battering rams could not change the tide," as the justice loving people took up the cry, and are making this enterprise (as we have the best of reasons to believe) the economic centre for frugal buyers, therefore our position is endorsed and power fixed.

Admit these propositions and our contention that our business has interest for you needs no argument, therefore we bid you welcome even though you do not spend one dollar with us, we want you to come and see what we are doing in the way of bettering the condition of the buying public. Keep in mind we are headquarters in all lines of domestics.

Special Attractions for Monday and Tuesday.

MAKE YOURSELF NECESSARY TO SOMEBODY

(Emerson)

We have made ourselves necessary to a great many "somebodies," when it comes to the question of Clothing. We know of nothing that is more of a necessity to-day than good Clothing.

Our showing of New Spring Styles in men's Suits has never been equalled, even in our own store, and an inspection of them will most surely convince you how necessary we are to a man's comfort and w elfare.

No matter what your taste for clothes is, we can please it. The brightest of Tweeds—the prettiest shades of blue in serges and worsteds, with a range of prices that make choosing an easy matter. Say, $5 to $15 and all the betweens in prices.

A few minutes of your time spent among the suits will tell you more than we can if we used a page of this paper.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Are we going to have a lion or a lamb Sunday to-morrow?

The opposition to the Gas by-law was not all gas, as some people appeared to to think it would be.

The opponents of it measure seem to be in the same mind as Hon. Mr. Ross; they are going to fight.

And in the meantime people who had hoped to room on the system extended and placed on a solid basis will have to wait the pleasure of a few disgruntled people, who apparently begrudge the majority of our citizens the right to run their own affairs.

The philosophical editor of The Colborne Express hands out the following bunch of pelasau:

"There is no need of worrying or fretting because some one has found fault with what you say or do. 'Tis the common lot of men in business; the merchant does not please all his customers, the butcher is forever reminded of his tough beefsteak, and the minister finds it hard to please his congregation with the sermon. The newspaper man gets more than his share of it and is expected to get out a cheerful newspaper just the same. A man befriends another man for years and is turned down and abused. Such things were not always pleasant, but they always have been and doubtless will be so, and the easiest way is to pay the least attention to them and go right along trying to be pleased and useful."

The Bancroft Times notes the following strange occurrence: "A local lumberman, the scene of whose operations is in Monteagle, had men out on snow shoes all last week looking for 900 logs which were left skiding on a mountain last winter. They could find neither logs or mountain. The whole shooting match has disappeared."

TEN SECOND INTERVIEWS.

Ald. Gr——n—"No, there is no truth in the report that, owing to my name, I have been requested to deliver the St. Patrick's day lecture this year."

Ald. Gor——n—"The contract for the erection of the new furniture factory has not been let, but I have no doubt it will be in operation before the shovel factory the Council was talking about last year."

Ald. Ket——r—"Yes, the Band will play on the park this summer. They will play "Bedella," of course."

Ald. Sal——n—"I will told you we were going to get water from Zwick's island? That's a pipe story.

Ald. Mc——r—"There is not a scintge of truth in the report that all employees of the Gas works must wear Tam o' Shanters when the warm weather comes. I'd as soon think of ordering them to wear kilts."

Ald. Par——r—"The tax rate this year will be so low that a cripple will be able to jump over it. Oh, somewhere about 21 mills."

Ald. Mo——r—"No new hose will be brown, not red. Red hose are too giddy for us. This isn't Paris."

Ald. Ang——r—"I'm going to keep the light bill down, if I have to stand on it."

Mayor Chown—"I couldn't really say whether the gold chain is filled or plated."

Ald. McFee—"I've proved that I have sand by putting lots of it on the crossings this winter."

Mr. O'Fl——n—"Yes, I would like to see an Old Boys' Reunion, but not the old dodge. Make it a fixed up."

Mr. J. Guss Por——r—"I am sorry, but I think my professional duties will prevent my accepting the presidency of the O.H.A. next season."

Jailed For Stabbing.

St. Thomas, March 12.—Nicholas Pilo, the Finlander accused of stabbing two young men, Robinson and Currie, at Rodney, was given a trial before Judge Ermatinger yesterday morning, and was found guilty on both charges. The judge took into consideration the fact that Pilo was drunk at the time of the crime was committed, and sentenced him to one month in jail at hard labor.

Committed For Trial.

Brantford, March 12.—At the police court yesterday morning, Joseph Drummond was committed for trial on a charge of wilfully and maliciously perjuring himself in testifying at the trial of Kennedy for the murder of Irene Cole.

Baiting Bones For Bargel.

"No slaves, no slaves," says the Atlas Moor impatiently, "and in this town they are slow to raise them." I want an explanation of this strange complaint.

"What do you mean when you say they are slow to raise them?" I ask.

"In Marrakesh, now," he explains, "dealers buy the healthiest slaves they can find and raise as many children as is possible. Then so soon as the children are old enough to sell they are sold, and when the mothers grow old and have no more children they, too, are sold, but they do not fetch much then."

The infamy underlying this statement takes all words from me, but my informant sees nothing startling in the case and continues gravely:

"From six years old they are sold to be companions, and from twelve they go to the harems. Boys are good, too, for high indeed; $54 I must have paid this afternoon to purchase one, and when Mulai Mohammed ben Arfa ed Dris would have been $20, perhaps less, and for that one would have bought fat slaves. Yes there is one caravan now there were ten of old times."—From "The Slave Market at Marrakesh," in Harper's.

Mary Magdalene's Grave.

Fifteen thousand pilgrims annually visit St. Baume, in Provence, not far from Marseilles, where Mary Magdalene is said to have spent the last thirty years of her life.

The legend, according to the Nouvelle Revue, runs that Mary Magdalene came from Judea in a small boat with Lazarus, Martha, the two Marys and Salome, bringing with them the body of St. Anne, the head of St. James the Less and a few wee bones of the innocents massacred by King Herod. But from early times Provence has been disputed, and the Abbe Duchesne, one of the most erudite writers on the early Christian saints and martyrs, considers that the relics of Mary Magdalene were probably sent from Constantinople about the seventh century. A Greek breviary, however, speaks of the saint as having died at Ephesus.

Nature's Sweet Refrain.

A former assistant secretary of the interior who lives in Washington bears the same name as a poet who hails from Pennsylvania. The ex-official received a letter which he considers a remarkable epistle, and he writer confounded him with the poet and wrote:

Dear friend and statesman: I rise to the earliest call to be so clad as to do me a favor for half trid all clods of paten meter for that deceased lit. de zeal. I read your little pome on Hart deese beglenin ——

"The Hart which sad tumultus beats,

There is nothing equal to Stothart Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has ever given such satisfaction. "A long portage makes a heavy canoe."

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attack. In such persons it would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will follow.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as important as getting it.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, rescues the mucous which clogs up the air tubes, which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup a inestimable value, as it readily and effectually allays all irritation, and hoarseness in the throat. Bronchial troubles, and grave resort to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. It pleasant wish to administer to the little children, and themselves from much anxiety. Large bottles, 25c., so that there procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Whether you do a good business, it is always better to stay where you are. Will positively cure sick headache. Sent prepaid for 25 cents. Address Little Liver Pills. This is not talk. Not trash. Not 10 cents. See ad. Antisewerset. Small pill. Small dose. Small price.

DYSPEPSIA CURED. WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED. HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen,—About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for about two years suffered untold misery, from the terrible complaint. I was at times unable to travel. Walter Woods Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no avail. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try Ayer's Pills of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Vegetable Discovery believing that the proprietors use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.—

AUTHOR OF
"THE LEAVENWORTH CASE."

Jorth with this word or stern command:

"Untie that knot! Why do you leave that dreadful thing fast to her? Untie it. I say, it is killing me; I can not bear the sight." And from trembling she passed to shuddering till her whole body shook convulsively.

The captain, with much consideration, drew the hand he had impulsively stretched toward the ribbon.

"No, no," he protested; "we can not do that! we can do nothing till the coroner comes. It is necessary that he should see her just as she is. Besides, Mr. Jeffrey has a right to the same privilege. We expect this any moment."

The beautiful head of the woman beforwhus shook involuntarily, but her lips made no protest. I doubt if she possessed the power of speech at that instant. A change, subtle, but quite perceptible, had taked place in her countenance at mention of her sister's husband, and though she exerted herself to remain calm, the effort seemed too much for her strength. Anxious to hide this evidences of weakness, she rose impetuously, and then we saw how tall she was. Nine, the long lines of her dress became her, and what a glorious creature she was altogether.

"I will kill him!" she groaned in a deep inward voice. Then, with a certain, forcible haste and in a tone of surprise which to my ear had not quite a natural ring, she called aloud on her who could no longer either hear or speak:

"Oh, Veronica, Veronica! What dead-alive you are to-night! And why do we find you lying here in a spot so far from the scene of action?

"Don't you know?" insinuated the captain, with a mild personsiveness, such as he could assume at will.

"Is you mean that you can not account for your sister's violent end, you, who have lived with her—or so have been told—ever since her mother's?" Mr. Jeffrey?"

Keen and clear the word rang out, fierce in its keenness and almost taunting in its tone. Then, with the handkerchief with which she added

Why Men Die.

Barring accidents, men live just as long as nature continues to supply the waste which is constantly going on in the human economy. We say "He died of old age," that just means that owing to failing powers, the waste exceeded nature's power to repair and death resulted inevitably. If people would live just right, eat just the right kind of food, work just hard enough, take proper exercise, clothe themselves just right and refrain from worry, nature could probably be depended upon to carry them to a ripe old age.

But these conditions in this ideal life is practically impossible and nature must have assistance to repair the extra waste entailed by modern conditions.

FERROL furnishes that assistance in the most concentrated form that science has yet discovered, because it contains in an enduring, concentrated, palatable and easy to digest, God Liver Oil, Iron and Phosphorus—all the elements necessary for perfect nutrition and system builder. If you find your powers failing in any way, do not fail to try FERROL. It will not disappoint you.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS GRATIA WOODSIDE.

A Bright Young Lawyer Who Is Winning Fame in Missouri.

Miss Gratia Evelyn Woodside, daughter of Judge Leigh R. Woodside of the Nineteenth judicial circuit of Missouri, is not only one of the few women practicing lawyers at the Missouri bar, but probably the youngest lawyer in the state. She was admitted to practice immediately on her becoming of age.

Born of many generations of lawyers, Miss Woodside at an early age developed a strong inclination for that profession. When a child of eleven she persuaded her father to accept her as a clerk in his office at Salem, and there during her vacation months she worked assiduously at her father's correspondence, taking the place of an experienced and well qualified clerk.

Her father's clients wondered at the girl's precocity, and when at times she answered questions in her father's absence people were in a quandary to know who the child could be.

Thus Miss Woodside from the beginning became absorbed in the law.

She finished her public school education at Salem, went to the Central Female college at Lexington, advanced to the State university at Columbia and was gradiated from the law department before many girls had thought of anything serious in life.

After graduation she was admitted to the bar at Jefferson City and began to practice of her profession in her father's office at Salem. Later she moved to St. Louis and began work on her own account. Her specialty is real estate cases, and Miss Woodside prefers court work, in which she is remarkably successful, to mere consultation cases.—St. Louis Republic.

About Clothes.

The ladies of the New York Society For Political Study discussed the question the other day whether it is dress or brains that counted most in women's clubs.

One lady declared it was brains; another took the Fabian line of argument and said, "Nobody thinks the more of a woman for her clothes." Still others thought that, while intelligence was the most important, "we can't make guys of ourselves." After adjournment, when they all talked at once, it was decided that, "other things being equal, the woman with the prettiest hat will get there first."

The general conclusion is unquestionably correct.

Brains count most. But one of the uses of brains is that the least important is to construct tasteful and becoming dress.

No woman has brains enough to supply the lack of becoming dress, and no woman of the least intelligence will neglect to dress as tastefully as she can. Shabbiness is not a virtue. It is a disability which brains may overcome, but it is a disability which ought to be avoided. No sensible woman will handicap herself.

Take a Hint From the Actress.

An actress never thinks of washing her face after a performance is over. She instead she smears it over plentifully with cream or some similar preparation sold for removing the "making," which she wipes off with a soft towel. This treatment is not only efficacious in removing every particle of rouge, dust, etc., but it protects the skin when the theater is left, no matter how icy cold a wind may be raging outside. Before going to bed the actress washes her face first in hot water and then in cold, the cold being a sort of tonic to the skin, which without it would be apt to wrinkle. After her ablutions are finished she often applies a little cold cream or something of that nature to her face. Some actresses prefer a powder rag of dust net to a puff or chamois skin. The latter is thought to be too soft and nervestrakes the face as chamois skin is apt to do. A yard of flannel will make over a dozen of these rags, and they are both cheaper and cleaner to use than other things employed for the same purpose.

Wedding Anniversaries.

At the end of the first year comes the cotton wedding. At two years comes the paper; at three the leather. At the close of five comes the wooden. At the seventh anniversary the friends assemble at the woolen. At ten comes the tin; at twelve years the silken and fine linen; at fifteen the crystal wedding. At twenty the friends gather with the china. At twenty-five the married couple that have been true to their vows for a quarter of a century are rewarded with silver gifts. From this period forward the tokens of esteem become more and more valuable. When the thirtieth anniversary comes they are presented with pearls. At the fortieth come rubies. At the fiftieth occurs the golden wedding. Beyond this time the aged couple are allowed to enjoy their many gifts in peace. If, however, by any possibility they should reach their seventy-fifth anniversary they are presented with the rarest gifts to be obtained at the celebration of their diamond wedding.—American Queen.

The Best Hairbrush.

The best hairbrush is one with natural colored bristles, which are softer than the bleached. They do not look so pretty perhaps, but they have more life and vigor and will retain their stiffness far better than the snow white. A brush which has the bristles arranged in rows, with spaces between, grooms the hair more efficiently than one which has the bristles scattered evenly over its surface. The longer the bristles the more work the brush will do at each stroke. "In laying hairbrushes past your money into the bristles, not into the back," is the advice of a woman who sells hairbrushes.

When Baby is Sick.

Do not think of resorting to soothing sirups and similar drugs when baby is fretful. Discover the cause and remove it if possible. If it is a question simply of temper, firm discipline will soon teach the baby that it will get cheerful when its needs are well attended to. To keep up a continual series of rocking, tossing and feeding is not only highly injurious to the child, but makes a perfect slave of both mother and nurse. When a child learns that willful crying avails it nothing it will soon turn its attention to something else. This part of the training cannot be begun too early.

The Ironing Table.

The ironing table should be of such a height that the ironer need not stoop while at work. The wooden top should be free from knots and any tendency to warp. The size must be determined by the space at command in laundry or kitchen. Special tables which, when not needed for work, can be transformed into dressing tables, are not inexpensive furnishing shops, but they are expensive. Besides the adjustable top, they contain drawers for irons and coverings.

Are Women Too Active?

The women of this generation are undoubtedly suffering from lack of occupation. The listless, bored, discontented, unsettled girl of twenty years ago has given place to the restless, energetic and positively desperate fashionable woman thirsting for fresh outlets for employment. We are caught up in the whirlwind of modern unrest, and we imagine we are happy because we have no time to think anything to the contrary.—London Ladies' Field.

Increased Allowance For Dress.

Dress, says a London ladies' journal, like everything else in these days, has completely altered and the standard of dress has risen. What was considered suitable and becoming twenty years ago would be obsolete and impossible today. Thirty years ago £500 or $900 a year was a good allowance for a married woman who went much into society. Nowadays it would hardly pay for her petticoats, gloves, shoes and boots.

Soup.

Soup to be satisfactory must be well flavored and not watery looking. Excess in the quantity of flavors must be guarded against. There must be careful blending of material, with just enough salt to bring out the flavor desired or fresh vegetables combined with good stock or beef extract make good soup. Too much water is used, one teaspoonful to a quart of water is sufficient.

Pantaywash Bags.

A photographer finds the pretty and unique. It is fashioned after the old time slat bonnet save that it has two "curtains," and the slats are in the middle. It is drawn into shape by means of a ribbon run through the material rings sewed two inches from the edge on each curtain. Brocade and plain silk are the best fabrics for this.

A Good Work.

The Woman's Christian association of Atlanta, Ga., provides a comfortable home for forty working girls whose salaries are meager, many working for $3 a week. The minimum price of board is $1.25 per week, but the trustees of the city council appropriates $75 per month toward the expenses of the home.

The Coffeepot.

The coffeepot should not be washed with the other cooking dishes. Have fresh hot water without soap and be sure it is thoroughly boiling and well scalded. Nothing loses its flavor more quickly than coffee if poorly cooked.

Before cleaning out the fireplace in the morning sprinkle a handful of tea leaves among the ashes. It saves a lot of labor and prevents the dust flying about.

Extravagance in table linen is marked by the increasing use of real lace for doilies and centerpieces both an insertion and for the entire article.

RUSSIA'S DANGER IF SHE LOSES THE PRESENT WAR.

POLAND, FINLAND, ARMENIA AND THE JEWS MAY ALL RISE AGAINST HER.

London, March 10. — "If Russia loses in her struggle to hold Manchuria there is a feeling which may be the result to the nation, owners of land and by many classes, miles and so much internal dissatisfaction. With Poland and Finland on the one hand, Armenia on the other side, and with the Jews, Little Russia, the Cossacks, the students and countless other hordes of people who now nurse in secret their wonderful grievances against the Government, with all these dangers menacing a country in its normal condition, what might not be expected of her if these same country were broken by defeat in a war which the great majority of these people would have averted if they had been allowed a voice?"

Thus spoke George Kennan, noted traveller and writer, famed for his exposes in 1885-6, in the Century Magazine, of the horrors of the Siberian exiles' life. Mr. Kennan was in Chicago yesterday at the Grand Pacific Hotel, on his way to Japan to write of the Russo-Japanese war for The Outlook.

"Practically two-thirds of the Russian people are now living under martial law," continued Mr. Kennan. "This has come to pass in a number of years, the discontent and the 'red' revolutionary tendencies of the people making it necessary for the Government to do this. Last year 11,000 people were arrested for political offences against the Government. Five years ago the annual number of arrests for this cause was about 6,000. The increase is strikingly indicative of the gain in popular feeling against the Government.

"It is true that we are hearing from St. Petersburg daily stories of patriotic gatherings of the people, but that is characteristic of all nations at the outbreak of war. When the officials and casualties lengthen up when the number of homes are desolated, when the taxes to pay for the war begin to be wrung from the people, then there may be demonstrations of a different sort.

"This war has been forced upon the Czar against his will. He is the grand dual party and the war party among military circles. The Czar is a weak man, he has no sand, he is dominated by the strongest mind nearest him. The strongest minds wanted war; they forced the Czar to it. He does not stand it did on the Manchuria and Korean questions. But they made great miscalculations. They thought to drag negotiations on until spring, meanwhile preparing for a war strong enough in the Far East to crush Japan at the outset. They did not dream that Japan would strike first and this early.

"This is a war for graft. It is the practice of the Russian Government, whenever it conquers a land by force, to distribute the richest prize among the nobility and the military commanders. Of course, the very richest goes to the Czar's private estate, the domain of the grand party, and after them the military commanders. And so it is the case when Siberia was taken, will be the case if Russia wins in this struggle. Manchuria and Korea will be plucked similarly. That is why grand graft and glory are the military were so anxious for war. They look for graft in Asia.

"What will be the outcome of the war Mr. Kennan was asked.

"It is impossible to tell, at the outset, before the Japanese had destroyed the naval reserves, I thought Russia would make short work of it. Now it looks as though Japan would win. Russia made a great mistake in the start in allowing her fleet to be so divided. A part of it to lay at Port Arthur, another part at Vladivostock, the two valuable ships, the Koriets and the Varyag, at Chemulpo. If these ships all been massed at one point, the story would have been different. I think that the Russian fleet in the Far East is badly handicapped. The naval reserve

HOCKEY.

A Good Game, Though Rather One-Sided.

That Brockville's senior team, when in the heyday of condition, can play strenuous and up-to-date hockey, as our who saw them perform last night will doubt. They get rather decisively trimmed by the locals last night, to be sure, but for all that the eastern lads showed up as a husky, fast crowd, who for a good part of the match kept our boys guessing, and was, if they had better combination, would beat more teams than would beat them. There was but a small crowd in the rink when the game began and it looks as though the O.H.A., in jumping on the Belleville team, had pretty nearly killed hockey in this neck of the woods. However, everybody knows the hard luck the team has had this season, and it certainly appears strange that our sport-loving people should refuse to patronize the best team Belleville ever had, it being probably the last match of the season, too. The game was delayed considerably by the fact that the visitors objected to playing with Reddy McMillan, who appeared on the list for practice with the rest of the team. Their reason for this was that McMillan was, they claimed, under suspension of the O.H.A. Reddy went off and Johnson took his place. It being nearly 9 o'clock when the match began, Mr. "Chancy" Elliott was referee, and this was the way the lads faced each other:

Brockville Goal.
Kenny
Hudson
Pilkie
Dobble
Servos	Rylance
Marks	McGuire
	Barrows
	Brown
	Johnson
	Winchester
Belleville Goal.

The Brockville team, with one exception, took the same as played together all season, and clubs that had they received a fair deal from the O.H.A. would have got into the finals with the Marlboros instead of Perth. Johnson was not right at all afraid of "roughing it up," but they play a fair game as can be gathered from the fact that not one of them was ruled off last night. One of the locals deserved to be, but the offences were minor ones. The players were exactly the same uniforms as those sported by the locals all season, and the latter had to don the white sweaters of the Belleville Trent Valley League team.

The game at first was fairly even, the visitors getting up fast and sticking closely to their checks. Later on, however, the Belleville territory several times, but the latest defence was too strong. Johnston played a clever game between in gilt-edged style, and the other defence men played right up to form. The home team did not appear to be in it for goals in the first half, the forwards, though they showed flashes of brilliant combination, not working in their best style. In the second half, though, they played brilliant hockey, and it is doubtful if, playing as they did then, any team in Canada could come here and beat such lads—not even the Ottawa Hockey Club team. One has to be realized, till he saw the last ten minutes of the last game, that what a really splendid team Belleville had in this year. Individual Brockville seniors look slow and stiff, combining swiftly and neatly and dodging like rue hens. Too bad the boys didn't get fair treatment, Referee Elliott and ends alike the silverware—but that's another story.

Belleville got the first five goals and this Brockville record one. Hudson got the first from his own visitors another, the half-time score being 5-0.

For a short time in the second half the visitors kept up strongly, and almost held their own, then condition and skill began to tell. Belleville got the 6th, 7th and 8th goals and Brockville the 12th, and then the locals added the 9th, 10th, 11th and 13th before time set his wife. After that they failed to get a look in, and Belleville scoring six more and winning the match 16-3.

The Net.

No more gentlemanly team than the Brockvilles has visited Belleville this season.

One of the visitors told the writer that their team would average a 160 lbs. per man. Not featherweights by any means.

The Belleville forward line never worked better than in the second half last night.

Brown, at cover, played one of the best games of his local career, jumping over the visitors sticks like a lamplighter.

The crowd applauded liberally whenever the visitors got in any good work, which was quite often while their wind held out.

Harris has signed for two Belleville and Brockville together in an Eastern League next season.

BROCKVILLE TOOK A CHANCE.

Were Ordered by O. H. A. Not to Play With Belleville.

The following from the Brockville Times, will explain itself and prove interesting to Belleville's lovers of sport:

When the Manager and Secretary of the Brockville Hockey Club arranged for an exhibition match in Belleville to-night with the strong intermediate team of that city they did so with the full knowledge of that organization being under the ban of the Ontario Hockey Association owing to a player of the team named "Reddy" McMillan being professional. Readers of the sports will remember that the Belleville club qualified for the intermediate semi-finals at that stage McMillan's case became the subject of a long and tiresome investigation resulting in not only his disqualification, but the practical temporary expulsion of the club from the association. Belleville was not allowed to completely be stiles and Midland and Stratford fought for the championship, the honor going to Stratford.

The management of the Brockville club, early this week, entered into correspondence with the Belleville club with a view to arranging an exhibition match between the two teams. It was decided that the contest should take place to-night, with the understanding that McMillan should not play. Belleville rightly made this premise in order to protect the team from any complications that might follow. Nothing more was heard of the matter until this morning, when Secretary Wright received the following letter from W. A. Hewitt, Secretary of the O.H.A.:

Dear Sir—I beg to advise you that while the Belleville Hockey Club continues in its present position no club in the O.H.A. can play against the Belleville club and maintain its standing in the association. Kindly bring this to the attention of your committee.

Sincerely yours,
W. A. Hewitt.

The matter was immediately brought by Mr. Wright to the attention of the Brockville club executive, and after a full discussion, it was decided to keep faith with Belleville by the following reasons set forth in a letter written and forthwith posted to Mr. Hewitt:

Brockville, March 11, 1904.
W. A. Hewitt, Esq., Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I have just received your letter regarding the Belleville club and to say that it given us a shock is putting it very mildly. The matter is a complete surprise to us and places us in a very awkward position. We are just leaving to play Belleville to-night, and as our tickets are issued and the men have lost off work—so go, there is nothing for us to do but fill the engagement. It is unfortunate that we were not advised of our attitude in the matter earlier than this, as the engagement with Belleville on the understanding that McMillan, of course, would be debarred from playing, but as he is the only man objectionable we do not see why the latter is also called for.

The Belleville club, of course, has this game thoroughly advertised, and made the contract with us in good faith, and we do not see how we can disappoint them at this late minute.

I feel satisfied that if you leave the matter in its proper light there will be no serious objection.

Yours very truly,
Geo. A. Wright.

The action of the O.H.A. in throwing out a red herring at this late hour, at the last moment was the subject and the possibility of the club being professionalized was talked over in the lodge rooms. Several of the supporters of the team expressed themselves strongly against backing the chance and strongly advised cutting out the game with Belleville on the ground that it would be impossible to get into a snarl with the O.H.A., should the club be desirous of retaining its connection with the O.H. A. Then, too, it would be a brilliant and hard matter to get a team reinforced in amateur once their amateur standing has been jeopardized in this fashion.

On the other hand it is said that Brockville has no fears to ask of the O.H.A. that they forfeit the game and throw them out in Mr. Hewitt's letter as the club is evidently willing to play away from it and next season forming one of the associations with other dissatisfied clubs in this section would be the result. The matter was finally decided by the past season's results in the matters of dates affecting this same group. The letter was then rolled open to play home and away matches, and in addition to this bringing the season to an unwarranted early close and making the matches so as fast that it was impossible for the teams to play their dates and keep the schedule. Mr. Wright expressed the sense of the feeling of the club in the matter, the outlook will be watched with interest. Secretary Wright went to Belleville this afternoon by the advice and upon the services of McBride, who refused to play. Fuller will not be taken by Pilkey, the cover-point of the Granites.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Stratford keeps the cup, they having defeated Brantford in the final by a game which, if the telegraphic reports are true, was full of assault and battery. The score was 4 to 3 in the westerners claiming that three of the Kitawas' goals were scored on offsides and that the referee grossly favored the home side. These tales are wearisome, still it's better to get a team go down fighting than "quit cold." like the Marlboros did.

It may safely be asked: What right had the O.H.A. to order any club to refrain from playing exhibition games with Belleville? Ex-Lieut. Nelson, Hewitt, McPherson, et al, please carry it home that it is.

Talk about your Stanley Cup championships, etc., but we rise to remark that Belleville has a record approached by no other club in Canada, having been left out of the O. H.A. two years in succession for having too good a team.

A nice eight-club hockey league, beginning at Belleville and going east as far as Cornwall, seems to be about the correct thing for next season. And it's coming, sure, and the lovers of people change their minds before the snow flies next winter.

Russians Set Fire to Town of Wiju on the Yalu and Retreat Across the Yalu Into Manchuria—Czar's Soldiers Are Falling Back Before Japanese Advance.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Seoul, March 12.—It is reported here that the Russians have set fire to the town of Wiju, on the Korean side of the Yalu river, and have retreated across the river into Manchuria.

A complete Russian evacuation, according to the report, is proceeding, due to the Japanese advance towards the north.

A cavalry skirmish occurred at Kasan, north of Anju, Corea, on March 8th, in which the Russians were driven back. Their losses are unknown.

Tien-Tsin, March 12.—It is reported here that it is feared the Japanese captured New Chwang. This is not generally considered as likely. It is believed, however, that the Japs have really landed in Liao Tung peninsula and cut off Port Arthur from communication. It is further ascertained that a Japanese force is within twenty-five miles of New Chwang.

PROF. SHORTT LECTURED

ON "SOME CHARACTERISTICS OF GLADSTONE" IN ST. AGNES' SCHOOL LAST NIGHT.

Prof. Shortt, of Queen's University, gave a most interesting lecture last evening on "Some Characteristics of Gladstone" at St. Agnes' School. The lecturer stated at the outset that it was not his intention to take up the life of the great statesman from a biographical point of view. This work had been admirably done by Mr. John Morley. Prof. Bryce and others. Incidentally Prof. Shortt mentioned that he preferred reading standard biographies to current works of fiction, as in the former one studies real characters while in the latter the characters were imaginary and often impossible. The purpose of the lecture was to show how the best personality of Mr. Gladstone found expression in the political and economic history of Britain during the sixty years of his public life. The lecturer showed how important it is to understand the individual point of view of statesmen before judging their acts. This furnishes the key to the explanations Mr. Gladstone's apparent inconsistencies. In a masterly way the lecturer traced the influence of Mr. Gladstone's high ideals and broad humanitarianism, not only on British politics, but also on the whole continent of Europe.

At the conclusion of the lecture a vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Ritchie, seconded by Col. Denton and heartily concurred in.

Mr. E. F. Wilburn contributed a couple of solos which were well received.

The choir was most acceptably filled by Mr. J. T. Luton, M.A.

Prof. Shortt before returning to Kingston to-day spent a couple of hours in visiting the points of interest in the city. He takes a deep interest in all commercial matters and among other places inspected the premises of the Belleville Hardware Co. and expressed himself as much pleased with the present industrial prospects of the city.

MOTION TO QUASH THE GAS BY-LAW.

NOTICE SERVED ON THE CITY CLERK YESTERDAY — MAY BE OVERRIDDEN BY LEGISLATURE.

It being reported that a notice of motion to quash the Gas By-law had been served upon the City Clerk, our reporter this morning called upon that official to make enquiries. He learned that the notice in question had been served by Mr. R. Mosier, solicitor for Mr. Geo. N. Leavens, who is the petitioner. The City Clerk was aware that the Mayor had requested him to withhold information in regard to the motion from the press, and he had done so. The news apparently leaked out through channels hostile to the city authorities.

Mr. Mikel also said that every effort would be made to have the By-law before the Legislature passed, and this action of the City Council would override any other proceedings which might be taken. The motion might also be quashed when argued before the High Court at Osgoode Hall.

Stirling is Progressive.

Mr. J. W. Pearce, M.P.P., has introduced to the Legislature an Act to Consolidate the Debt of the Village of Stirling, which has passed its second reading. The Bill provides for borrowing $10,000 on debentures to be payable in 20 years, the average number—$2,500 on account of High School debentures, $500 for cement sidewalks debentures, $1,250 for payment of over outstanding indebtedness, and the rest, $5,746 is required for the rebuilding of White's Bridge, and for the construction of cement sidewalks. The ratepayers have been very favorable in bad condition, and have set about in the way to make them permanent.

PARLIAMENT CONVENED

Commoners Informed of the Legislative Program.

Speech From the Throne—Government Fails to Recommend Any Legislation of Unusual Interest—The Grand Trunk Pacific Modified Agreement the Chief Item—The Introduction of New Members—Sir Wilfrid Amused.

Ottawa, March 12.—Parliament was formally opened by Lord Minto yesterday afternoon. As this will probably be the last opening at which the present Governor-General will officiate before his term of office expires an unusually large crowd was present to witness the ceremonies.

The Speech From the Throne.

The speech from the throne was as follows:

Hon. gentlemen of the Senate: Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

In again meeting you in Parliament it is our first duty to express our heartfelt thanks to a beneficent Providence for the abundant harvest with which the country has been favored during the past year, and for the general prosperity that prevails in all parts of the Dominion.

Trade and Immigration.

It is very gratifying to note that the yearly increasing trade of Canada, which has been so marked a feature of the past six years, gives no indication of any abatement, while the number of settlers seeking homes in Manitoba and the Territories is without a parallel in the history of the country. These two very important facts lend irresistibly to the conclusion that long before the transcontinental railway authorized by Parliament at its last session can possibly be completed its urgent necessity as a medium for carrying the products of the West to our own seaboard for export will have become apparent independent of the many benefits that will follow from the opening up for colonization and settlement enterprises of the northern parts of Quebec and Ontario.

G. T. Pacific Agreement.

The agreement made with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company regarding a new trans-continental railway, and containing certain stipulations which, in effect, requires the G.T.R. Company of Canada to become a party to that agreement, and to assume heavy obligations in connection therewith.

Further consideration of the agreement by the representatives of the Grand Trunk Railway Company and my Government has resulted in showing the desirability of certain amendments to the contract which, having been approved by my Government, and subsequently by the Board of Directors and the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Company, will be submitted to you for ratification.

The sum of $3,500,000 in cash has been deposited in the Bank of Montreal in accordance with the provisions contained in the original and supplemented agreements with the company.

New Militia Bill.

A Militia Bill will be introduced containing several important amendments to the present law, rendered necessary by the growth of the force and calculated to promote its efficiency.

A copy of the award defining the boundary between the Dominion and Alaska and other papers connected with the controversy will be laid before you.

In view of the widely extended settlements now forming in the Territories, it will become necessary to increase the strength of the Northwest Mounted Police force, and authority will be asked for that purpose.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

The accounts of the past year will be laid before you. I am glad to say that the revenue will exceed the expenditure, leaving a balance to be applied in reduction of the public debt.

The estimates for the coming year will be laid before you at an early date.

A Short Session.

Hon. gentlemen of the Senate: Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

After the long protracted session of the last year, when so many important measures were dealt with, it is not probable that your duties will involve upon you labor unusual on the present occasion for any lengthened period. I commend, however, to your best consideration the subjects to which I have referred and I invoke the Divine blessing on your deliberations.

New Members Introduced.

The proceedings in the Commons were brief. Six members elected at the recent by-elections were introduced. Mr Rivet of Hochelaga, was introduced by the Premier and Hon. Sydney Fisher. Armand Lavergne, the 23-year-old representative of Montmagny, was introduced for his sponsors Sir Wilfrid and Louis Lavergne. Mr. Rivet, Brassard and Mr. Archambeault of Kinnon of Prince Edward Island, introduced Mr. Hazard of West Queen's.

These introductions brought forth loud applauses, which had barely faded away when Mr. R. L. Borden and Mr. Clarke entered with Mr. Armstrong of Lambton. The Opposition was energetically applauding when Sir Wilfrid Laurier stood up with the evident intention of making a formal motion.

"Hold on there, we have two more," shouted an enthusiastic Opp-ositionist, and the Prime Minister, very much amused, made way for the introduction of Mr. J. J. Donnell of East Bruce, by Mr. Borden and Ed. Clarke, and John W. Daniels of St. John, by Mr. Borden and Mr. A. A. Lavergne.

Contract Nearly Printed.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated in reply to Mr. Borden that the Grand Trunk Pacific contract, as amended, would be placed at the disposal of members to-day. He introduced a few formal motions relating to the election of standing committees, and then moved the adjournment of the House.

LATCHFORD WARY NOW

Not Now So Ready to Make Promises to Mr. Gamey.

Man From Manitoulin Asked Why Amount Voted for Roads in 1903 was Not Expended, Was Told An Overseer Couldn't Be Found—But Government Will Not Accept His Good Offices in Discovery.

Toronto, March 12.—The Legislature sat for an hour and a half yesterday, when a number of questions and orders for return of correspondence were wiped off the order paper. Hr. Ryan, Archibald said when the Province took over the fisheries in 1898 there were eleven pond net licenses. There was some opposition to the granting of these licenses.

Road Expenditure.

Mr. Gamey also got an order for a return regarding the appointment of any person to oversee the expenditure of the sum of $400 granted in 1902 for repairs between Kendrick's and Long Bay on Manitoulin Island. He said it was extraordinary that the Government could not get an overseer; if it had applied to him he could find one. The grant was made just previous to the election of 1902, and as it was not was offered to six or seven different persons. The grant ought to have been expended in 1903, and he would undertake to get an overseer and not certificate expected.

Mr. Latchford could not find any papers. He did not know why it was so, because it was the only case of a road grant being made and no correspondence being on file. He rather strange that the hon. gentleman, when he sat for Manitoulin and with the Government, did not call attention to the matter.

Mr. Gamey Has Promises.

Mr. Gamey wanted to know why the Minister did not say whether the grant would be renewed.

Mr. Latchford said he made no promises.

Mr. Whitney thought the Minister had profited by his past experience. He went on to speak of the time when Mr. Gamey was in the favor of the Government and everything he asked for, which the Distinguished Commissioners referred to as a "policy of conciliation."

Mr. Duff's gift on order for a return relating to the application of one John Eastall, to be received as patient in the General Hospital at Huntsville, and to the proceedings taken to remove him from the hospital and to commit him as a vagrant.

Pool Room at Port Erie.

Mr. Downey directed the Attorney-General's attention to a despatch in the Globe re the existence of a pool room near Port Erie. The despatch was in reply to Mr. Gibson's statement given the Globe a few days ago to the effect that a Government official had investigated a complaint and had found that there was no pool room in operation at Bridgeburg.

Mr. Gibson: Is the hon. gentleman going to make a speech?

Mr. Downey: Between him and the Attorney-General explained the affair. He had said that he had made enquiries which found that there was no pool room in Bridgeburg, but the representative of the Globe desired an enquiry, which would be instituted. Everyone knew that gambling was no secret of it, that there was a pool room at Port Erie, and he had stated that he was anxious to get rid of that pool room, because it was under the control of unbearable. Mr. Downey knew that it was the intention of the Government to get rid of the pool room, and he was desirous of giving his hon. friend the guise of privilege, if hon. gentlemen insisted on calling it that, the Government, it was rather to be deprecated.

Mr. Whitney hoped he did not understand the Attorney-General to say that one member of the House had any privilege not enjoyed by the other members. Mr. Downey had merely asked if the attention of the Attorney-General had been brought to the alleged existence of the pool room in question.

The subject then dropped.

Care of Neglected Children.

Mr. Graham got a return of correspondence between the Government and the president of the Children's Aid Society of Brockville, and a statement to the arrest and imprisonment of certain young lads in 1902-3 and 1903.

Mr. Hendrie's Appointment.

The Minister of Education informed Mr. Gamey that Mr. Houston was appointed on March 3, 1900, inspector of schools of Manitoulin, St. Joseph and Cockburn Islands, and of other schools in the townships of Rutherford and Carlyle at $720 a year, without allowance for travelling expenses. On Nov. 7, 1901, 5 schools at the north end of Lake Temiskaming were added, and an increase of $60 to the salary, and on Jan. 16, 1902, 40 schools in Mr. McCraig's district were put under Mr. Houston's inspectorate, making 110 in all, for which he was paid $12 a school or $1,320. On May 9, 1902, the salary was made $1,800, with traveling expenses, and on June 24, 1903, his inspectorate was changed, he being appointed to look after the Island of St. Joseph, a portion of Algoma and schools at the north end of Lake Temiskaming. He was required to give his full time for the salary of $1,800. Since Dec. 31 last he has not been a public school inspector. In regard to the question, "Did Mr. Houston threaten any member of the Government that certain damaging facts would be made known, or that he would become a candidate for the Legislature unless his position was favorably considered by the Government?" Mr. Harcourt said he had no knowledge of any such threats. Neither did Mr. Harcourt know whether Mr. Houston was a member of the political staff of Toronto.

To Mr. St. John the Attorney-General said J. J. Kehoe was District Attorney for Algoma since March 6, 1904. He had received the nomination for the House of Commons and had resigned in January, but the resignation had not been accepted, no conclusion having been arrived at as to the appointment of his successor.

The Attorney-General informed Mr. Powell that the Government was aware of the existence of mortgages on the railway and steamship lines of the Lake Superior Consolidated, but could not state the amounts.

First Readings.

Mr. Hendrie introduced a bill respecting the Hamilton Radial Electric Railway Co.; Col. Munro, to confirm bylaw 519 of the County of Oxford; Dr. Jessop, to incorporate the St. Catharines, Pelham and Welland Electric Railway Co.; Mr. Guilbord, to incorporate certain schools in the town of Sturgeon Falls, Mr. Dunbope, respecting the Lanadak-Bancroft and Ottawa Railway Co.; Mr. Cunnes, to incorporate the Mount McKay Falls Co. and Kaministiqua Railway Co.

Letter to Mr. Gates.

Mr. Crawford made an attempt to have the House censure Mr. Gates from the City of Toronto arising out of the election proceedings at the City Hall. The time for the reception of bills to amend the Municipal Act having expired, the Government refused to make an exception in this case.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Ex-Policeman Accused of Killing Veteran of South Africa.

W. E. Hamilton of Ottawa Said to Have Struck J. Fitzgerald in the Abdomen Which Lacerated an Internal Organ and Caused Death—$3,000 Diamond Robbery in Toronto—Janitor Clerk in Wallaceburg Bank Commits Suicide.

Ottawa, March 12.—W. S. Hamilton, restaurant keeper, Metcalfe-street, formerly a member of the Ottawa police force, and previously a member of the Montreal police force, was arrested on Saturday night, charged with the murder of John Fitzgerald, until recently a member of the Dublin Fusiliers and a veteran of the South African war.

Fitzgerald was in the Oxford Cafe on Friday night, getting a meal, and is alleged to have been under the influence of liquor. He became disorderly and was ejected. In the assault it is charged that Hamilton gave him a blow on the abdomen, which lacerated an internal organ, resulting in death.

Fitzgerald was left lying on a snowbank, and Constable White, who happened along, believing him to be drunk, called the patrol and he was taken to the police station. After being there for some time, Fitzgerald began to complain with pain, and Dr. Potter, who was in the police court room giving evidence at an inquest, was called down. He looked Fitzgerald over and said there was nothing wrong with him.

The prisoner, however, groaned all night, and this morning the patient was too ill to appear in court to answer a charge of drunkenness laid against him. Dr. Charbol, police physician, was called and pronounced the man seriously ill. He was taken to the Catholic Hospital and made ready for an operation to permit an operation to be performed.

At 4 o'clock Saturday, at the request of Dr. Potter, Police Sergt. Gilbody, Detective O'Mera and Ald. Culbert, as a magistrate, took the ante-mortem statement. The man said he was a stranger in the city and did not know even the name of the street upon which the row took place. He was assaulted by a big man and a smaller one. He died shortly after making the statement, and Dr. Bapie, coroner, ordered an inquest.

A warrant was issued at 10 o'clock, and Hamilton was arrested, charged with murder. He took it coolly and said there was no row in his place.

This morning Edward VanNairon, a collector, was arrested as the little man in the fray, but was subsequently released. Fitzgerald, the object of his pentance, belonged to Southampton, Eng. He was about 30 years of age. For a while since coming to Canada he worked on the C.P.R. near Sudbury.

DIAMOND THEFTS.

Harold Webster and Thomas Fair Charged With Stealing $5,000 Worth.

Toronto, March 14.—One of the best evidences of how a young man from the country finds life in the city too much for his better self was revealed in the arrest of two young men on Saturday afternoon by Detectives Duncan and Verney. They are: Harold Webster, an employe of the P. W. Ellis Company, who is charged with stealing a large quantity of diamond jewelry from his employer, and Thomas Fair, who is charged with receiving and disposing of the stolen property. While the amount of the goods stolen has not yet been ascertained, it is thought that $5,000 will cover the pilferings. The stolen articles consisted principally of diamond sunbursts, diamond and pearl brooches, diamond pins and rings; only the most valuable goods having been taken.

Fast Men and Loose Women.

Webster is only 20 years of age. He came to Toronto when 16 years old from his home in Acton. When he arrived in the city he was ambitious, energetic, eager to make his way in the world, with the bright prospects of some time in the future becoming a wholesale merchant himself and a leader in business circles. For a time he led an exemplary life, until last summer he became the tool of an unscrupulous man, much older than himself. From that time his downfall has been rapid. He strayed away from home at night, mixed with fast men and loose women. His companion was a rival in a small way, and placed himself

PUBLIC OPINION.

There is no way in which the feelings of the people towards a party in power can be better gauged than at a general election, when both parties are fighting for supremacy. Then the party in power have an advantage, owing to the patronage which they have at their disposal, and the fear which employees of a Government have of their employers.

These causes are much more effective at bye-elections, hence when the majorities secured at a general election are largely decreased at a bye-election, no better evidence can be found of the waning popularity of a Government. In this respect the late eight bye-elections are significant, indicating as they do the increasing unpopularity of the Laurier Government. Consult the figures and there can be no mistaking their meaning.

Here is a comparative statement of the majorities secured by the successful candidates in eight constituencies in 1900 and 1904:

In the eight constituencies in which bye-elections were held in the last month the majorities in 1900 were:

	Con.	Lib.
East Bruce, Ont.	43
East Lambton, Ont.....	221
St. John, N.B.		997
Queen's, P.E.I.		285
Hochelaga, Que.		635
St. James, Que.		1041
St. Hyacinthe, Que.		1111
Montmagny		213
Total majorities	264	5332

The Liberal majority in these constituencies in 1900 was 5068. Now, let us compare the result of these eight elections with the result which followed the eight bye-elections held in February, inclusive:

The majorities in 1904 were:

	Con.	Lib.
East Bruce, Ont.	290
East Lambton, Ont.	558
St. John, N.B.	329
Hochelaga, Que.		801
Queen's, P.E.I.		285
St. James, Que.		636
St. Hyacinthe, Que.		195
Montmagny, Que.		200
Total majorities	1021	1717

A falling off in the majorities for the Liberals in eight constituencies of 3615, and a gain for the Conservatives of the significant figures of 1027, speak for themselves.

Comment upon these figures is unnecessary. Reiterating as they do what may be expected when an opportunity is offered at a general election.

Evidence of the gain in the ranks of the Conservative party is being furnished wherever bye-elections are held. Since the polling in the eight constituencies referred to above four bye-elections have been held in the province of Quebec to fill vacancies which have occurred in the House of Assembly in that province. These four constituencies were held by the Liberals, their representatives having been elected at the general election, either by acclamation or by large majorities. At the bye-elections held on the 10th inst. two of these constituencies were captured by the Conservatives, Fortneuf and Maskinonge, by majorities of 250 and 200. The other two constituencies were retained by the Liberals, but by reduced majorities.

So the good work goes on. Elections are simply the fair first love, and a general turnover may be confidently looked for whenever an opportunity is offered the people to give expression at the polls to their views.

A PLEASING RECITAL

WAS THAT GIVEN BY THE PUPILS OF MRS. MacCOLL AT ST. AGNES' SCHOOL ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

There was a very large attendance at St. Agnes' School hall on Saturday afternoon, when the pupils of Mrs. MacColl gave an invitation recital. The programme, a most enjoyable one, consisted of violin numbers by Misses Nettie Sharpe, Amy Wallbridge, Stella Pringle and Addie Potter; and piano numbers by Misses Kathleen Vermilyea, Jessie Wallbridge, Winnifred Allen, Florence Haynes, Addie Potter and Master Mac Watters. It was apparent to all who heard the sweet music produced by the youthful performers that the teaching powers of that talented lady, Mrs. MacColl, are not by any means waning, but improving all the time. The next recital will be eagerly looked forward to.

FRESH BALTIMORE OYSTERS

We are selling the finest Baltimore Standards at 60c per quart, and selects at 50c per quart. We will go nearing the above all through East, Ice cream and Ice cream sodas.—Ed. F. Dickens.

A Farewell Surprise.

On the evening of the 9th of March, about 30 of the old friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jones, of Gilbert Plains, Manitoba, gathered at the residence of their daughter, Mrs. John Clapp, of the 5th concession of Ameliasburg, where they have been visiting for some weeks, to bid them good-bye and a safe journey to their western home, where they have been residing for the past six years. After tea had been served by the ladies, the remainder of the evening was spent in social chat, games and music. At 11 o'clock refreshments were called and all joined in singing very feelingly "God be with you till we meet again." Mr. John Turner, of Sidney, then closed the evening with an appropriate prayer. Very successfully indeed were the farewells spoken for Mr. and Mrs. Jones were dearly loved by all who knew them, and they may be spared to their many friends whose warmest feelings follow them to their far distant home.

TRY TO PREVENT LUNG TROUBLE.

It's the dried sputum floating around in the air that gets into your lungs and causes consumption. A sure preventive is fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which is inhaled right into the lungs, kills every germ, heals the sore membranes and cures thoroughly every type of catarrh, bronchitis and lung trouble. "I caught a severe cold, which developed into catarrh and finally settled on my lungs," writes Mr. A. Northrop, of Bedford. "Catarrhozone relieved quickly and cured me. I recommend Catarrhozone highly." Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

The Hardiness of Trees.

An expert nurseryman says the hardiness or tenderness of trees depends largely upon where the seeds from which the trees in question sprang came from. Satisfactory results are seldom experienced by planting a seed obtained from the sunny south-way. By planting seeds generally farther north, however, trees may be at length hardened and acclimated until a seed from such a tree may be reasonably expected to thrive and mature its fruits.

Trees, like people, acquire their habits from the climate in which they live. The northern tree knows instinctively when the time has come to ripen its fruits. The southern tree follows the same instinct, being in no hurry, as there is little likelihood of real cold. With transplantings farther north its habit changes.

The great trouble with most people is that they want to jump a tree from south to north at one move. This same idea is evident in the attempt to bring various fruit trees from Russia to the northern United States.

Apples and plums from the land of the great white czar have taken kindly to the below zero conditions of the genial Dakotas.

Queer Korean Ways.

The women of the commonalty are voluble and vixenish and ever ready to slap a handful of stars into the eyes of a husband or into those of a timid and shrinking tourist should the occasion arise. The women of the upper class are rigorously excluded from masculine eyes, and a hearty vote of thanks is due the censorship that fathered this unwritten law. The dainty little Japanese musmee, teetering along in sandals or on wooden pats, is a genuine relief to the eye after a view of the uncomely Korean woman.

Until Korean boys are married and acquire the pseudo dignity of the topknot their hair is worn after fashion in twin plaits down their backs. So much do they resemble girls that it is sometimes difficult to determine the sex, and one is oftentimes uncommonly surprised to observe what he is positive are two girls sprawling and viciously fighting in a Korean street.

A Wife's Stratagem.

A London journal tells an admirable story of beauteous Kesa, who loved her husband, but who was herself sought by her wicked and powerful cousin, Molito. Knowing that Molito would take her husband's life unless circumvented by guile, she told a terrible plot. Summoning Molito, she told him that on a certain night her husband would be sleeping in a certain room and that she intended to unloosen his hair so that under no circumstances could he be mistaken for another man. On the night in question Molito entered the room, severed the sleeper's head with his sword and, holding it up to the moon by the hair, beheld the face of Kesa herself.

Customs of Colliers' Wives.

The wives of north country colliers observe a very touching and pathetic custom when an accident occurs in the pit. Directly it is known to the wife of a collier that an accident has happened in the pit where her husband works and that his fate is uncertain, she throws open the house door, and, however inclement the weather may be, she keeps the door open and a candle burning in the window, night and day, till the man is brought home, dead or alive. In some cases the door has remained open and the candle alight during several weeks.—London Chronicle.

Dogs as Collectors.

Dogs with collecting boxes attached to their collars are comparatively common in Europe. It may not, however, be generally known what large sums they earn for the charities they represent. It is stated in the Animal World that one which used to beg for a hospital in Ireland collected in five years nearly £15,000. He had a special banking account, which was submitted periodically to a chartered accountant.

Philosophy.

If we would realize the fact that life is pain, not pleasure, our quarrel with it would be gone, and we would accept thankfully a little scrap of dripping on our daily bread, but we go on expecting happiness, and, empty plate in hand, beggars to an invisible cook, and we grow old standing there, but we won't budge.—Olive Mathers.

Macbeth as a Comedian.

She—I suppose you attended the amateur theatricals last night? He—Yes, and there wasn't a dry eye in the house. She—The idea! I never heard of "Macbeth" affecting an audience that way before. He—No. You see, we simply laughed till we cried.

A Reminder.

Singleton—I say, old chap, what have you that string around your finger for? Wedderly—To remind me of something I am to get for my wife. Singleton—What are you to get? Wedderly—Why—e—I've forgotten what it was.

They Were Not There.

"Are these men the future husbands of our daughters?" said a matron at the afternoon swell wedding reception.

"No," said a knowing mother. "They are downtown, making a living."

Too Much Chin.

Gasaway—My razor's in pretty poor condition. I believe I'm tired. You know, they say razors get that way. Sharply (wearily)—Ah, yes; tired of your chin.

THE GREAT EASTERN STOCK Co.

- - - Distributors of Underprice Merchandise - - -

Is the happy hunting ground for prudent buyers and the mecca of money savers, this fact is proven day by day and especially is this so of yesterday and to-day. "THESE SPECIALS" for these two days will hold good until 10.30 to-night, no longer.

More visitors are finding enjoyment throughout the store. More sales in our Dress Goods and Silk Department. More parcels passing through our doors. More dollars going into our cash boxes. More people lingering with enjoyment feasting their eyes on new arrivals, in fact there is more life everywhere throughout the store.

One point we cannot determine, namely:—how much of this progress is due to general conditions and how much to the special attractions created by our business policy, these forces work in harmony for us, but they contain an indefinite element that will puzzle the analyzer.

And, by the way, you may think it impertinent that we ask your attention to the details of our business, if so you are mistaken, as our business has interest for you. Of course there are other stores in Belleville, good one's, too, but a good store has power to lift other stores, each takes tone from the one next in advance. Therefore when we put this store in operation for the distribution of underprice goods, we took a strong constructive position in contemporary retail trade. "And even the battering rams could not change the tide," as the justice loving people took up the cry, and are making this enterprise (as we have the best of reasons to believe) the economic centre for frugal buyers, therefore our position is endorsed and power fixed.

Admit these propositions and our contention that our business has interest for you needs no argument, therefore we bid you welcome even though you do not spend one dollar with us, we want you to come and see what we are doing in the way of bettering the condition of the buying public. Keep in mind we are headquarters in all lines of domestics.

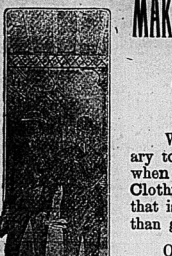
MAKE YOURSELF NECESSARY .. TO SOMEBODY ..

(Emerson)

We have made ourselves necessary to a great many "somebodies," when it comes to the question of Clothing. We know of nothing that is more of a necessity to-day than good Clothing.

Our showing of New Spring Styles in men's Suits has never been equalled, even in our own store, and an inspection of them will most surely convince you how necessary we are to a man's comfort and w elfare.



No matter what your taste for clothes is, we can please it. The brightest of Tweeds—the prettiest shades of blue in serges and worsteds, with a range of prices that make choosing an easy matter. Say, $5 to $15 and all the betweens in prices.

A few minutes of your time spent among the suits will tell you more than we can if we used a page of this paper.

TIMELY TOPICS.

At last we had a fine Sunday.

And slant one young fellow on Front street was heard to say that it was too fine to go to church!

He was, at the time, smoking a coffin nail, which smelt as though his coat was on fire.

And still we send away men and money to try and round up the Lesbians!

There are the days when a puncture in one's rubber is soon found out.

Up to the hour of going to press the O.H.A. had not ordered the Belleville and Brockville players to be hanged.

Lawn mowers and bicycles are making their appearance in store windows. They're harbingers of summer all right.

The man on the next block says he thinks there will be good sleighing right up to Christmas.

Talking on Saturday night, an Alderman expressed himself strongly in regard to the opposition to the Gas By-law. "I don't understand," he said, "what anybody has to gain by trying to burk the by-law. The worst they can do is to cause delay and that will. Even if the by-law was quashed for irregularities the Council would at once re-submit it to the people, and the majority then would be nearer 600 than 16. However, I think the Private Bills Committee will see that they have the case stated, straighten out matters without delay. It will not take another week for us to see things in their true colors."

The poor gas on Saturday night, we were informed, was caused by a boar frost in the pipes. It is something for which nobody is to blame, and will soon pass away, being caused by the variable temperature.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Captured After Two Days' Fighting.

San Domingo, March 14.—After severe fighting, which lasted for two days, Nan Juan de Mararite has been recaptured by the Government forces.

President Morales returned here Saturday night with 2,000 troops, leaving Louis Tejena to act as Governor of the town. The rebel leader Rodriguez escaped. Many men were killed or wounded on both sides during the fighting.

READ IT THROUGH.

Twould Spoil This Story to Tell It in the Headlines.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harman, of Wells Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and I was afraid that he would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured him. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so good a medicine within reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For sale by all druggists.

The truthfulness of what a man says doesn't always depend on the amount of noise he makes in saying it.

A McEmma's Delusion.

Dean Pigou tells the following story of a brilliant man who lost his mind temporarily through overwork and was confined in an English asylum: "The delusion was that his stomach was full to repletion of rats. There was no room for anything else. Food said to me, 'Go and talk with him and lead up to the subject of rats.' I found him, as is very common, perfectly sane on every subject but this. After some conversation I said to him, feigning not to know who he was: 'You seem to be a very well informed man. Have you given your attention to natural history, because I notice that the question is being discussed as to whether the species of the genus rat called the Norwegian still exists?' Instantly he replied, 'Oh, certainly,' and unbuttoning his dress, said, 'Every known species of rat, sir, is here in my stomach,' and, localizing the rat with his finger, said: 'Here in this part of my stomach is a Norwegian rat. You can assure your friends that as long as I am alive no species can die.' Under the kind and humane treatment of Bethlehem he was soon at work again and had, of course, no recollection of his delusion."

Reading in Bed.

Commenting upon the recent discussion of the habit of reading in bed, American Medicine concludes that if the position is literally prone the habit is bad, because in such a position the eyes are fixed upon the book in a straining and harmful way and the book cannot be sufficiently illuminated.

But if one sits propped up by pillows, in much the same position of the head and trunk as when in a chair, there can be no evil consequences, provided a good rich light is properly placed behind and at one side of the head.

The greatest argument for reading in bed is that the attention is not distracted by the discomfort of the body, the noises and interruptions usual at other times. Let one take an erect position of the body and head, and pursued he has a good oculist and that his light is strong, white, steady and properly placed. He may then read with impunity until drowsiness cautions him to stop.

Long Range Prayer.

The Swiss mountaineers have a custom of calling through speaking trumpets at dusk each evening. "Praise the Lord!" This call may be started by one herdsman and is answered by others from neighboring peaks, the sound being much prolonged as it reverberates from one mountain to another. After a short interval, supposedly devoted to prayer, a herdsman calls in the same manner, "Good night!" this, too, being repeated by his fellows. Then all retire to their huts. The impressiveness of these calls, echoing and re-echoing from rock and mountain to mountain, can easily be imagined.

Asking a Great Deal.

"Yes, sir," said the lady principal of the college for girls, "we are proud of the thoroughly athletic training we give our students. We see that they have every attention from competent instructors and develop their physique along with their intellect."

"Um—yes!" observed the father. "You make them strong and lively, do you?"

"That is one of our chief aims."

"Well, do you think you could educate Lizzie here so that in time she will be strong enough to help me murder do the dishwashing when the cook is on strike?"

Spared the Historian.

On one occasion during Mommsen's residence in Italy, when making an excursion in the neighborhood of Rome with some ladies, the party was stopped by brigands. The latter, while busy rifling the company's pockets, inquired their names. Some bolder Mommsen," was the choleric professor's indignant reply, whereupon the chief of the band stayed his hand. He said he would scorn to rob one who had done so much for Italy's renown.

A Misdeed Delivered.

Aunt Clara (to her young nephew, who has just brought a bucket into the parlor where she is entertaining some grecious, Tommy, what are you doing with that bucket? Take it down to the kitchen at once. Tommy—I want you to kick it, Aunt Clara, 'cause I heard papa saying when you kick the bucket we'd get at the very least $25,000.

Panama.

It is supposed by some that Panama derived its name from the native word for butterfly. Explorers of the interior tell of swarms of butterflies which at times rise on the slopes of the mountains in dense clouds, darkening the sunshine. Others maintain that the name is from an Indian word meaning abounding in fish.

A Reminder.

"There," said the tailor; "that suit certainly fits you perfectly."

"Yes, indeed. You may justly feel proud of that," replied the customer. "It's a credit to you."

"Well—er—I hope you won't forget it's a debt to you."—Exchange.

Respect.

"Children don't seem to have as much respect for their parents as formerly."

"No," answered the cynic, "and I have never quite been able to make up my mind whether this is because modern children are less dutiful or more discerning."

Measuring Brides.

Measuring brides for leggies is the remarkable ceremony which annually takes place in St. Cyrus, a quaint little village in Kincardineshire, Scotland, on the brink of the German ocean.

More than fifty years ago a native of the village, who had been paymaster general of the Indian army, bequeathed a sum of money, the interest of which was, for all time coming, to be disbursed in five equal parts every year. One part was for the purchase of meal for the poor, while the remainder was set aside to be divided among each year's four conspicuous brides—the oldest, the youngest, the tallest and the shortest—who were married in St. Cyrus parish church.

The administration of the fund is in the hands of the parish minister, and unhappy at times is his task, such are the jealousies which arise among the competitors, for there is keen rivalry for these legacies, which amount to hardly more than $30 each. But that is quite an important sum in so remote and simple a village. All St. Cyrus turns out on "bride measuring day," and the occasion is made a holiday.

Fads.

"Women are not the only ones who have fads," said an observing individual during a discussion on fads. "I self in an inability to recall events or words and in the latter case the substitution of wrong words in the place of those intended to be used. For instance, a brush might be spoken of as a comb or a dog as a giraffe. There is no loss of the power of articulation. In aphasia, or loss of speech, on the other hand, the sufferer is unable to utter any connected sentence. His speech is often the merest babble, with an occasional word interjected. He may understand what is read to him, yet is unable to read—he may have, that is, 'word blindness,'

This is the season of the year when Scott's Emulsion does some of its best work. Fortifying the system against the ravages of winter is one of the most effective uses of Scott's Emulsion; it builds up the strength of the whole body and puts one in a healthy, vigorous condition.

Weak lungs, throat troubles or bronchial affections get more positive help and relief from Scott's Emulsion than from any other source.

Cod liver oil itself is very scarce just now; cheap adulterations and mixtures of inferior oils are offered everywhere.

This is why Scott's Emulsion should be insisted upon. It never varies from the high quality and absolute purity that has made it the standard for thirty years.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No child is safe when these pests make their unwelcome presence known.

Some persons have periodical attacks such as Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the fruit, the green vegetables, cooking, and green fruit, in sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we strongly recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. Only a few drops to be taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will follow.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it. For coughs, colds, bronchitis and asthma and throat troubles that degenerate into consumption, we recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. Only a few drops to be taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will follow.

Asthma Sufferers
Should not fail to try Dr. Kellogg's Asthma Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately loosens the most troublesome cough, relieves all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately loosens the most troublesome cough, relieves the most distressing breathing, thereby giving the patient that degree of rest and sleep so essential to health. Dr. Kellogg's Asthma Syrup is unstinted in value, as it counteracts all tendency to Bronchitis, and bashfulness in the throat and breathing passages, and is a specific to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and musical

A clever fish.

The animals to be gifted with much intelligence, or "hereditary foresight," as it is occasionally called, which is more particularly acute when danger signals are abroad, says William G. Harris in Field and Stream. They have been known, when congregated in the upper pools, to become frightened by poachers approaching them with net or spear and to immediately dash down stream to a distance of thirty miles in one night, not stopping until they had reached pools so deep that they could not be taken with the appliances of the poacher. They seemed to know that if they went higher up the stream their doom was sealed.

When coming from the sea in schools and on entering the estuary they have been seen with all old leader at the head of the school, the rest forming a triangle about two and a half feet below the surface of the water, and on calm days, guided by the old patriarch, they would swim around the fisherman's nets, never approaching them nearer than ten or twelve yards.

Standing an Egg on End.

Any fresh egg can, without being boiled, be balanced on either end by any one possessing patience and a steady hand.

In order to save time the egg should be placed for a short time on the end upon which it is desired to balance it, so as to allow the yolk to settle; then both forearms of the person making the experiment should be rested on the edge of the table and the egg should be taken between the three fingers and thumbs of both hands and slowly turned around until the center of gravity is found. This experiment may at first require a little time, but after a little practice it will be found very easy to do. It works well to try it on a cork on the tablecloth and then on the bottom of a plate.

It is conceded, of course, that the present century is far more advanced than that of even Columbus, so it is only to be expected that different ideas would have been formed, even as to the balancing of eggs.

A Defense of Dancing.

It is not necessary in these days to defend the claim of the dance to a place among the arts. As soon as we have got rid of the Puritan prejudice on the point (and one may hope that this no longer exists for the intelligent part of the population) the claim is too overwhelming to need apology, for if we take art to mean the production of beauty then the case only needs stating to be conceded, while if we understand it as self expression in some concrete form we shall find that the dance, when it has left off fusion of self, painting and sculpture, is pre-eminently capable of giving expression beyond the possibility of words to the heart, and therefore largely inarticulate, parts of our nature—the hunger of the spirit and the joy of life.—London Outlook.

Genesis of Life Insurance.

Life insurance originated in 1706 in London. In that year there was formed the first life insurance company. It was called the Amicable Society For a Perpetual Assurance Office. It was a mutual benefit concern.

Each member, without reference to age, paid a subscription for each of a fixed annual charge per share on from one to three shares, and at the end of the year a portion of the fund accumulated was divided among the heirs of those who had died, in accordance with the number of shares each dead person had held. Out of this company, with its crude and imperfect methods, life insurance as it exists today has grown.

DECORUM IN CHURCH

REV. DR. TALMAGE DELIVERS A GOOD NATURED REBUKE TO OFFENDERS

REFINEMENT IN THE CHURCH

Prevalent Lack of Reverence in American Churches Gently Scored by the Preacher From an Illuminating Text—Reasonable Etiquette in the House of God Should at Least Equal That of Ordinary Worldly Relations.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Bailey, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 13.—This sermon is a good natured rebuke to the prevalent lack of decorum among the worshippers in our American churches and a plea for that reverence of a certain reasonable etiquette, equal at least to that which we observe in our worldly relations. The text is I. Timothy iii., 15. "That thou mayest know how thou ought to behave thyself in the house of God."

Are you a parent? Have you ever dressed up your little children and sent them forth alone to visit when they were about ten or twelve years of age? Then you have known the anxieties of a mother or father as to the social behavior. Before the carriage of a certain reasonable etiquette, equal at least to that which we observe in our worldly relations. The text is I. Timothy iii., 15. "That thou mayest know how thou ought to behave thyself in the house of God."

Are you a parent? Have you ever dressed up your little children and sent them forth alone to visit when they were about ten or twelve years of age? Then you have known the anxieties of a mother or father as to the social behavior. Before the carriage you say, "Now, son, be careful about your manners. When you enter Mrs. So-and-so's home take off your hat and place it upon the hall rack. Be careful and don't handle the vases in the parlor, and don't squirm on your chair. When you sit at dinner be sure and keep your feet off the floor, and don't spill the food upon the tablecloth, and ask for a second helping of anything, or talk with your mouth full. When Mrs. So-and-so passes you a dish say 'Thank you.' Remember, my boy, that your mother's home is to be judged by your table manners." When the child leaves the house your mind follows him and stays with him all day long. And, oh, the pride that sweeps into the mother's heart when, next day, you meet your friend, at whose home your little children dined, and she congratulates you in these words: "We had such a lovely children's party yesterday. And, Mrs. So-and-so, I want to tell you how well your daughter behaved. Your boy was a perfect little gentleman, and your daughter a little lady!" Ah, such congratulation as that is as sweet as savor to the maternal heart.

But today, instead of our manners are essential in the home, they are equally important in the house of God. So essential are they to a consecrated Christian life that Paul wrote a long epistle to his young lieutenant, Timothy, concerning them. In this letter to Timothy we found the words of the text, the great apostle tells how bishops and their wives should act, and also how deacons and deacons' wives should behave, instead of showing how our ministers and church officers should behave in the house of God. I would preach a sermon on church manners directly to the point if I did not think the immediate the reverential spirit with which our congregations should assemble for worship. I would try to teach this reverence because more and more in this irreceptible age there is a tendency to look upon church buildings and churches as mere places of amusements rather than as sanctuaries for the worship in the presence of Jesus Christ. "The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob." No man ought to set foot in God's sanctuary unless he can do it with the solemn feeling of Habakkuk, who declared, "The Lord is in His holy temple, let all the earth keep silence before him."

First the church building is the place for worship. Here God promises to meet his children at certain times. That means that it is the place to which you, where you have an appointment to meet with Christ at least twice every Sunday and perhaps once or twice during the week. One inference from that fact is that when a congregation assembles on the Sabbath day it is reasonable you should always be on time and be ready to lift their voices in praise at the first word of the first line of the doxology, as well as with bended head to listen to the last word of the last line of the benediction. Then, too, how sadly the church member in a thousand who would show the implied disrespect in not keeping an appointment with an earthly ruler which they frequently show to their Heavenly King. Suppose we should take a trip east and stop in the Capitol at Washington. Suppose while sojourning there one day the California Senators or Congressmen or a member of the Cabinet made an appointment for us with the President of the United States. Suppose that a polite note was sent us by the President's private secretary informing us that we might be received to-morrow morning at the White House at 11 o'clock. What would we do? Would we sit up to-night until very late, as some of us are accustomed to do every Saturday night? Would we arise very late to-morrow morning, about half-past 9, and have breakfast about 10 o'clock, as some of us are accustomed to do every Sunday morning? Then when the clock's minute hand is pointing to a quarter of 11 would we start to dress and at the last moment turn the house upside down and empty all the bureau drawers because we could not find one of our hairpins or our clean handkerchief, as some of us are accustomed to do every Sunday morning? Then would we rush across Lafayette square over to the White House and get there twenty minutes late, as some of us regularly and systematically always come to the church service late, where we are to meet God?

Oh, no! That is not the way we should act if we had an appointment with the President to-morrow morning. We would positively see that our clothes were all right before we went to sleep to-night. Then we would get to bed early, so that our minds would be clear and alert and we could remember all that the President might say, and we would not only be on time, but a little ahead of time. At ten minutes of 11 we would stand often minutes after, 11 o'clock, we would be sitting before the President's private secretary presenting our cards for an audience with the Chief Executive of the great American people. In the same way if you wish to get your child spiritual blessings from Christ you must go to church first with him. You must start your public worship on time. You must, in your church manners be kept, as heavenly as possible. King the same respect you would accord to any earthly potentate. A spiritually live church is one whose Worshipers always assemble on time. One of the surest signs of a spiritually dead church is the tardiness of the worshipers, who have come to expect their seats to be saved, until at least the second hymn has been sung, and often until the collection plate has been passed. The pews should be filled on time, just as the organist at the hour sharp should be in her place at the lovely days and the minister in his place behind the sacred pulpit.

Behaving yourself aright in church implies a reverend act, no less than as important as promptness in church service. A church member should be in his place when the service starts as surely as he should be at his desk when the bell rings. But he should do more than sit down when the minister takes his place. He should, first of all, kneel and render obeisance and homage to the Heavenly Father. Remember, he, the worshipper, has come to keep. The very first act of a guest in a home is to go and pay his respects to the host in the parlor. The very first act a worshiper should perform when in church is to pay his respects to the Christ, who, in a spiritual sense, is the head of the temple in which the church member has come to worship.

The Unitarian rector begins his service in this wise: "Lord, I have loved the habitation of thy house and the place where thy honor dwelleth." When we enter the house of God, do we see and all feel that we are coming into the presence of the Lord? If so, we should we come laughing and talking and nodding to each other, like a lot of schoolgirls greeting the class organizer? If we do, would there be so much whispering and rustling about, both in the pews and in the back of the church? If so, would there be so much turning around to watch others who happen to come in late, and a disposition to laugh when anything goes wrong? People who have visited European countries tell us that there the king is first and last in the thoughts of all the waiting courtiers. As soon as the king enters the room, all the waiting nobles rise and bow, and the king speaks to the waiting nobles listen. When a Congregation enters the house of God, but when he leaves the throne room he never turns his back upon the seated king. When we enter the sanctuary of God, which is filled with the presence of God, do we act as before a king? Do we try to keep our faces still and our minds in reverence? Do we earnestly try to make up our minds to pay close attention to prayer? "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be always acceptable in thy sight, O my Lord, my strength and my redeemer!" Every church edifice ought to be something more sacred than a concert hall or a theater. It ought to be a place where a joke and a cachinnation and a chitchat should be as much out of place as in a minaret show would be at a funeral in the house of death.

O man and woman, ever keep the face of Christ before you when you are in the house of God! Every church building dedicated to the worship of God is in very truth his house, in which his presence is manifested by the Holy Spirit as truly, as in the Shekinah of the Tabernacle. Approach the house of God in the same spirit that the Lord's child of Rev. Charles T. Brady, the American preacher, approached when he entered a great European cathedral. "Suddenly I was conscious of the Lord's presence. Forgetting all about the sermon I had prepared, I left his little boy by the pew in the church to await his return. When I found myself alone I looked back on his child standing in the middle of the great church. Oh, how lonely it looked as though he was expecting some one. The mellow sunlight streaming through the stained glass windows fell upon his curly head and made him look like a little angel. When the child heard his father's receding footsteps he turned with inquiring eyes upon his parent and said: 'Papa, where is Jesus? Where is Jesus?' Children, be not like the house of God implied the presence of Jesus. So, with childlike faith, when we assemble to worship Christ, we must come with this first question upon our lips: "Where is Jesus? Where is Jesus?" If we do, the spirit of a great deal of the irreverence exhibited by some in the modern congregation would forever cease.

Behaving oneself aright in church implies not only respect to the four walls of the edifice or to the furniture of the divine presence, but also due respect to God's ministers, who are to preach in the sacred pulpit and don't respect to God's musicians who sing in the church choirs. The minister and the church choir arise to sing the praises of God they become part of God's house, and he who in every Christian land on earth is in the heavenlies are most encupied with the same theme. When the minister rises to preach he comes as a messenger from God to utter the words that the Holy Spirit has commissioned him to speak. The truly consecrated Christian minister is a representative of the Most High and is entitled to the deference that was paid to the representatives of the European kings when they entered the United States Senate and were given the foremost seats, as I saw them do in when Vice-President Garret A. Hobart, took his seat in office preceding the inauguration of President McKinley. They were not selected as such, but they were honored in their official capacities as personal representatives of the British, the German, the Italian, the Russian and the Austrian thrones. Never forget when you criticise the preacher's message that you may be criticising the Christ. Also, that God has given him to deliver to you.

Never criticise the sermon or the minister's preaching! Why, it's impossible. Yes, it's more than impossibility. Some church choirs smash every law of musical harmony. Some musical selections is positively stupid. They are impracticable and nonsense of no force, without any logical, consecutive thoughts." That is true, my brothers! Some choirs are noted more for their discords than their musical perfections. Some ministers' sermons are depth. It does not take a very long line to fathom. But I can give you this as my own personal experience—I never entered any church with the spirit of God in my heart, to try to criticise the leaders of that service, God's representatives, but I have returned my spiritual good out of that service. In contrast to this statement, I never entered a church building with the spirit of criticism in my heart that I found something to criticise about the minister and the service, but I found, through what I got, and furthermore, when I did enter a service in the spirit of criticism I always found that I received more harm from that service than good. To William E. Gladstone, with the greatest brain in all England, could find something to criticise in the little church of Hawarden and get spiritual food from young, inexperienced lips. Never forget to leave to break for him the "bread of life," surely you can afford to honor the ministers of Jesus Christ as God's representatives.

But behaving yourself aright in church implies not only due respect to God's ministers in the sanctuary you assemble, and to his representatives there, but also due respect to the strangers who come in the house of God and to their church altars. It not only means that we should bow before God's altars and in reverential tones say, "Our Father," but it also means that we should rise and give Christian welcome to God's children who present themselves at our side. It means that we our church is consecrated Christian church unless all the rich, and the aristocrats, who are clothed in silk or in homespun, whether rich or poor, whether master or servant, shall be cordially greeted with an open church door and an open church heart.

But, though Christian etiquette in the house of God means so much, how many churches are sinfully lacking in some of the churches of class instead of the churches of a great Christian democracy? Can we not do better? Will we begin soon enough to know that there is only one Christian aristocracy, and that belongs to the noble serving class which does devotedly when he said, "Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant?" As you would never dream of to my child because you have no pew to rent, so you should never cast a slur upon God's children. Say to no poor man or woman go away from us! We should all belong to the gospel clan. We should all be kind to all brothers and sisters in Christ and that, therefore, we should be hospitable and kind to you and you are polite and respect me, you do not try to show your superiorities even though I do stay a little longer time than I ought. You do not be mad at me and look at your watch again and again to look what time it is and then get up and go out into the hall and put on your overcoat and get your hat in your hand as though you were ready to run away at the first opportunity. If you are polite I would certainly take the hint and make my social call report

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"LOVERS' LANE" A GOOD SHOW.

A very good Saturday night audience gathered at the Carman to see "Lovers' Lane," and they saw one of the best performances of the season. The cast was a splendid one, and the play showed, in trenchant style, the difficulties a minister sometimes has to put up with from a congregation of narrow-minded people. Wm. E. Haldeck, as the minister, and Miss Tottie Richmond, as "Simplicity" Johnson, were particularly pleasing in their parts. The scenery was excellent, notably the orchard scenes.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

It is gratifying to read, in the Brockville papers, a fair estimate of the game played here on Friday night last. The Brockville players were fairly beaten and they admit it like gentlemen. A little of the Brockville spirit would do a world of good in the Kingston Whig office, which paper never yet admitted a fair defeat or had a good word to say for an opposing team.

Marlboro juniors defeated Stratford intermediates by a score of 10 to 5 on Saturday night, and the senior team was not at its strongest, either. Let's see how this works out: Peterboro beat Marlboro 20 to 4; Belleville won the district championship from Peterboro, in spite of the fact that in only one game of the series was Belleville's best forward, McGuire, in condition to play. What does this show? Simply that Belleville has the best team in the O.H.A., and can give cards and spades and a walloping to any bunch which will meet them in home and home games. Our boys are the ones who should have gone after Dr. Stanley Obre. They would probably have been beaten, but they wouldn't have quit like cripples and hollered "murder" so loud that you could hear it over the gas house whistle, like that false alarm gang in Toronto did. The season locally has been a disastrous one in some respects, but the home club can proudly point to the fact that the O.H.A. executive had to suspend them to keep them from winning. The question now is: Will the O.H.A. get a chance to fire us again next season? Well, we hope not.

Kingston Whig: The Belleville Intelligencer thinks the Hastings county court may in time decide that Belleville has a right to play for the O.H.A. intermediate championship. Jaws when like that are not in the last very clear, but it will likely be in the Court of Summer Time. Or when the hay is growing in the middle of Belleville's streets.

We've a little short on hayseed this year. Will the Whig man kindly comb some out of his auburn whiskers, and send it up?

HOCKEY.

What Brockville Papers Say of Recent Game.

Recorder: The Brockville seniors met their second and worst defeat of this season last evening when they ran up against Belleville's strongest set of the O.H.A. intermediate series, and who undoubtedly should be in senior company. The results of the game differ little from the first local team met a stinging defeat. Dispatches from Belleville last evening gave the score as 10 to 5, but the team, who arrived home this morning, claim that it was thirteen to four. Bubble scoring is the only thing to explain the difference. The local team have no complaint to offer, saying that they were up against a far better team all round than on the former occasion, much heavier, every man of whom plays an unselfish and good combination game. Each of the 12 shots, every man being able to hit the nets, and the puck on a ball above the ice with telling effect.

The local team were somewhat handicapped owing to the small size of the Belleville rink, not being very much larger than a curling rink, so they do not lay to their defeat, as the ice was in fine condition, except that they were up against a much faster and better team. If the Belleville team McGuire and Marks were the stars, and the hands think they are, but men in the Eastern league to-day. They are very powerful men, quick on their feet and have beautiful stick-handling.

The score at half-time was 7 to 2, but at the finish quinine is divided, but at any rate Brockville was defeated on the ice, and Belleville do have no kick coming whatever. In the Belleville line Seymour played point cover and Pilkey, of the Granites, was goal. Both of these men were the only changes in the local team.

The score last night would lead one to believe that a football game had taken place at Belleville.

Times: The Belleville hockey team met its Waterloo at the hands of Belleville last night, the score at the finish being 15 to 3 in favor of Belleville, and while the score does not indicate the play, the Brockvilles admit that they were outclassed. The visitors were very exceptional in fast and are all heavy men. They play gilt-edged combination and but their strong point is in shooting, every man being a fighting shot, both accurate and powerful. The Brockvilles, like the Prescott one, is small, but the players do not depend on the scoring to score their games. Every man on the Brockvilles played a good game, but lack of condition told seriously in the last half.

It is also say that the Belleville club used them handsomely and are all the gentlemanly players.

Brockville's defeat last evening in Belleville was the worst sustained by the local organization this season.

Oh, what a one-sided, score.

The Belleville hockeyists are play a bit.

The Brockville Times, like a good many others, was labouring under a misapprehension yesterday in the article dealing with the playoff with the O.H.A., in reference to the Brockville club playing an exhibition match with Belleville. It appears the O.H.A. has no authority whatever to profession-alism. This is a matter entirely in the hands of the C. A. A. U. The O.H.A. only has power to disqualify a player or club from participating in games in the name of its association. By playing with Belleville it does not follow the Brockville hockeyists become professionals.

On Saturday afternoon the High School and O.B.C. teams played a game of hockey, which resulted in a victory for the school boys, who scored 3 goals to their opponents' 0. Mr. Winchester made an impartial referee.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

St. Thomas.

As usual the Sunday services were conducted by the Rector. In the morning Rev. Mr. Beamish took as his subject "The church as a means of divine help." The evening sermon was preached from II Thessalonians, 2nd chapter, verse 7:

"For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way."

Confirmation services will be held first Sunday after Easter, April 8th. There will be a mixed choir of young ladies in attendance to assist the male members of the choir.

Bridge Street.

There were large congregations present at both services yesterday and they were conducted by the Pastor, Rev. Dr. Crothers. In the evening the text was from Daniel, 2nd chapter and 35th verse. During the service the choir rendered two anthems, the solo parts being taken by Miss Vermilyea, Messrs. D. Cameron and H. McKay.

John Street.

"Jesus' first temptation" was the subject discussed by the Rev. A. H. Drumm last evening at the John street church. The text was from St. Matthew, 4th chapter and the first four verses. The Rev. gentleman during the course of his remarks stated that this temptation which Jesus was subjected to was a real one. After 40 days of fasting the Saviour was hungry and Satan's temptation to get Him to turn stones into bread. As He was tempted so He all tempted and God would give us help to resist even the greatest of temptations.

During the service Mrs. G. Bedford sang a solo entitled "Bright Golden Morning."

Tabernacle.

At the evening service at this place of worship the Pastor, Rev. Geo. Brown, gave an excellent discourse in reference to "Obedience to Christ," His text was taken from Genesis, 22nd chapter, 1st to 4th verses, Miss M. Scott sang a solo entitled "Peace, Perfect Peace."

Baptist.

The Pastor, Rev. Mr. Elliott, preached at both services on Sunday. In the evening his text was from Romans, 11th chapter and 22nd verse.

Christ Church.

The Rector, Rev. W. B. Heeney, last evening gave an address relative to the life of the late Archbishop Machray, of Rupert's Land, and Primate of all Canada. His remarks were based upon the words: "For me to live is Christ and to die is gain."

Port Arthur Not Abandoned—Russians Say the Situation There is Unchanged—Aftermath of the Latest Sea Fight—Why Russians Were Not Rescued.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

St. Petersburg, March 14.—There is no truth in the rumor that the Russians have abandoned Port Arthur.

Admiral Abaqe, secretary of the Commission on Far Eastern affairs, says the situation at Port Arthur is unchanged and that nothing of importance has occurred there in the last 24 hours.

Tokio, March 14.—A supplementary report from Vice-Admiral Togo, concerning the effort made by crews of the Japanese torpedo boat destroyers in the action off Port Arthur on the 10th last to rescue the crews of the disabled Russian torpedo boat destroyers, resulted here to-day. Captain Shojire, commanding the flotilla of torpedo boat destroyers, states that the Japanese would have been able to rescue many more of the enemy but for the deadly fire of the shore batteries and the close approach of the Russian cruiser Novik. The report also explains that the four men rescued were not part of the crew of the Sarapmehitch, as originally reported.

BELLEVILLE'S MAYOR AS OTHERS SEE HIM

WHAT A TORONTO PAPER HAS TO SAY OF OUR PRESENT CHIEF MAGISTRATE.

The Toronto News publishes an excellent likeness of Mayor W. W. Chown, of this city, together with the following biographical sketch:

Mayor Chown, of Belleville, was born in Kingston in 1851, and was educated in the Public Schools of that city. In 1882 he went to Belleville and started a hardware and tinware business, which grew until to-day it is one of the largest of the kind carried on in Eastern Ontario, and is known as the W. W. Chown Company, Limited, of which Mayor Chown is President. Belleville's Chief Magistrate is noted as a shrewd and successful business man, whose word is as good as his bond. He is a Liberal, but never takes a prominent part in politics. Entering municipal life as Alderman in 1900, he served three years, and was, last January, elected Mayor by acclamation. An earnest advocate of prohibition, Mayor Chown took an active part in the Referendum campaign. He has been a strong supporter of the Y.M.C.A. since its inception in Belleville, and in philanthropic work of that kind is also exceeded by his wife. Mayor Chown is a Methodist and a member of Bridge Street Church, being a local preacher, and a member of most of the governing bodies of the church. He was married to Miss Wheeler, of Napanee, and their union was blessed with four sons, two of whom are married. Since entering municipal life, Mayor Chown has done hard and conscientious work in the interests of the city of his choice, and is respected by all for his worth as a quiet, earnest, solid citizen, who tries to walk the straight and narrow path himself and help others to do the same.

COAL IS SCARCE.

STROKE PROVED FATAL.

MR. JOHN GIBSON DIED WITHOUT REGAINING CONSCIOUSNESS.

On Wednesday evening last Mr. John Gibson, who resided on Great St. James street, was stricken with paralysis. The attack proved fatal, the unfortunate victim passing away at an early hour on Sunday morning, after having regained consciousness. Deceased was born in Ireland 75 years ago, and came out to this country when 16 years of age. For 34 years Mr. Gibson resided in Ballville, during which period he was an employee of the city, and was a hard-working and trusted city employee. Deceased had been for many years a member of Belleville I.O.O.F. No. 274, under whose auspices the remains will be interred. In religious life Mr. Gibson was a Methodist, being a member of Bridge Street Church. In politics he was a Conservative, and deceased, a highly esteemed and well-known citizen. He leaves a widow and a family of two sons and five daughters to survive. The sons are Jones, of Napanee, and John, of this city; the daughters are Mrs. J. Bailey, of Madoc; Mrs. T. Smith and Mrs. G. Kerr, of Canada; Mrs. Morton, of Toronto, and Mrs. S. Wallace, of Dresden. To the family will be extended the sincere sympathy of a large circle of relatives and friends.

WELL AGAIN.

The many friends of John Blount will be pleased to learn that he has entirely recovered from his attack of rheumatism. Chamberlain's Pain Balm cured him after the best doctors in the town (Moose, Ind.) had failed to give relief. The 25 cent relief from pain which this liniment affords is alone worth many times its cost. Sold by all druggists.

MR. FRANK HITCHON PRESENTED WITH AN ADDRESS AND GOLD HEADED CANE.

For the past 49 years Mr. Frank Hitchon, of this city, has been connected with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, during which time he was a faithful and painstaking employee. For many years Mr. Hitchon was Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Insurance and Provident Society in connection with the road. He having recently retired, the members of the Toronto section on Saturday afternoon presented Mr. Hitchon with an address and a beautiful gold headed cane. The latter took place at the G.T.R. library at the station here. The address was as follows:

Belleville, March 12th, 1904.

Mr. F. Hitchon,

Sir—We, your associates in connection with the Grand Trunk Insurance and Provident Society, 2nd section, note that you have resigned your position as Chairman of the Executive Committee and having retired after a long and faithful service in this company, we believe that we cannot allow you to do so without some mark of appreciation on our part from appreciation of your noble and faithful service to the Association.

By your kind and courteous manner, your upright honesty and undoubting integrity, you have endeared yourself to the hearts of each.

Gifted with that stark mood of adversity appointed upon the heirloom for the many, you have, although loyal and just to the tongue of ill tongued tellers, you were ever ready to accede to any legitimate proposition securing benefits to the Society.

We therefore beg of you to please accept the gold headed cane as a small token of the high esteem in which you have been held, with the earnest hope that it may recall to your memory the close and kindly relations which have always existed between us, and it is our heartiest hope and prayer that you may be long spared to flourish in your walk through the remaining years of your life which may be bright and happy.

Signed on behalf of committee by J. P. Murphy, Chairman, Belleville; T. Waugh, T. H. Coppin, J. R. Donnelly, W. H. Mott.

Mr. Hitchon made a suitable reply to the address.

Died at Frankford.

Mr. Haigh Miller, son of Mr. W. S. Miller, Frankford, died on Saturday morning, March 12th, after a brief illness. Deceased had been ill for some time and, although only 21 years of age, was a popular young man, beloved by all who knew him.

TONSILITIS IS GOING AROUND

And everybody is wondering what to do. Here is a simple remedy. Use a gargle of Nerviline and water as recommended in the directions, and rub your throat and chest vigorously with Nerviline. This has been tried and proved successful a thousand times. Nerviline is a specific for tonsilitis and, in fact, we know of nothing half so good for breaking up colds, curing slight pains and muscular pains. Try a bottle of Nerviline; price 25c.

AN ABSOLUTE NECESSITY.

SO THINKS AT LEAST ONE TRAVELLING MAN.

I would not have you think of starting out without my mileage cookies and grip as to start on a trip without a box of Mother Seigel's Curative Tablets in my valise, said a travelling man who represents a St. Louis hardware house. Why? Because I have to put up with all kinds of hotels and boarding houses. I have to eat good, bad and indifferent food, and I often get it three times a day and night and I don't believe any man's stomach will stand that kind of thing without protest, anyway I know mine won't. It has to have something to break the fall and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the article I fall back on.

My friends often "josh" me about it, tell me I'm an easy mark for patent medicine fakirs, that advertised medicines are humbugs, etc., but I notice that they are nearly always complaining of their aches and pains and poor digestion, while I can stand most any old kind of fare and feel good and ready for my work when it needs me, and I believe I owe my good digestion and sound health to the daily, regular use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, year in and year out, and all the "joshing" in the world will never convince me to the contrary.

I used to have heartburn about once a week, but not now, and only about three or four times a week and after standing for this for four or five years I began to look around for a crutch and found it when my doctor told me that the investment I could make would be a fifty cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and I have invested about fifty cents' worth of them ever since and when I stop to think that that is what I spend every day for meals, I feel like shaking hands with myself for I can keep my stomach and digestion in first class order for fifty cents a month. I don't care for any better life insurance.

My druggist tells me they are the most popular of all stomach medicines and that they have maintained their popularity and success because they do as advertised. They bring results, and results are what count in a patent medicine as much as in selling barbwire.

Cheerful and Hopeful.

The men whom I have seen succeed best in life are Charles Kingsley, have always been cheerful and hopeful men, who went about their business with a smile on their faces and took the changes and chances of their mortal life like men facing rough and smooth alike as it came, and so found the truth of the old proverb that "good times and bad times and all times pass over."

Legal Eloquence.

A young lawyer concluded his argument in a case with the following sublime burst of eloquence: "If, gentlemen of the jury, the defendant's hogs are permitted to roam at large upon the fair fields of my client with impunity, then—ped, then, indeed, have our forefathers fought and bled and died in vain!"

Logic.

Teddie—Pa, when do we get our milk from? Father—From cows, my son. Teddie—And where do cows get their milk from? Father—Why, I don't know where do you get your tears? Teddie (after a long, thoughtful pause)—Do they have to milk cows, papa?

A Man to Be Avoided.

Briggs—Here comes Gidson. Let's cross over. Griggs—Why, I thought he was a friend of yours. Briggs—He used to be, but now he's my deadly enemy. He's the unspeakable villain who recommended a place for me to spend my vacation.

VIOLENT REPUDIATION

Lord Rosebery on the Premier's Use of the Word Calumny.

Addresses a Great Free Trade Meeting at Newcastle, and Describes Balfour's Policy of Retaliation as "Only a Bathing Machine—A Temporary Refuge in a Storm"—Sedentive Argument to Win Free Traders Over to Protection.

(Canadian Associated Press Cable.)

London, March 13.—Lord Rosebery, addressing a great Free Trade meeting at Newcastle on Saturday, returned to his attack on Premier Balfour's charge of "calumny." In speaking as he did regarding the premier's statement to the cabinet he said that he had followed Lord George Hamilton's verbatim description of the two documents and for this he had been called a calumniator. The expression had not been withdrawn. "Altho," he continued, "they have long had a friendship with Balfour from no man in the world will I accept that description of myself without public and violent repudiation." It was his belief that Mr. Balfour's evasion with regard to the documents had created a strongly founded distrust in the government. The government's changeing policy on the national taxation bill last Friday was a significant sign of a coming dissolution. His surrender to Mr. Chamberlain showed that the government existed only by the favor of the man nominated by the politician whose ornament was a bathing machine, as an empire to a peroration on protection.

When Mr. Chamberlain left the government he left the seeds in control of the finances of the country—that is Balfour and Ritchie. Retaliation is government's policy of retaliation was only a bathing machine—a temporary refuge in the storm. The chancellor compared the present situation of the government to the Russian army, in 1856, owing to the Unionist party's internal dissensions, had a strong motive to join the Liberals to build a free trade policy upon ruins. That part of Mr. Chamberlain's statement, Mr. Balfour was always ready to make sacrifices in food and taxation, in order to keep the colonies loyal, and when the policy was forgotten would be ready to make a convenient all over the empire. The present state of things was not a healthy one commercial harm. When the Liberals were returned to power the empire would be kept together without any sacrifice of principle.

He had not always been able to see eye to eye with Sir William Harcourt in all things, but no one could doubt his party did so among themselves, but he recognized in him a commanding intellectual capacity, his sturdy championship of the cause of peace and his liberal group to which he belonged and he would long remain one of the chief ity and memorable figures in parliamentary history.

Liberal Predicted to Win.

London, March 14.—The Daily Mail's election analyst, by carefully considered drawn from the result of recent by-elections, predicts over the dissolution of the government that if the change of feeling is maintained it will secure a general majority of sixty over the Unionists, which meaning that Balfour, Chamberlain and Home Rule will be the decisive factor in the next parliament.

Marconi's View.

London, March 12.—Sir William Huncourt, writing to The Times with an analysis of Mr. Wyndham's amendment, says that the debate made it clear beyond dispute that the Unionist party is protectionist, and its fundamental principle is that a taxation of food. Whatever Mr. Balfour may say on the judgment of the country will be taken on this issue.

Relevant Vouched For.

London, March 12.—The Daily Chronicle, referring to the appointment of Mr. Balfour as Speaker of the House of Commons, says Napoleon is an unusual name for the descendant of a peer of any British parliament, but it is borne by a well known French Israelish in a privy council case two years ago.

Stood Ashamed.

London, March 14.—William T. Stead, speaking at Chelsea last night, said the late war was unjust and he was ashamed of his countrymen.

Boers To Canadian Iron.

London, March 14.—Sir Thomas Bright McLaren, M.P. (Liberal), will ask Austen Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, to-morrow, if he is aware of the increasing importation of Canadian pig iron to England, and that it is being sold at £3 per ton less per ton, and whether the government proposes to protect British from this unfair competition.

Bay Horses Wore.

London, March 14.—The morning Post advises the government to buy cavalry horses in Canada, where a useful two year-old, harder, sounder and more capable for work than an Irish horse can be bought for £20.

Claimed By Death at 117.

Perkerville, Mich., March 14.—Mrs. Adam Gilbert, for 40 years a prominent of Forester township, died Saturday. She was aged claimed to be 117 years of age. To within the last few days she was able to perform most of her household duties.

FUNERAL OF ARCHBISHOP MACHRAY.

Conducted By the State and Largest Ever Seen in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, March 14.—The funeral of the late Archbishop Machray took place Saturday afternoon. The body lay in state at the Parliament Buildings until 2.30. A public service was held at the Legislative chambers, conducted by the Bishop of Qu'Appelle.

The funeral, which was conducted by the State, was probably the largest ever seen in Winnipeg, and included the Governor-General, the Government, the City Council, the clergy, the students and the graduates of St. John's College, the Winnipeg garrison and a large number of citizens.

The regular funeral services of the English Church were held in St. John's College, conducted by the Bishop of Qu'Appelle, Bishop of Keewatin, Bishop Wathenon and Canon Coombes.

60 THOUGHT TO BE LOST.

Steamer Pre Fatria Believed to Have Gone to Bottom.

Halifax, March 14.—It is believed here that the steamer Pre Fatria, which left St. Pierre, on the Island of Miquelon, two weeks ago, has gone to the bottom with all on board.

She carried sixty passengers besides her crew. Many of these passengers were prominent citizens bound for Paris.

The steamer is now long overdue, and it is looked upon as almost a certainty that she has met with some serious mishap.

Fire caused a strike of the printing operators on the N. and W. Railway, and Northern Express offices, to be closed. The strikers handled the excess.

Brakeman Injured.

Tottenham, March 14.—Eddie Dickson, a G.T.R. brakeman, fell between the cars at Tottenham Saturday afternoon, and two wheels passed over his leg, breaking the right limb below the knee and cutting almost through the thigh of the left leg. Dr. Hamilton amputated that below the next wheels caught him. It is hoped the amputation will be necessary. He was taken to the hospital at Barrie on the evening train. He is a young man, a son of a widowed mother, who lives in Barrie.

Murdered Missionary.

New York, March 14.—The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions yesterday received cable confirmation of the news of the murder of the Rev. Benjamin W. Labaree, near Khoi, Persia. Mr. Labaree was born in Urumiah, Persia, 34 years ago. He was graduated at Oberlaurea in 1893, and leaves a widow and three children. Mrs. Labaree is a daughter of the Rev. Dr. Schauffer, now of Cleveland, and for many years a missionary in Turkey.

Blow at Monks and Nuns.

Paris, March 14.—Premier Combes has introduced a measure for the suppression of the monastic orders. He has brought forward a bill suppressing all the religious orders prohibiting monks and nuns from teaching in private. The proposition for the schools abolished will be supplied by the State at a cost of 12,000,000, besides $1,500,000 for additions to the number of teachers.

British Cabinet's Thanks.

St. John, N.B., March 14.—Governor Doyle signed the French Shore Modus Vivendi Bill Friday, and Saturday he transmitted to the Legislature a message of thanks from the British Cabinet for the prompt and unanimous passage of the bill. The message, appearing in the English and French treaty covering this matter of the French shore is understood to be good.

Run Over and Killed.

Montreal, March 13.—C. Smith, a C.P.R. detective, residing at 54 St. Lawrence street, was run over and killed by a train in the C.P.R. yards at Hochelaga Saturday morning. The General Hospital ambulance was called when the accident occurred, but before it arrived the man was dead.

Died From Draught.

Montreal, March 14.—Raoul Moisan, a well known gentleman, died yesterday from the effects of a stimulant obtained in a drug store. The druggist also drank with Moisan, became ill, but recovered. The nature of the stuff drank by the men will no doubt come up at the inquest.

James J. Hill" Not Interested."

Medal Awarded.

New York, March 14.—Robert Gray, a painter, and his wife were found dead in their apartments Saturday, the woman murdered with the right side of her skull crushed in and her husband having apparently committed suicide by asphyxiation.

Threw Vitriol in Face.

Cape Town, S. A., March 14.—A startling scene occurred at the Mount Nelson Hotel here Saturday. Mrs. Belfield Marais and her daughter, who is fifteen years old, were dining in the restaurant, while Piet Marais, a noted millionaire and the father-in-law of Mrs. Marais, was dining at another table. Suddenly the daughter dashed across the room and dashed a bottle of vitriol in Piet Marais' face. He was terribly injured and will probably be blind. Both mother and daughter were arrested. The affair is the sequel to a family quarrel.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Belleville.—East Hastings Liberals will meet at Tweed on March 28 to select a Federal candidate.

Bradford.—R. R. Gamey addressed a big meeting under the auspices of the West Gwillimbury Conservative Association on Saturday. Howe Wood presided, and E. A. Little, M. P.P., Vaughan Lennox, M.P., and T. Herbert Lennox also spoke.

Ottawa, March 14.—For the first time in 35 years a real Union Jack float over the Parliament buildings on Saturday. In past years the ensign has been flown, under the impression that it was the national flag of Great Britain.

Senator Kerr to Move.

Ottawa, March 14.—It has been decided that Senator J. K. Kerr, Toronto, will move and Senator Tessier second the address in the Senate in reply to the speech from the throne.

Criticism For the "Gov."

Ottawa, March 14.—The debate on the speech from the throne is likely to be concluded before the week is out. It is not the intention of the Opposition to propose an amendment to the speech. One portion of it, however, will come in for considerable condemnation. That is the part in which His Excellency is made to express the wish that the session will be a short one. It is an extraordinary departure from custom to place any such restraint on the freedom of the debate, and His Excellency may be roundly criticized for fathering a statement that is entirely gratuitous and is in effect a censure to the Opposition on its duties in the way of cutting short the debate.

Halifax a Second Gibraltar.

Halifax, March 14.—A series of manoeuvres by the artillery at the forts and a careful inspection of the harbor defences have convinced the military authorities that Halifax is impregnable. During the last three years steamers from England have regularly brought powder and projectiles, and an immense quantity of ammunition is now in storage.

Major Robertson There.

Ottawa, March 14.—Major Donald M. Robertson of the 48th Highlanders addressed a meeting Saturday at Alexandria, where the men of the Glengarry have decided to form as independent highland company in honor of Lord Dundonald, every visit to Glengarry last autumn arouses the greatest enthusiasm.

Over 1,000 Arrived.

St. John, N. B., March 14.—The steamer Manitoba landed over 1,300 passengers here yesterday. Most of the passengers are British of all ages, and are all lot as a year-old arrived here. Only fifteen were detained by the doctors. The steamer had an uneventful voyage.

Dr. Carruthers Dead.

North Bay, March 14.—Dr. J. B. Carruthers died here this morning, driving from a camp at the northern end of the Temiskaming railway to the terminus, was taken suddenly ill and expired almost immediately. Heart trouble was the cause of his sudden demise.

10,000,000 Jews in the World.

Basle, March 14.—Dr. Herzl Hamaan, who recently made a rough census of the Jews of the world, concluded that there are now nearly 11,000,000 in Europe and 8,000,000 outside of Europe. The United States has 1,000,000. Britain has 2,000,000.

Dunfries Man Missing.

Paris, March 15.—J. P. Nunan, ex-reeve and ex-councillor of South Dumfries township, is missing from his home, and it is feared that he has met with some serious accident. Mr. Nunan was in Paris on Thursday and started for home at 10 or 11 o'clock that night. On Friday morning the rig was found in Mr. Michnel's bush, and the horse was wandering around. It is feared that he was tipped out of the rig and that he was too seriously injured to be able to assist himself. Friends are making a thorough search of the district in the hope of finding Mr. Nunan still alive, but the worst is feared.

70 Persons Lost.

Brisbane, Queensland, March 15.—The British steamer Aramac was wrecked on the Break Sea Spit, off Queensland, Sunday morning. Six boats were launched and two were safely landed with sixty exhausted passengers and members of the crew. Four other boats are still missing, containing seventy-eight persons. It is believed that these boats were not provisioned. The weather is bad and steamers sent in search of the boats have found no trace of them.

Unionist Rejected

London, March 15.—The Hon. G. J. Goschen, 1st Viscount Goschen, P., for the East Grinstead Division of Sussex, has been informed by the Executive Committee of the Central Conservative Council that it will be quite impossible, in view of his opposition to the Government on the fiscal question, again to secure his return as Unionist member.

Every man has at times in his mind the ideal of what he should be, but is not.

MAKAROFF OFFENSIVE

Blocks Port Arthur By Sinking 4 Vessels at Harbor's Mouth.

Russian Vice-Admiral Aims to Unite His Divided Navy and Become Aggressive

—Issues Order That Economy in Fuel Is Unnecessary, But That Ammunition Must Be Saved—Northern Squadron Hiding—Japan's Big Financial Scheme

—Report of Capture of Port Arthur.

London, March 15.—A correspondent of The Daily Mail at Newchuang says that after the removal of the battleship Ibrivian four Russian steamers, the Harbin, the Hailor, the Ninguta and the Sungari, were anchored at the mouth of the entrance to Port Arthur in proper position and sank, leaving only a small channel available. Vice-Admiral Makaroff having previously ordered the whole fleet to remain outside with steam up, economy in coal being unnecessary.

The despatch, which is prominently displayed by The Daily Mail, and which the correspondent says is "Russian information," if true, is news of first importance, confirming the idea that Vice-Admiral Makaroff will adopt the offensive and make a desperate attempt to bring together Russia's scattered naval forces or endeavor to inflict damage upon the Japanese navy.

An Approach to Confirmation.

The story must, however, be viewed cautiously, the only approach to confirmation from any other source being in a despatch from the correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Yinkow, which merely says:

"Vice-Admiral Makaroff has issued orders to the effect that the saving of coal is unnecessary, but that the big gun ammunition in the forts must not be wasted. Evidently this ammunition is running short."

The Daily Telegraph's Tokio correspondent sends an unconfirmed rumor to the effect that Japanese marines have landed and occupied Dalny.

It may be remarked that the British newspapers all regard Vice-Admiral Togo's report that he has laid mines at Port Arthur as a mere bluff, and they say that such a feat would be impossible under fire.

The Daily Mail thinks that if Vice-Admiral Makaroff closed the channel it was in order to prevent the ingress of Japanese torpedo boat destroyers, as was done at Wei-Hai-Wei during the Chino-Japanese war.

Where Is the Squadron?

It is a subject of unceasing remark and conjecture that nothing has been heard of the Vladivostock squadron, and it is beginning to be believed that it is really inside the harbor of Vladivostock.

The Standard's Tokio correspondent says that, according to a despatch from Gensan, the Russians are believed to be withdrawing from the northeast frontier of Corea and concentrating at Vladivostock.

The Tokio correspondent of The Morning Post throws an interesting light upon Japan's financial intentions and says it is estimated that Japan will be able to maintain a war for eighteen months without borrowing abroad. The policy is to retain the gold in Japan, and it is believed that it will not be necessary to spend abroad more than one-eighth of the cost of the war, this expenditure being chiefly on coal, cordite and steel. The fact that Port Arthur is completely blockaded permits a great saving because Japan will be able to charter vessels at peace rates.

Just a Report.

Wei-Hai-Wei, March 15.—The Japanese here report that Port Arthur has been captured.

Movements of Land Forces.

St. Petersburg, March 15.—Gen. Zilinski telegraphs as follows under Sunday's date:

"On March 7 our patrol discovered four of the enemy's posts on the Changchengang River, and a Troop of cavalry acting as scouts near Patetchen, northwest of Anju.

"A Japanese cavalry patrol fell into an ambuscade prepared by our patrol, and were dispersed, losing one killed. The Japanese left behind them a quantity of gun cotton and some swords and blankets.

"The population of Manchuria is quiet.

"On the night of March 11 the enemy's ships explored Helena Bay and the adjacent coast, without catching with searchlights.

"According to information which has been verified, the Japanese have not made any attacks north of Gensan.

"The population along the Tumen River is favorable to us."

Alastor Dida's Tell the Truth.

Tokio, March 15.—Victory Admiral Togo's despatch that a Japanese torpedo boat destroyer was sunk and the cruiser Takasago heavily damaged by the shell fire of the Russians during the fourth attack on Port Arthur, is officially pronounced untrue. The damaged Japanese torpedo boat destroyers can be repaired in one week, and it will not be necessary to dock them.

A supplementary report from Vice-Admiral Togo, concerning the effort made by crews of the Japanese torpedo boat destroyers in the action off Port Arthur on the 10th instant to rescue the crews of the disabled Russian torpedo boat destroyer, reached here to-day. Captain Shojiro Asai, commanding the flotilla of torpedo boat destroyers, states that the Japanese would have been able to rescue many more of the enemy, but for the deadly fire of the shore batteries and the close approach of the Russian cruiser Novik. The report also explains that four men rescued were not part of the crew of the Sternguschtuhi, as originally reported.

When the Japanese rescuers reached the Sternguschtuhi she had been remained on board, and it is believed the living members of the crew jumped overboard and were picked. Three of the Russians rescued are captured and the fourth is a torpedo operator. Two of the captives were slightly wounded. They were all placed aboard a Japanese battleship and were given food and clothing.

Thrown From a Pony.

London, March 15.—Word has been received here of the first accident to a war correspondent in the Far East. Mr. McKenzie, representative of The Daily Mail in Corea, had both legs broken by a fall from a pony.

Advance on Newchwang.

Paris, March 15.—The Temps' correspondent at Newchwang telegraphs in that city that Russian troops from a tour along the Manchurian frontier. Thy trains are crowded with Chinese soldiers, numbering towards of 20,000, on their way to Mukden. It is believed a Japanese attack is expected as soon as a thaw sets in, probably in about ten days."

The correspondent of The Temps at St. Petersburg says: "The Japanese thus far have captured seven Russian merchant ships, the commanders did not know war had begun.

"It is considered that the naval strength of Russia still equals that of Japan, including in the estimate the fortresses of Port Arthur and Vladivostock and the Baltic fleet."

LIVE STOCK INDUSTRY.

Backbone of Agriculture in Canada Says the Minister of Agriculture.

Toronto, March 15.—At the Canadian Club luncheon yesterday afternoon the Hon. Sydney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, for the Dominion, was the guest and spoke on the position and prospects of the agricultural interest in Canada. In his introductory remarks he referred to the advantages Canada enjoyed in that respect, Canadians, he said, lived in the northern part of the temperate zone under conditions which produced the highest type and character of men and women. It was the same in Europe, where the northern nations were the strongest and most vigorous. What was true of the human race was also true of the animal. The climate, soil and local environment of Canada combined the highest quality of domestic animals to be found. This had been brought by careful breeding from pure stock and now Canada was exporting largely to South America, Mexico and the West Indies.

Foundation of Prosperity.

Canadian animals were superior to all others in the way of live stock, and that industry was the foundation of her agricultural prosperity. He felt assured what was true of Ontario to-day would also become true of the great West, and as it improved the Northwest would in the future be seen maintaining vast quantities of live stock. It would not affect the production of wheat, but rather increase it. He believed the fundamental principle for the progress of agriculture in Canada was to produce the live stock industry to its highest possible development.

What are we doing in the way of organization and development? The Department of Agriculture had been working in the same line for a long time, expending much money and giving all matters more attention. Farmers were wanting more and more, and the Government were responding to the demand.

Denmark the Only Rival.

Canada was the more highly organized country, agriculturally, in the world with one exception. Denmark stood first, Canada had nothing to fear from the United States. They could beat their great neighbors in every line who, boastful as they were, had to take the second place all the time. But Denmark beat Canada in organization, education and co-operation of the Government with the producers.

Canada Accepts Invitation.

New York, March 15.—The Canadian Government has formally accepted the invitation to be represented at the American Congress on Tuberculosis, which will be held in connection with the St. Louis Exposition, in October, 1904.

BROKEN PROMISES!

Our esteemed Thurlow friend, who is waiting so patiently for a Senatorship, has this consoling reflection—he is not alone bemoaning unfulfilled promises. Even the Grit press is beginning to raise its indignant voice against the manner in which promises are made and broken, and patronage bestowed by both the Dominion and Ontario Governments.

The Seaforth Expositor, a faithful adherent of Gritism, not long since, made an attack upon the Ross Government for having kept the Registrarship of Huron vacant for years and then appointing to the position a relative of Attorney Gibson, notwithstanding a pledge which had been given to a gentleman, that he should have the office if he would but consent to contest the constituency in the interests of the party.

The Mitchell Recorder, another of the faithful, is not at all mealy-mouthed in its denunciations of the powers that be for the manner in which patronage is bestowed. It thus expresses its condemnation:

"All recent appointments have been made on the family circle or family compact system. If you are not one of the household, or of some wife's relations, it does not count. It would appear as if all those were to be looked after before the final act, and the man of long service may tell on for the reward that cometh at the cemetery gate. 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant: I have promised and deceived thee many times, but it is a long road that has no turns; only continue faithful: serve on and thy turn will come sure—at the cemetery gate.' That is about the language of the present Ross-Gibson-Dryden combination.

"To be within the family circle, or to have unlimited services of Jackson quality in South Oxford, be the only qualification that counts for recognition in politics today."

"I have promised and deceived that many times, but it is a long road that has no turn, only continue faithful, serve on and thy turn will come sure—at the cemetery gate." My dear to a dot, we fancy we hear Nathaniel, of Rumlow, exclaim. Jerry, I have been a good and faithful servant; I have been long in the service, promises have been made by the great men in the party, but never, never, fulfilled. Will they ever be? A solemn query, Jerry. Will he not now exclaim in the language of Miles Cook:

"They promise—I bow and am thankful:
They fail to perform—I ne'er fret."

This, of course, is the position of the vain and faithful. Sheh better accept another post's opinion of such politicians, and sing with him:

"When wicked men make promises,
Of truth,
"Tis weakness to believe 'em."

TIMELY TOPICS.

In another column will be found a letter signed "Taxpayer," which is a decidedly trenchant one, and we fear that, when his ire has had time to further the interests of the city our correspondent has been somewhat unjust to some of its servants. The Chief of Police, we believe, has never failed to perform any duties which have been expressly allotted to him. The trouble appears to be that the duty of Police Court Clerk is not fastened upon anybody. The by-law says that the City Clerk shall act as Police Court Clerk and, WHEN PRACTICABLE, keep a record of the same. Sometimes it is not practicable for the City Clerk to attend the Police Court. To-day, for instance, he is in Toronto, in connection with the city's legal business. We quite agree with "Taxpayer" that the matter is a trivial one, and that it would be better for all parties concerned if more amity were shown among the city's servants. But the fact remains that here is a duty which is the city's to provide, to perform. True, it is not a very heavy duty, and the performance of it would break no one's back, but there it is, just the same.

Apropos of this matter it may be pointed out that The Intelligencer of a day or so ago had a conversation with Mr. Miles, in which he pointed out that the duties of City Clerk and Solicitor, as constituted at present, were much more onerous than in former years. Ten years ago Mr. Miles' minutes occupied only 118 pages and there were only 28 by-laws passed, as against 198 pages and 70 by-laws in 1903; ten years ago the City Clerk and Solicitor were paid $1700, as against $1000 at present. Mr. Miles also pointed out that the Council had recently placed upon him the clerical work in connection with the operation of the Gas works, which duties, he thinks, are worth fully $200 more per year. Taking the above facts into consideration there appear a good deal of force in Mr. Miles's contention that he should be relieved of such trivial duties as those in connection with the Police Court. How the change is to be made is, of course, for the Council to determine.

A correspondent writes: "I noticed in your columns a day or two ago some subjective comments on the action of a certain Roman Catholic Mayor in Brantford, who attended a meeting of the Grand Orange Lodge, and officially welcomed them to the city. I would respectfully point out that the action, though unique, was not unprecedented, the same thing having been done in this city by Ex-Ald. Doyle who at the time was acting Mayor of Belleville. Honor to whom honor is due."

By all means. Ex-Ald. Doyle deserved just as much encouragement as the Mayor of Brantford, and, if our memory is not defective, received his just meed of praise in The Intelligencer at the time. Ex-Ald. Doyle's shamrock, when he puts it in his hat next Thursday, will crown the head of a broad-minded and big-hearted Irishman. Long may he live to wear it.

AN OLD SALT'S ROAR.

(London Tatler.)

The sensation of the evening at the Canada Club dinner to Mr. Alfred Lyttelton was the reply of Sir John Hopkins to the German Emperor. Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, who gave the toast of "The Imperial Forces," wound up with a reference to the Emperor's claim to Waterloo as a German battle, when the Admiral who was to respond for the navy jumped up—half of salt that he is—and in a voice which would have shamed a fog-horn exclaimed: "There may be some doubt as to who was at Waterloo, but there can be none about Trafalgar." For five minutes nothing could be heard through the cheers.

"It is prophesied by a clairvoyant that Japan will be victorious in May. Russia will lose all but four of her ships of war. In June war will be brought to an end, as the result of Nihilism in Russia, but late in autumn before peace is officially declared. On March 29th Port Arthur will be reduced to ashes by the Japanese."

It will gratify the majority of our citizens to learn, by the article in another column, that the Belleville Gas By-law Bill has been approved by the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature, and that, in all procability, the last vestige of legal opposition to the by-law is thus removed. This is especially gratifying in that, we are informed, it will greatly strengthen the Council's hands in the matter of disposing of the debentures, and bring nearer the time when the fuel gas system can be extended and placed within the reach of large numbers of our citizens who are now debarred from it. Of course the Bill still awaits final passage by the Legislature, but that may be classed as simply a matter of routine.

DAYS OF THE STAGE COACH

RECALLED IN MILLBROOK DURING THE SNOW BLOCKADE.

(Millbrook Reporter.)

The glorious days of the stage coach and mail delivery by horses were brought back to us on Saturday last, not having received any mail from Thursday noon, the Post Office Inspector at Toronto was communicated with at noon on Saturday and asked if he could not relieve the situation. He at once very kindly consented to instruct the postmaster at Port Hope to engage a team and bring out the delayed mails. Then the great question was, when will we get the papers? How long will it take to drive from Port Hope? About 4 o'clock the postmaster at Port Hope was called up, and he stated that His Majesty's mails were leaving for Millbrook at four o'clock. This was equally good news. Then the speculations again began, and until 8 p.m. when Inspector Smith drove up, their eager look east towards the turn of the Port Hope road. Many farmers were waiting as anxiously as the town-folks. Postmaster Vanes, Miss Stewart, Miss Lottie Vanes and Miss Nellie Hetherington were busy as sailors for a while sorting over twenty-seven bags, but they did themselves proud by going through them in less than an hour, and by 9 p.m. the wheat was opened to the waiting throng. The jam in the lobby was never so great, box-holders grasping a paper as soon as it was put out to get the war and other news. The mails were taken from here to Port Hope by the return team. On Sunday another batch was brought out. The public are very thankful to Mr. Vanes for his thoughtful courtesy in accommodating them at that hour of the night, staying there as he did till the office was emptied.

Mischievous Speeches.

(Toronto Star.)

Mr. Stead is in South Africa, and is reported to have made a speech at Cape Town, in which he declared the Dutch war to have been unjust, and because of it he was ashamed of his countrymen.

A man may fairly claim the right to have his own opinions and to express them if he will. This is a privilege which British citizens assert generally with success in their own country, but seldom with success anywhere outside their own country. Mr. Stead expressed his views freely in England, where public opinion was against him from first to last throughout the war. In the course he took in England he doubtless believed himself in the right, but it is impossible to think that he can expect to accomplish any good purpose by going to South Africa to denounce his countrymen in the hearing of the conquered Boers. The war is over. Justice unjust, it is past, and the work is under way of healing its wounds and bringing into harmony the races that waged with other. Mr. Stead can only embitter Boer feeling by such speeches as he is credited with making. He can also gain some of that notoriety which his critics say is the breath of his life.

Save Your Children's Eyes

Astigmatism is a very common, but a very little understood ailment of the eyes. It is the cause of most eye troubles. It does not mean that the eyes are weak or have any disease. It means that the eyes do not focus on the same point; therefore, the muscles of the one eye which focuses incorrectly are constantly straining to pull that eye around into focus with the other eye. That straining eventually causes headaches and nervous troubles. If neglected, it will cause serious eye-weakness. All school children should have their eyes tested to see if this defect is present. Many adults also need examination for it. We make no charge for such an examination, and have every necessary scientific apparatus for making the examination perfect and thorough. Come in and talk it over with us anyway.

The Poison In Mackerel.

There is no more wholesome food among fish than a mackerel, yet close along the backbone of that same edible there lies a strip of flesh which may bring you to death's door even if it fails to kill you. You may eat it a hundred times and it will be as wholesome as the rest of the fish, but the hundred and first time, or earlier it may cause terrible trouble. This is because it occasionally, without any sign or any known reason, distills a powerful irritant poison. There is no difference in the appearance of the fish or in its flavor; nothing to warn you of the danger. The only remedy is to leave the spine of the fish alone and not taste the flesh that lies in the angle of the backbone's edges. There is never a year without a few deaths from this cause, though you might eat mackerel scores of times without taking harm. Yet animals have some way of detecting the poison, and a cat will not eat the flesh from the mackerel's spine if it is dangerous. It is not a question of staleness—a perfectly fresh fish may be deadly and a stale one harmless.—London Standard.

Lady Grey's Dull Evening.

Thomas Creevey, who lived in the early part of the nineteenth century, has presented some queer pictures of English court life. During the reign of King William IV. Creevey wrote: "The Greys had just come from Windsor castle. Lady Grey, in her own distressed manner, said she was really more dead than alive. She said all the boring she had ever endured—before was literally nothing compared with her misery of the two preceding nights. She hoped she never should see a mahogany table again, she was so tired with the one that the queen and the king, the Duchess of Gloucester, Princess Augusta, Mme. Lieven and herself had sat around for hours, the queen knitting or netting a purse, the king sleeping and occasionally waking for the purpose of saying, 'Exactly so, ma'am,' and then sleeping again. The queen was cold as ice to Lady Grey till the moment she came away, when she could afford to be a little civil at getting quit of her."

Curious Hunting Custom.

The Labrador Indians when on a hunt stalk on in advance of the train with their arms, while the women, heavily laden with provisions and means of shelter, drag along slowly after. When the lords and masters begin to think of food time or wish in any way to leave some guide as to their progress for the squaws they thrust an upright spear or stick in the snow and draw in the snow the exact line of the shadow then cast. The women, toiling painfully along, note the spear and the progress of the shadow and know closely the difference of time. They know, too, whether they dare to linger for a few minutes' rest or if they must hastily catch the stick or spear and hurry on.

Long Journeys Made by Whales.

The whales that swim about the islands which lie off the coast of Norway and Finland in March and April travel immense distances. In May they turn up at the Azores or even at the Bermudas and sometimes pay a visit to the Antilles. They swim fast, for in June they are back again off Norway. Some of these whales have been known to bring back evidences of where they have been, for harpoons of the peculiar kind used off the coast of South America have been found stuck in them.—St. James Gazette.

Odd Japanese Customs.

The Japanese houses have no chimneys, and you are never warm enough until the house catches fire. The Japanese have beef and no mutton; the Chinese have mutton and no beef. Japanese bells, like Japanese belles, have no tongues; Japanese snakes have no poison; Japanese maids have no harmony. The Japanese alphabet is not an alphabet, but a selection of seventy useful ideograms to dispense with the 30,000 in ordinary use by the Chinese.—"Queer Things About Japan."

A Story of Brahms.

A rather celebrated composer asked to be allowed to play his very latest composition to Brahms, and did so with tremendous vigor, the perspiration streaming down his face as he pounded the piano. Brahms at the end of the performance picked up a sheet of the manuscript and, feeling it between his finger and thumb, enthusiastically exclaimed: "I say, where do you get your music paper? It's first rate."

Plants Without Roots.

The "flower of the air" is a curious plant found in China and Japan. It is so called because it appears to have no root and is never fixed to the earth. It twines round a dry tree or sterile rock. Each shoot produces two or three flowers like a lily—white, transparent and odoriferous. It is capable of being transported 500 or 700 miles, and it grows as it travels, suspended on a twig.

Theresa.

"Do all roses have thorns, pop?"
"Yes, my son."
"I sa can't feel any on those roses on ma's hat."
"You would if you had to pay for the hat, my son."

Bobbie's Metaphor.

"What do you think now, Bobbie?" remarked the mother as she boxed his ears.

"I don't think," replied the boy. "My train of thought has been delayed by a hot box."

MAKE YOURSELF NECESSARY
.. TO SOMEBODY ..

(Emerson)

We have made ourselves necessary to a great many "somebodies," when it comes to the question of Clothing. We know of nothing that is more of a necessity to-day than good Clothing.

Our showing of New Spring Styles in men's Suits has never been equalled, even in our own store, and an inspection of them will most surely convince you how necessary we are to a man's comfort and welfare.

No matter what your taste for clothes is, we can please it. The brightest of Tweeds—the prettiest shades of blue in serges and worsteds, with a range of prices that make choosing an easy matter. Say, $5 to $15 and all the betweens in prices.

A few minutes of your time spent among the suits will tell you more than we can if we used a page of this paper.

Mozart's Musical Memory.

Mozart had a wonderful memory of musical sounds. When only fourteen years of age he went to Rome to assist in the solemnities of holy week. Immediately after his arrival he went to the Sistine chapel to hear the famous "Miserere" of Allegri. Being aware that it was forbidden to take or give a copy of this renowned piece of music, Mozart placed himself in a corner and gave the strictest attention to the music and on leaving the church noted down the entire piece. A few days afterward he heard it a second time and, following the music with his own copy in his hand, satisfied himself of the fidelity of his memory. The next day he sang the "Miserere" at a concert, accompanying himself on the harpsichord, and the performance produced such a sensation in Rome that Pope Clement XIV. requested that this musical prodigy should be presented to him at once.

A Story at Whistler.

One day Whistler entered the atelier of his class in Paris and found that a red background had been arranged behind the model and the teacher directed something of a duller tone to be substituted, and he pointed to the red patch of the canvas of one of the pupils, putting in its place another background. But the red would show through. The scraped, studied and worked laboriously to get something that pleased him. The rest of the class surrounded the easel and eagerly watched the master. He looked up finally and said, "I suppose you know what I am trying to do?" "Oh, yes, sir!" they all chorused. "Well, it's more than I do," he replied grimly and left the place.

What Puzzled Him.

A well known clubman entered a police station and said to the sergeant, "I would like to have an interview with that burglar you arrested for breaking into my house last night." Sergeant—I don't know that I can allow you unless you first tell me what you want to see him for. Clubman—Oh, there's nothing secret about it. I just wanted to find out how he got into my house so easily; for more than I can do at night.

"Living wages" in London.

London by night is shortly to have a unique attraction in the shape of a gigantic traveling restaurant, which will perambulate the street for the benefit of those who desire refreshment later than that provided at the ordinary coffee stall, says The London Mail. The traveling restaurant consists of a lavishly ornamented van some twenty feet long by six in width, with a doorway at the side, to which the customer ascends from the street by a miniature flight of steps. Colored glass panels bearing allegorical designs form the windows round the sides, and the back of the car bears in large letters the announcement, "Night lunch."

Children Marched Out.

Pickering, March 15.—Fire was discovered yesterday afternoon in the basement of the Public School building. The pupils were dismissed by the teachers, and passed quietly out. The fire alarm was sounded, and the local fire brigade was soon on the spot, and, with the assistance of the citizens, soon extinguished the flames. The damage to the building will not reach $50.

There is an old superstition that to be born on Christmas day is to be lucky all one's life, and in Bilesia there is a belief that a boy born on Christmas day must be brought up a lawyer or he will become a thief.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Thanks. We just needed a little more snow to loosen up the muscles in our "strong right arms."

The snow shovel surely lingers in the lap of the lawn mower this year.

Q. the snow, the beautiful snow. Will it ever take a notion to go And refrain from causing us further woe?

A wireless special from Mr. William Johnson says they passed Bermuda on Sunday, and he gave the Chautauqua salute to many people who formerly attended commercial college here. The only thing worries Mr. Johnson now is that he fears he will be unable to procure shamrocks for St. Patrick's day, but as he'll be in Madeira on the 17th "where geranium verdure greets the sea" he'll have to let it go at that and make the best of it.

Why is the present war like a batch of sour bread? Because the trouble is in the ferment.

Owen Sounders imposed a license of $250 on the sale of cigarettes. Coffin nails will go out of fashion there.

We are gradually finding out some interesting things about the Japs, and very much up-to-date leaders in Japan's army and navy. Admiral Uriu, the hero of Chemulpo, received his education at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, U. S. A. While there he was president of the Y.M.C.A. Admiral Togo, who has been keeping the Russian fleet at Port Arthur very uncomfortable, is an English-trained sailor, having been educated on board the "Worcester," of the Thames Nautical Training College. He is forty-six years of age.

The true "yellow peril," in the opinion of the New Orleans Times-Democrat, is the imminence of "the Russian serpent." "Having in the present conflict secured a firm foothold in China, she would slowly but surely march forward to further conquests, and at length, with the aid of Chinese levies trained for war by her officers, drive the other Europeans in China into the sea, without the slightest danger of interfering being able to avert the catastrophe."

PHYSICIANS EVERYWHERE

KNOW THE VALUE OF PYRAMID PILE CURE.

"Gratitude alone prompts me to testify to the efficacy of Pyramid Pile Cure. Last March I bought a dollar package at the drug store, which cured me of bleeding piles, and I was a stranger from them for eight years; but I had not been troubled with them since, until last September, when I gave birth to a baby girl, and after that I had a very severe time of it getting piles, which a trained nurse said was the worst case she ever saw, and my doctor told me to get Pyramid Pile Cure again, which I did at once, and completely cured in three days. I have not had piles at all since then, and it is all owing to this wonderful remedy. My only task is to tell those I am glad to be able to give my name, and I know she will be able to help lots of suffering women. Yours very sincerely, MRS. G. SOWDEN."

"I recommend Pyramids' wherever I know of anyone suffering as I did. It gives me great pleasure to be able to say I am entirely cured, which my doctor says is due to Pyramid Pile Cure." From a former great sufferer, Mrs. F. Annett, 1736 Unity street, Philadelphia, Pa.

This remedy, which is sold by druggists generally, in fifty cent and dollar packages, is in a supposedly forty cent size, put directly in the parts affected and performs its work quickly and painlessly. Its value is evidenced by the testimony given above, and we urge all sufferers to buy a package now and give it a trial to-night. Accept no substitute and remember that a cure is no remedy "just as good." A little book on Piles and other rectal troubles is published by the Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and will be sent free to any address.

BABY'S ECZEMA

Top of Head Covered with Scales Which Peeled off Taking Hair with Them.

CURED BY CUTICURA

Now Six Years Old with Thick Hair and Clean Scalp. Cure Permanent.

"My baby was about six weeks old when the top of her head became covered with thick scales, which would peel and come off, taking the hair with it. It would soon form again and be as bad as before. I tried several things and then went to the doctor. He said it was Eczema, and prescribed an ointment, which did not do any good. A friend spoke of Cuticura Soap. I tried it and read on the wrapper about Cuticura Ointment as a remedy for Eczema. I bought a box and washed her head in warm water and Cuticura Soap and gently combed the scales off. They did not come back and her hair grew out fine and thick. She is now a year and a half old and has no trace of Eczema." MRS. C. W. BURGES, Insurance Agent, Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 21, 1903.

Mrs. Burges writes Feb. 28, 1903:

"My baby, who had Eczema very badly on her head, as I told you before, after using the Cuticura Remedies was cured. She is now six years old and has thick hair and a clean scalp."

Instant relief and refreshing sleep for skin-tortured babies and rest for tired, worried mothers in warm baths with Cuticura Soap, and gentle anointings with Cuticura Ointment, purest of emollients and greatest of skin cures, may be followed in severe cases by mild doses of Cuticura Resolvent. This is the purest, sweetest, most speedy, permanent and economical treatment for torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted and pimply skin and scalp humours, with loss of hair, of infants and children, as well as adults, and is sure to succeed when all other remedies and the best physicians fail.

Cuticura Soap (31), to prevent inflammation and clear the skin and scalp, Cuticura Ointment (32), to instantly allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and Cuticura Pills (33), to purify the blood, may be had of all druggists throughout the world. THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.
A face covered with pimples is unsightly. Salts of Sulphur and Sarsaparilla which should long since have been corrected, are the cause. The kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and those pimples tell you so. Iron knew that the blood protector, Dominion Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and soft as velvet. Clean, and then will be another witness to their excellence.
If you have a good business, it is always better to stay where you are. Disappointments in the matter of moneymaking and the whole body given up to worry and misery. But there is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness come to add to the distress. If only the wholesome truth were known there be no offense for a while and temporary pills. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will set to beautifully that the whole body will wake refreshed and restored to health.
When one gets hopping mad he or she goes on a spree.
A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Ose Hill, Ont., writes; "For the benefit of others I write to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a terrible pain in my side, was troubled with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy and was told so frequently to cure the sore that all to no purpose. Before I had finished trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, I was able to do the work I had used about one-half, the sore healed, strength came back to me, and in the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improved. I took in all five bottles of a very bilious habit and had a clear complexion, also with a very healthy effect. But since using 5 bottles I feel like a new person. Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 68 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."
The best remedy for sore and always-make the best shoe.
THE GREAT Spanish bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has stood the test of time. Its unique intercolorating class of so-called medicinal oils, and its power to cure almost fully-affective—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, as well as bodily ailments, being an excellent specific for rheumatism, and a powerful household remedy.
Such talk many lies.
It's pretty tough when a man can't even get credit for his good intentions.
Those two desirable qualifications, a good appetite and excellent health, are to be found in Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup. Children like it.
It is like money to voice the opinion of a lawyer.
To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will do the work.
The average wash represents but little money in the world.
They make one feel as though life was worth living. That's what Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, drive off the blues, and regulate the liver.
Never be afraid of going little because it is not abed.
Nothing so exactly contrasts the appearance of a well-groomed man from heat to cold. Heat rarefies the mood, softens the complexion and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked by cold appearance is bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration. Many deaths are suggested by the name at catching cold. Ongoing Trouble, Bronchitis, Asthma, Consumption and other diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected cold or lingering cough. Let it go on by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure to draughts, and consumption is almost supposed. One of the most effective remedies known for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It gives quick relief and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by which the cough is kept up, and is ceased to a healthy state.
Or, not doing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.
Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? If not do so at once. It never fails, causes troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.
A long partage makes a weary traveller.

are Banished by Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. It relieves in 10 minutes.

F. A. Botton, druggist, Cookshire, Que., says: "For over 2 years I suffered from Catarrh of the head was very offensive even to myself. I used Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder and in 10 minutes all distressful symptoms I had to proclaim them no longer existed. I was relieved by Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. I got relief instantly after the first application. I am now free from all offensive effects of it."

The Filigree Ball

BY ANNA KATHERINE GREEN
AUTHOR OF
"THE LEAVENWORTH CASE."

That I might the more readily determine which of these two theories the truth had its basis in fact, I took advantage of an afternoon off and slipped away to Amsterdam, where I had been told, Mr. Jeffrey had courted his bride, if not with a taste of local gaiety, you see, and I got it. The air was fully charged with it, and being naturally not averse to participation by announcing myself a detective, I readily picked up many small facts. Brought into shape and arranged in the form of a narrative, the result was as follows:

John Judson Moore, the father of Veronica, had few oddities than the other members of this eccentric family. He had a fortune, however, that he had shown some strain of the peculiar independence of his race when, in selecting a wife, he let his choice fall on a woman who, if rich and unencumbered with a child, but who was generally regarded as the plainest woman in the whole city who might have had the pick of Southern beauties. It was in the course of time this despised woman proved to be possessed of those virtues and social graces which eminently fitted her to conduct the large establishment of which she had been made mistress, he was forgiven his lack of beauty, but it was said of many of his peculiarities until, his wife having died and just as he was about to remarry, made the will in his brother's favor, which he had given that gentleman such deep satisfaction.

Why this proceeding should have been so objectionable to their friends report says not, but that it was so is evident from the fact that a great rejoicing took place on all sides when the widower, suddenly developed into a healthy child and the probability of David Moore's inheriting the entire estate seemed to be a minimum. It was not a long relowed his wife to the grave before marrying the pretty girl who had been left motherless in the world, leaving her and her half-sister, Cora, to the tender care of the kindhearted old bachelor who had been his father's lawyer. This lawyer was undoubtedly the only one of the family who was not disappointed at the event. For although the new bride seemed happy enough when, suddenly and somewhat unexpectedly, she became mistress of Veronica being sent to a western school, where she remained, seemingly without a single visit, till she was seventeen. During this period, which was little realized in Washington, developing under masters into an accomplished woman. Veronica's guardian, severe in his treatment of the youthful ones of the large fortune of which he had been made sole executor, was unexpectedly pressed into the service of his niece, Cora Tuttle was not easy to please, and the first men of Washington came and went before her eyes without awakening in her any spark of interest till the name of Francis Jeffrey who stole her heart with a look.

How she was won and what that winner say that under his influence she developed from a handsome woman into a lovely one, let no engagement was announced, and society was thoroughly taken by Francis Jeffrey back from so great a prize, without much surprise, however, and the question was forever answered.

Veronica was now nearly eighteen, and during her absence had bloomed into womanhood. She was not as beautiful as her sister, but she had a bright, if not engaging manner, with enough spice in her temperament to vivify the finer features of insipidity and make her conversation by no means dull. Her father and Francis Jeffrey turned his attentions from Miss Tuttle and fixed them without pause upon the younger girl, upon this pretty butterfly, but one who could be relied upon to characterize the preceding, and that was, for homecoming. Of small fortune in income, he had hitherto shown a certain contentment with his condition and violated no fine respect and make his attentions to Miss Tuttle seem both natural and appropriate. But no sooner did Veronica's name begin to appear on the lips of the young heiress' feet and pressed the ball so close after that in two months they were engaged and on the end of the half-year, marriedwith the distinguished consequence just made known.

So much for the general gossip of the town. Now for the special.

A certain gentleman, whom it is unnecessary to name, had been present at one critical instant in the lives of the two principals. He was not a scandal-monger, and if everything that Judge Caldwell's chronicles had lived and Cora gettled down into comfortable life would never have mentioned what he heard and saw one night in the great drawing-room of a ball in Atlantic City.

It was at the time when the engagement was first announced between Jeffrey and the young heiress. This and his previous attentions to Cora had given rise to talk, and to Washington and elsewhere, and there were not lacking those who had openly twitted him for his seeming inconstancy. This had been over the cups of course, and Jeffrey had borne it well enough from his so-called friends and intimates. But when, on a certain evening in the parlor of one of the large hotels in Atlantic City, a fellow whom no body knew and nobody liked accused him of knowing on which side his bread was buttered, and that certainly it was not on the side of beauty and superior attainments, Jeffrey got angry. Heedless of who might be within hearing, he spoke up very plainly in these words: "You are all of a kind, rank penny-wise-and-pound-foolish, and if you could see as much as I do of your folly, you would still see me at the head of the class. Miss Moore's agreeable as I find it to air my sentiments in this public manner, you will once you provoke me to it, I will say one and for all, that I am deeply in love with Miss Moore, and that it is for this reason only I am going to marry her. Were she the penniless girl her sister and Miss Tuttle the proud possessor of the wealth which, in your eyes, constitutes the attraction, you would still see me at the head of the class."

Jeffrey himself was chagrined, and made a motion to follow the young man, but he probably seemed, but the look she cast back at him was one to be remembered. It was evident she was there left for him to say, somewhat in the following manner, but in all its bald frankness and nothing could alter it. "I am sorry I have been so overcome by my woman's pride, so far as the feeling is concerned, but my head is clear enough. I have not been a fool in this matter. I have married for love, but I have married for money also. I determined to drop theory and confine myself to facts.

And from that day the first few days succeeding the tragic discovery in the Moore house.

CHAPTER VII.

The next morning my duty led me directly in the way of that little group of which Jeffrey had been mentioned. It is strange how often my duty did lead me in her way.

Miss Moore was in full bloom, with all its bright as her eyes, which, by the way, were very fine while in the course of our long talk came to be very expressive, making use of the special abilities I saw in her, I felt that the time had come to show her might prove a most indefinable value to me.

Therefore, I put on my pardonable abruptness. I expressed my wishes in the following manner:

"Jimmy, you can do something for me. I have a feeling that you can, that, too, without arousing suspicion or compromising either of us. Miss Moore, I am told, would employ his greenness, and when you have seen her, Jimmy, I shall be lately reinstated himself with her."

The surprise which she showed had a touch of naivete in it which was very entertaining.

"Mr. Monroe!" she cried, "the uncle of her husband?"

"The very same," I responded, and waited for her further comment, and did not long.

She gave me a look—oh, what a look! It was as encouraging to me as it was surprising to the lover, after which she nodded, and I left her, to see her again but once in frank and laughing consent, and that was all.

I thanked Providence for such a self-contained little aide-de-camp and proceeded on my way to the next great self-satisfaction.

Mr. Moore, I knew, I came upon her again. It is really extraordinary how I frequently hit the paths of some people.

"Hello!" I asked.

"Mr Moore deals with Simpkins, just two blocks away from his house; and there I met him, and he came and candles there."

I regarded her with a smile which summoned into view the most exasperating of dimples.

"You had better patronize Simpkins yourself for a little while," I suggested; and by the arch glance with which my words were received, I perceived that my meaning was fully understood.

Experiencing from this moment an increased confidence, not only in the powers of my little friend, but in the line of action which I had already established, I cast about for means of settling the one great question which was a necessary preliminary to all future action: Whether the marks detected by me in the dust of the mantel in the softest chamber had been made by the hand of him who had lately felt the need of candles, albeit his house appeared to be fully lighted by gas?

The subterfuge by which, notwithstanding my many disadvantages, I was finally enabled to take an unmistakable answer to this query was the theft of much candlewick. Perhaps I was too proud of it. Perhaps I should have mistrusted myself more from the start. Certain it is my egotism in those days, and reckoned from the above incident, was of a bright ideas which I could safely call my own.

The point aimed at was this: to obtain without Mr. Moore's knowledge an impression of wax in his finger-tips.

The task presented difficulties, but these served only to increase my ardor.

Confiding to the lieutenant of the precinct my great interest in the mysterious affair with whose congenitive interior I had made myself acquainted under such peculiar circumstances, I asked him as a personal favor to relieve me for a few hours of my duty of spending another night there. He was evidently surprised by the request, but otherwise, as I supposed, any great longings himself in this direction, and, moreover, under the some reason I set great store on this application, granted it, and I have no think that he suspected in the least what that reason was—and being, as I have already intimated, indifferent to me, he exerted himself to such good effect that I was promptly detailed to assist in keeping watch over the premises for the night.

I think that it was at this point I began to reckon on the success which, after many days of doubts and mischances, was yet to reward my efforts.

As I prepared to enter the old house on that night, the thought of one short glance across the way to the top of my apartment, and be set by the man whose secret, if secret he had, I was laying plans to penetrate, filled me with a joy I had not expected. Passing on the threshold to the left of the handsome elderly gentleman whose appearance was to undergo such thoroughly up to date, that I should have failed to recognize him if my eyes had not been fixed on the most instant the figure of Judge crouching behind the door, I took the room where he had evidently passed himself for the night, and, after a few words of my own foretold, I made haste to leave the room, to which I was to be confined for many hours, to be greeted my adhand nod and the police sergeant, who, I remember, was whether Uncle David had had any share in the fatal business which had rendered the room in it vacant not visited so memorable.

Hard, and unsatisfying by a peep through the front drawing-room window that he was positively alone, I went directly to the kitchen, procured a chair and carried it into the hall, where I put it to a use that, to an onlooker, might have appeared peculiar. Planting it squarely on the hearthstone, and without the slightest perturbation as to what the results might be to myself, I mounted it and proceeded to the very exacting which I have already described as having taken place that night.

Setting it on end against one of the panels of the parlor, I carried it to the chair once more and carefully lifted over the high shelf the contents of a box standing within I had brought with me for this purpose.

Then, having replaced the chair, I took myself out of the front door, and, deliberately unlocking it, locked it and put the key in my pocket.

Crossing immediately to Mr. Moore's side of the street, I encountered there as I had expected, the lieutenant on his own gateway.

"Well, anything more?" he inquired, with the same exaggerated courtesy I had noticed in him on a previous occasion. "You have the key, I see, a man bringing news. Has anything been discovered in the house?"

I assumed a frankness which seemed to him innocent.

"Do you know," I sententiously informed him, "I have a wonderful interest in the old bachelor-uncle, or rather in the seemingly innocent employment which he has left behind him. Franklin at the Court of Francis. I tell you that there is a fine field there for what would be found behind the pictures."

I saw, by his quick look, that I had stirred up a hornets' nest. This was what I had calculated to do.

"Behind it!" he repeated. "There is nothing behind it."

I laughed, shrugged my shoulders, and looked slowly toward the door.

"Of course, you should know," I retorted. "With some condescension. Then, as if struck by a sudden remembrance, I added: "I am sorry you been told that there is a fireplace on that lower floor which does not stay fastened? I speak of it that you may have it repaired as soon as possible. It's the last one in the hall leading to the negro quarters. If you shake it hard enough, the catch falls back and any one can raise it even from the outside."

"I will see to it," he replied, dropping his eyes, probably to hide the curious twinkle. "But what do you know about finding something in the wall behind that old picture? I've not heard—"

"Not enough he spoke quickly and shouted that I was not afraid to be at the top of his voice. I was by this time too far away to respond save by a dubious smile, and a semi-yawning wave of the hand. Not until I was nearly out of earshot did I venture to shout back the following words:

"I'll be back—in an hour. If anything happens—if the boys annoy you, or anybody attempts to enter the old house, telephone to the station or summon the office at the corner. I will be back in an hour. I will come from leaving the place to myself for a while, and I'll look around the block.

When I arrived in front again it was quite dark. So was the house; but there was a light in the hall that I felt assured that I should find Uncle-David there, and I did. When, after a considerable interval of time and advance through the hall, I threw open the door beyond the parlor glass, it was to see the tall figure of the old man standing before the chair I had left there, peering up at the hall from which I had so lately lifted the picture. He started as I presented myself and almost fell from the chair. Then he began to laugh I uttered assured him of the little important I placed upon this evidence of his daring and unappeasable curiosity, and he confronted me with a look of anger for the deep whereupon I managed to say:

"I am very much glad to see you here. It is quite natural for you to be curious, but I am sure you in your power what that picture concealed. Came back, because I suddenly remembered that I had forgotten to rehang it."

Uncle David now glanced again at the wall overhead, which was as bare as the palm of my hand, and he had already examined.

"It has concealed nothing," he retorted. "You can see for yourself that the wall is bare and that it rings as solid as any part of the house made."

Here he struck it heavily with his fist. "Are you satisfied you hung me that you had found?"

I smiled, shrugged my shoulders in token of my content, and, without action upon a like occasion and then proceeded brusquely:

"I did not come back to betray poor secrets, but to ask you to do me a favor to its place. Or perhaps you prefer to have it down rather than to have me do it? I am willing."

He scrutinized me darkly from over his shoulder, and, without answering itself in his shrewd old eyes; and then, in a more genial tone, he answered, might possess more significance than I appeared. But I did not step back-ward. I was conscious of a way that I had even thought of danger. I held out my hand. He took my picture and looked up at him for orders.

He promptly signified that he wished it hung, adding as I hesitated to mount the chair: "Surely this house are supposed to stay on the premises. I have been told it is a traditional superstition against removing the."

I immediately lifted the print from the floor. No doubt he had me at a disadvantage, but I was not in his heart, and my position on the hearth-stone was commanding enough to prevent that proved it to be. But it would have been a fatal mistake to attempt at a moment when his fate, if not my own, hung on his step down, I put foot on the chair and raised the picture to the hook. As I did so, he moved over to the huge settle of his ancestors and sat down before it, never ceasing to watch, surveyed me with a smile I have imagined was sane.

Suddenly, as I strained to put the cord over the nail he called out:

"Don't forget the key."

If he had intended to give me a start, he would have succeeded, for my nerves had grown strained and my hand firm at the glimpse I had caught of the shelf below me. The key was there, but I had scattered there had been displaced in five directions over this space, and though I had preferred to risk the loss of the picture rather than to put my hand on the shelf, but he had taken no such precaution. The clue I sought was there and for all that he had so recklessly worked, was obliterated.

But when half an hour later I found him superintending and examining these marks and comparing them with those upstairs, I did not enjoy the sensation of having overreached myself. For the two impressions attested to the fact that the person through whom the person was who had left the mark on the wax, Mrs. Jeffrey on the evening she die, it was not her uncle David.

CHAPTER VIII.

Let me repeat. The person who had left the marks of his presence in the mysterious chair and in Moore house was not the man popularly supposed to be Uncle David, but, had it been? But one name suggested itself to me,—Mr. Jeffrey.

It was not so easy for me to reach this man as it had been for me to reach the elder and more accessible uncle. In the first place, his door had been closed to every one since his wife's death. Neither friends nor acquaintances had been admitted there unless they came vested with authority from the coroner. And this, even if I could succeed in obtain it, would not answer in my case, for I had no right and do would better follow a chance encounter. But one chance presented with this gentleman seemed likely to fall to my lot, and finally I swallowed my pride and my dislike of two of the lieutenant. Would he see that, in spite of appearances, I was carrying some message, or of doing something more than curiosity should stop at this point and that I would cease to make a nuisance of myself.

I think he suspected me by this time, but he made no move, and for a day or so I was summoned to carry a note to the house in K Street.

TONSILITIS IS GOING AROUND

And everybody is wondering what to do. Here is a simple cure: Use gargle of Nerviline and water as recommended in the directions, and rub your throat and chest vigorously with Nerviline. This has been tested and proved successful a thousand times. Nerviline is a specific for tonsilitis. It is a liniment of the finest relief ever discovered. Nerviline is also unsurpassed for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago and two sweetly rendered solos by Miss Bell Wright of Toronto. Mr. F. A. Stafford presented the solos. Mr. Hinkle rendered with a handsome easy chair, during the reading of the following address to the guest of honor, Vandercourt.

Mr. and Mrs. Finkle:

"It is with great pleasure we assemble here this afternoon on behalf of Aikens' Church, and also on behalf of your Sabbath School associates and scholars, friends and relatives, and beg of you to accept the handsome chairs as a slight token of our friendship and esteem. We earnestly trust that God may spare you many years yet to labor in his vineyard as actively, earnestly and successfully as you have always done in the past, and when physically unable to labor, find rest and comfort in these expressions of our love.

Signed on behalf of those mentioned by yours sincerely,

F. A. Spafford,

HILLIER.

The Methodist social in the Town Hall on Saturday night was a success. After refreshments had been served the Methvin young people, about 16 in number, took charge and furnished the entertainment for the evening. The Methvin club had an entertainment at their own place a few weeks ago and proved such a success and drew such a crowd that they were advised to Hillier. Proceeds, after paying the club's expenses, went towards supplies for our Sunday school. A load from Bowerman's were present.

Mrs. Charles Young is visiting at her daughters, Mrs. Wesley Young near Trenton.

Mr. Isaac Tripp and family have left this district and moved to Smithfield on a farm.

Mr. Alva Crandall is busy getting his effects ready for his move to the Northwest in the spring.

Mrs. W. N. Lord and Miss Nancy Palmer visited at Mrs. S. B. Palmer's, Trenton, on Sunday last week.

Going to the steady cold weather Jack Frost has crept into several cellars and the potatoes and other vegetables have been frozen in some instances.

Our late rain has filled up the wells again to the joy of those who had to take their stock a distance to water.

Mr. Lyle Lawson nearly lost a valuable horse last week. It got loose in the night and succeeded in getting into a tube well which conveys grain from the granery above to a grain box in the stable. In the morning when the stable was entered the tube was empty and about 60 bushels of grain in a pile in the stable. The result was a well filled stable. Mr. Lord, of Wellington, was in attendance most part of the day during last week. The horse is somewhat better now.

Mr. David Alexander's new cutter met with quite a serious accident the night of the social. The horse that was tied near the back of the cutter badly chewed the plush cushions and, otherwise, disfigured the back.

SILENT FAMOUS MEN

CELEBRITIES THAT HAVE BEEN NOTED AS MISERS OF WORDS.

Some of the World's Greatest Characters Have Been as Sparing of Language as Others Have Been Prodigal of Deeds of Renown.

It is a curious and interesting fact that many of the world's greatest men have been as sparing of words as they have been prodigal of deeds.

It is doubtful if there ever lived a more taciturn man than Wallenstein, the famous commander of the Austrian army during the thirty years' war. It is said of Wallenstein that he "loved an atmosphere of silence" and never uttered a word that was not absolutely necessary, nor would he permit others to speak in his presence more than was essential. One of his chamberlains was arranged for when Wallenstein's needless noise. His servants were so many mutes, not daring to open their lips in his presence, and he was surrounded by patrols, and the approaches to his house were barricaded, that clashes to preserve him from the least disturbance. In comparison with Wallenstein, Louis XIV. of France would have been a chatterbox and William the Silent a lawyer.

But silence is a characteristic of many of the world's most famous soldiers. Napoleon boasted that his dealings with men he never wasted a word and made monosyllables answer most purposes. Cold, piercing, steadfast eyes, and he could compress more within a few minutes than most men could convey in a quarter of an hour.

The great Duke of Marlborough when receiving reports from his generals would produce his watch and say, "I will give you a minute." And it was rarely to be heard with "Thank you" he did not observe the limitation. To his staff the Duke of Wellington was always more laconic. A nod of the head or a shake of the head was often the only communication he would make, and when once he was asked what he considered the best equipment of a commander he answered, "A long head and a silent tongue."

Von Moltke almost rivaled Wallenstein in taciturnity. He never opened his mouth if a gesture would suffice, and "yes" and "no" were the limits to him that the French had declared "are he simply said to the aid-de-camp, "See, my good fellow, that you are not killed," and turned round to sleep again. But he had said all that was necessary, for the aid-de-camp understood his master's meaning.

In Successful Decorating

Successful decoration must be the outcome of study—of thought rather than of mere chance.

In the chance room there will surely be something wrong.

Possibly the color. Perchance Drawing — Likely both.

Whether Chamber, Drawing Room, Living Room, Library or Den, the room must be treated with thought of surroundings, of furniture of complexion, of lighting, of size.

The environment of a room with North or East exposure must not be blue, while either West or Southern exposure may use blue to advantage.

Literary Notes.

THREE CELEBRATED PUBLICATIONS.

We have received from the publishers, Messrs. Adam and Charles Black, of Soho Square, London, Eng., copies of three publications, which are probably unique in their different fields, viz., "Who's Who," with which is incorporated "Men and Women of the Time;" the "Author's Who's Year Book," and "The English Gentleman and Year Book." The first mentioned, "Who's Who," is, as everybody knows, probably the best compendium of biographies extant of the world's leading men. The 1904 edition contains no less than 17,000 biographies. A more valuable book, to anyone who desires to keep up with the times and know who's who, it would be impossible to imagine. This price is 7s 6d net.

Scarcely less useful is the "Who's Who Year Book," which is a compendium of all that is looked for in the ordinary book of the kind, containing besides much miscellaneous information. The price is one shilling net. Of peculiar interest to ladies who desire to be in touch with the great world "at home" is "The Englishwoman's Year Book," which deals with education, employments and professions for women, women in medicine, science, literature, art, music, public work, sports, social life, philanthropy, temperance and religion. A volume of 350 pages, it is full of valuable information from cover to cover. The price is 2s 6d net.

Either of the above books, in their 1904 editions, may be ordered from the publishers direct or their American agents, the Macmillan Company, 66 Fifth Avenue, New York.

FOXBORO.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Lloyd were conducted in the Methodist church in this village on Monday last. The deceased died quite suddenly while visiting her sister, Mrs. Wm. Gordon. There are five sons and two daughters left to mourn the loss of a loved mother.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Ben Reid is still very sick. He does not improve as rapidly as we would like.

Mrs. L. Ware is on the sick list. Mr. Tom McLaughlin is moving from our village. He is going to locate at Marlbank, where he has secured a good position for this season.

Master Earl Prentice, son of Wm. Prentice, has been very sick. We are glad to learn that he is a little better.

Mr. Tom Gay has moved in his new home.

Mr. O. Sills is slowly improving after his very serious illness, which, his hostel nearly a year. He has been able to get down to the village twice during the last week.

Mr. John Holgate is wearing a very broad smile these days, though he seems to look much older than he did a few weeks ago. He is now a Grandpa. Congratulations.

Khan. Rose, V.S., has sold his new residence in Foxboro to Mr. Stephen Hodgins of the 1st con. of Thurlow. The Doctor has rented the house formerly occupied by Mr. Wm. Wickett.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Massey, of Sidney, have the sympathy of their many friends in this village in the loss of their little daughter, Irene, who died on suddenly last week.

Bay of Quinte Conference has lost one of its most faithful ministers, in the person of Rev. Charles Ruttan, who was stricken down so suddenly a few days ago. All friends in this locality extend their sympathy to the bereaved family.

SIDNEY CROSSING.

The roads are in a bad shape, in some localities, for the passing of the gravel.

Mr. Samson Young, of Belleville, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Webster Kelly on Tuesday last.

Miss Jessie Jeffery has returned home after an extended visit with friends in West Huntingdon.

Mr. and Miss Wagar, of Enterprise, have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Seldon Ketchenson.

Mr. Angus Lawrence is improving but still confined to his bed.

Mrs. Hallett Jones, of Foxboro, has been spending the week with Mrs. Davis Hagerman.

Mrs. Augusta Woodley, of Belleville, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Vanderwater on Tuesday.

Mr. Manson Finkle, who has been ill for months, leaves this morning for Belleville to undergo a medical treatment.

Prof. Doxsee, of Albert College, ably filled the pulpit at Aikens' Church on Sunday.

Miss Beatrice Henderson, of Bayside, has been spending the week with her chum, Miss Ada Hyde.

Mrs. Lawrence, of Foxboro, is visiting a few days at the home of her son, Mr. Dave Lawrence.

A goodly number of the promiscuous weeping of Aikens' Church assembled together at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Finkle on Wednesday afternoon to show their high appreciation of "Uncle Emory" and his wife for their kind services in connection with the Sabbath School on many years. Mr. W. Young acted as chairman, and after short addresses by Rev. Mr. Doxsee and F. F. White and other selas staging and two sweetly rendered solos by Miss Bell Wright of Toronto, Mr. F. A. Spafford presented Mr. and Mrs. Finkle each with a handsome easy chair, during the reading of the following address to the guest of honor, Vandercourt.

Mr. and Mrs. Finkle:

BIRTH.

McINTOSH—In Belleville, on Saturday, March 12th, 1904, to Mr. and Mrs. John McIntosh, a daughter.

A Blustering King.

Of King George IV. Thomas Creevey, in the diary of the early part of the nineteenth century, tells this story:

The king had appointed the bishop of Winchester to administer to him the sacrament on one of the Sundays about Easter. The bishop was not punctual to his time, and when he arrived the king, in a great passion at having been kept waiting, abused and even swore at him in the most indecent manner, on which the bishop very coolly said he must be permitted to withdraw, as he perceived his majesty was not then in a fit state of mind to receive the sacrament, and should be ready to attend on some future day, when he hoped to find his majesty in a better state of preparation.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The victory of the High School team over the O.H.A. juniors last night was a clear unexpected to the supporters of the latter team. The school boys have a good record, having played 13 games this season, winning 11 of them.

Kingston Whig:—Brockville Senior Hockey Club played the Belleville intermediates in Belleville last night, and defeated the O.H.A. order not to do so. Belleville are looked upon as rebels and outlaws by the O.H.A. Brockville has got itself into trouble, but it cares little.

"Tips on the slings of sport," is how the Toronto Telegram heads its sporting column. But "Tips in the players' hands" is the way the amateur Toronto Lacrosse Club interprets things.

Some practical jokers started the story last night that the Belleville club had been reinstated in the intermediate series of the O.H.A., and ordered to play home and home finals with Stratford. There was tremendous excitement. Congratulatory meetings were held on several corners, and rumor says that the president of the local club danced the cakewalk in the Quinte, with Miss Host Jenkins as a partner. One excellent friend of the club, whose specialty is fancy quoits, was with difficulty restrained from getting his skates on at once. "On to Stratford" was his battle cry. This morning the bottom dropped out of the story and it was found to be a canard. Surely the miscreant who invents such a heartless fabrication should be run down and punished. This isn't the first of April.

Lovers of basket ball will have a treat on Friday night, when a double header will be played in the City Hall, the last game being between Albert seniors and the Y.M.C.A. team of Kingston.

HOCKEY.

School Boys Beat Juniors.

An interesting hockey match was played last evening between the teams of 3 and 4 o'clock. The players were the High School boys and the team which played in the junior O.H.A. series. The High School boys won by a score of 4 to 3. Mr. Winchester was referee and as usual gave universal satisfaction. A goodly number of spectators witnessed the game.

All Well With the Belleville Gas Bill.

PASSED THE PRIVATE BILLS COMMITTEE OF THE LEGISLATURE TO-DAY.

Mayor Chown and the City Solicitor, Mr. W. C. M.lat, are in Toronto to-day in connection with the Bill which the City of Belleville is asking the Legislature to pass in connection with the Gas By-law carried at the recent municipal election. The reason for the city's action in connection with the Bill in question is, we are informed, this: It will be remembered that after the by-law was passed last January, there was talk of opposition to it by certain parties. The City Solicitor then pointed out to the Council that, in his opinion, their best plan would be to go to the Legislature and ask for the passage of a private Bill confirming the by-law in question, namely, No. 1137 of the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville, and thus frustrating any present or prospective opposition to it. The Bill was introduced by Mr. M. H. Horrocks, M.P.P. for West Hastings.

This afternoon Ald. Sheard, secretary, chairman of the Gas Committee, received a telephone message from Mayor Chown announcing the gratifying news that the Private Bills Committee had passed the Belleville Gas Works Bill.

This action, we have been informed, when approved by the Legislature, not only does away with the interregnum called for in ordinary procedure, but quashes all opposition to the By-law in the way of legal procedure, etc.

The following despatch from Toronto, in relation to the above matter, was received by The Intelligencer:

Toronto, Ont., March 15.—Notwithstanding a protest that the by-law passed by the City of Belleville in January last, assenting to By-law No. 237, and is being attacked in the courts, the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature to-day passed the Bill confirming the by-law.

Stewart Masson, for some ratepayers, contended that the Mayor, as President of the Council, and the four Aldermen, as shareholders, had voted for the by-law, and that at least fifty other shareholders who had no right to vote had voted.

Objection was also made on behalf of the Trenton Electric and Water Co., which operates in Belleville.

MAY GO TO PLYMOUTH

CUNARD LINE MAY CHANGE ENGLISH LANDING PORT.

New York, March 12.—The Herald has the following to-day from London:—

A great sensation has been caused in shipping circles at Liverpool by the announcement to-day that several of the Cunard Company may be removed to some other port. The bomb thus exploded came from Sir Alfred Jones, the chairman of the company, who in giving evidence upon the Mersey docks and harbor before a committee in the house of commons, explained that the Cunard Company had not the accommodation it required, and that if the dock board did not provide such accommodation the Cunard steamers need no go to Liverpool. Liverpool is alive to the serious blow the loss of the Cunard line would be to the city, and if something is not done soon in the way of extending the dock accommodation the port must surely lose a portion of its enormous shipping.

Should Sir Alfred's threat be going ahead with an endeavor to secure some other transatlantic passenger and mail traffic. The Liverpool, Dublin and Liverpool will be completed in a few months, which fact the company ought to be further inducements for Cunard to call there, especially as arrangements have been made for accelerated train service to London.

Dating from April 9, the work of handling passengers and despatching them to London will be entrusted to the London and Southwestern Railway Co. Passengers from the steamship will there be met by the new arrangement, will find themselves landed almost alongside an express train waiting to take them to London immediately. Crossing the gangway they will find themselves under cover, with comfortable waiting rooms a few yards away, heated by American stoves.

Plymouth's hopes are high for capturing more of the transatlantic traffic, for the London and Southwestern Railway Co. would not have spent many thousands of pounds on improvements for the purpose of serving only one line of steamers.

A. O. U. W. Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen will be held in Toronto, commencing tomorrow. R. B. Garrett, Master of the local lodge, will be the only delegate from this city.

Russian Fleet Said to Have Abandoned Port Arthur—Japanese Said to Have Been Repulsed in Skirmishes on the Yalu River.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Tokio, March 15.—It is strongly believed here that the Russian fleet abandoned Port Arthur after the fourth attempt was made upon it by the Japanese fleet, and is endeavoring to reach Vladivostok.

London, March 15.—The Port Arthur correspondent of the Central News reports a skirmish between Cossacks and Japanese cavalry on the banks of the Yalu river. The Japanese horses were killed and the Japanese were forced to retire on foot.

A second skirmish, he says, is reported near Antung, in which the Japanese were repulsed.

Grand Duke Cyril Vladimirovitch, the Czar's cousin, is expected to reach Port Arthur to-morrow.

THOSE POLICE COURT RECORDS

A CORRESPONDENT USES SOME VIGOROUS LANGUAGE IN CONNECTION WITH A MATTER AT PRESENT UNDER DISCUSSION.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—My dear—The disputes between the City Clerk and Chief, it seems to me, is simply a case of "Much Ado About Nothing." As I understand it, the Chief was compelled to attend Police Court and could very easily hand to the City Clerk a brief list of what was done. On the other hand, the City Clerk could easily, without distressing himself in the least, obtain from the Police court records all the information necessary for him to have. He does not need to attend court at all, provided other thousands of the city aided him in the slightest degree. Now, Mr. Editor, it seems to me that we see the matter the old, old story, which has been told in Belleville many times. Instead of cheerfully trying to do his duty, and help along the interests of the city, the average civic official tries to see how little he can do. A municipality, like a private business, cannot be run on hard and fast lines. If not, employes is pressed for time at a certain moment, why cannot another employee, who happens to be idle just then, give him a helping hand? Some officials seem to forget that their time belongs to the city and not to themselves, and herein, I think, lies the crux of the matter. While two officials are dispatching what should perform a trivial duty the work of thousands undone. This everlasting bickering among employees and crying for more money should be stopped. If the city's servants are not willing to perform their duties for the salaries paid let them resign. Their places would soon be filled, there is plenty of good material in Belleville, and by just as good a man.

In conclusion I may say that the object in writing this letter is not to find fault with any particular employee of the city, but to remonstrate against the bickering among men who are paid good salaries to do light work.

Yours, etc.,

TAXPAYER.

MR. J. PARKER THOMAS FRACTURED HIS LEG.

FELL ON SLIPPERY ROADWAY ON BRIDGE STREET THIS AFTERNOON.

Our respected fellow townsman, Mr. J. Parker Thomas, was this afternoon the victim of a painful accident. He was crossing from the north side of Bridge street to his office on the south side, when he fell, owing to the slippery condition of that side of the street. The result was a fracture of the right leg between the knee and ankle. The unfortunate gentleman was removed to the hospital where the fracture was reduced.

A NEW MAFIA.

HELD TO BE RESPONSIBLE FOR THIRTY MURDERS.

New York, March 14.—The Times has the following special to-day from Altoona, Pa.:—The delirious ravings of an Italian boy who had been stabbed and left for dead gave a clue to what detectives here believe is the most gigantic Black Hand secret society in existence. Thirty murders in three counties are attributed to this society, and no conviction has been obtained in any one of the cases. Ten of these murders were committed among the Italians working on railroad improvements in this county. Every suspect arrested was able to prove a perfect alibi.

Besides these thirty mysterious murders, 20 others believed to be the burning of railroad camps during the last four months ago, when twenty-eight Italians were cremated, was the work of the society. The detectives think, too, that several men were stabbed to death and their bodies left to escape from the burning building and were thrown back into the flames.

While the hospital is in a delirium the boy who gave the clue declared in a raving fashion that the avengers were pursuing him, but his statements in his normal moments refused to talk.

The detectives have learned that the organization is a part of the Sicilian membership, and that its relations extend to all parts of the country. The central directing body is believed to be located in New York or in one of the suburban New Jersey cities.

A Railway's Troubles.

Kingston News and Times: This morning a mail clerk on the Bay of Quinte Railway gave an interesting account of the last snow blockades on that railway. He said the rain last Sunday flooded the track and the cold night made ice. The train could make but little headway without taking a big chance of leaving the track. It frequently happened that the rails, to make matters worse, heavy snow and the snowplough were frequently set off before the work of breaking the line was continued. In many places the snowbanks were ten feet high. Last Sunday the mail was delayed to the country post offices by reason of a sleigh. A number of the postmasters assisted to opening their offices on the day of rest, but the villagers who were snow bound went to the office with shovels and dug the mails. The most of the road from Picton to Trenton has to be opened up with pick and shovel.

McINTOSH BROS.

Now 13 Days Out.

Halifax, N.S., March 15.—No tidings have reached here from the missing steamer Pre Patria, now out 13 days from St. Pierre. The Halifax agent thinks that the steamer has been disabled by the ice and drifted off the coast. If the Pre Patria does not turn up by Wednesday a steamer will be despatched from here in search of her.

After Long Illness.

"The plates on the table looked strange to me, though I had used them forty years. The pictures on the walls seemed to hang in new places. The very carpet had a novel coloring, as if they had been at some magic cleansing and dyeing establishment." Dear Aunt Mary was telling her fiveyear-old niece her "queer" feelings after long illness. She was unconscious that she was repeating the story that has been told by convalescents from the time of Hazlitt till the present day.

Familiar things take on a disguise to the recovering eye. Even the face of a friend bears a new depth of meaning. "Did she use to look at me with such intensity of gaze? Did she clasp my hand so warmly? Was her voice so gentle and her word so full of hope and courage before I was sick?"

To the human creature just returning to life after lingering for days at the gates of death the whole world assumes a new aspect. Even inanimate objects seem to say: "You came near leaving us forever. You would not get out our shapes and colors." And the warm, conscious, loving friend bends over us and with eye and voice says: "See, I love you more truly than before I knew how I should miss you!" So after long sickness, as after a hard, cold winter, the world breaks into a new and blossoming spring.—Youth's Companion.

LAXATIVE AND TONIC

Iron-ox Tablets Highly Commended by a Detroit Druggist.

780 Jefferson Ave., Detroit,
May 13, 1902.

For many years I suffered from constipation in its worst form, and nothing which I took gave me any permanent relief.

When your Tablets first came to my notice, last summer, I determined to try them. The results have been most gratifying. I have taken many laxatives, but no other can compare with yours so far as my personal experience goes.

The tonic properties of your remedy are most valuable, both in connection with its laxative action when desired, and for those who need a tonic only.

I cannot too strongly recommend Iron-ox Tablets, which I never fail to bring to the notice of my customers when appropriate. From those who have used them I hear nothing but praise.

Yours very truly,
T. H. RICHARDS,

THE WOMEN UNIONISTS

Pledge Themselves to Support Balfour in Coming Elections.

Motion to Dissolve the Association Till the Revival of Home Rule Was Defeated By 99 to 14—Lord Goschen Says Scope of Enquiry Should Be Limited to the Ascertainment of Facts—Lord Lansdowne's Reply.

London, March 15.—(C.A.P.)—The Women's Liberal-Unionist Association, meeting at Westminster, pasted Lady Cochrane's motion pledging the association to assist candidates prepared to support a Unionist Government.

Mrs. Henry Fawcett declared that Mr. Balfour was a political Hamlet, but only Laertes returning from foreign travel could communicate some vigor to the Prince of Denmark. She opposed the resolution, urging they ought to shoot the protectionist tiger. She moved to dissolve the association until the revival of home rule, but the motion was defeated by 99 votes to 11.

Earl Wemyss, in the House of Lords, urged the appointment of a small Royal Commission to enquire if any change in methods were needed to improve the prospects of British trade. He did not ask that the interests of free trade or protection should be commenced in opposition.

Lord Goschen said the country was bewildered by the facts presented by the rival schools, and may be by those of Mr. Chamberlain because he was the strongest man in the country. There was not a single treasury official among the experts on taxation who was not willing to give evidence on the fiscal question. The crucial question was whether Britain was losing her trade in the neutral markets more rapidly than foreigners were. The scope of the enquiry should be limited to the ascertainment of facts.

Lord Lansdowne replied that such a commission would have a colossal and endless task. The Government did not think such a commission was needed to justify their retaliation policy. How should retaliation be practised was a question for the Government of the day. Lord Spencer only agreed a commission was necessary if free trade in danger. The motion was withdrawn.

No Trickery.

London, March 15.—(C. A. P.)—Right Hon. C. T. Ritchie, M.P. (Liberal Unionist), ex-Chancellor of the Exchequer, writing to a correspondent at Wolverhampton, says there was no trickery or treachery in the Premier's conduct at the Cabinet meeting on Sept. 14. "What he called the abandonment of the preferential tariff part of the scheme of fiscal reform we understood meant only a temporary abandonment, and believing Mr. Chamberlain would remain in the Cabinet, we resigned."

Refuses to Produce.

London, March 15.—(C. A. P.)—Premier Balfour yesterday repeated his refusal to produce the documents embodying his tariff proposals on the ground that they were Cabinet secrets. I. G. S. MacNeil, M.P. (Irish Nationalist), declared that at least six precedents existed for the production of Cabinet memoranda. He promised at Mr. Balfour's request to furnish the references.

Pay Car and Cheques Burned.

Seaforth, March 15.—A rear-end collision occurred on the Grand and Buffalo line about three miles east of this town yesterday afternoon. The pay train, in charge of Conductor Gordon, became stalled in a blinding snowstorm, and was followed by a freight with two engines, in charge of Conductor Stockton. In the storm the engineer could not see the stalled train and crashed into the rear end of it. The caboose train caught fire, apparently from a stove, and the latter was soon given to the pay car, and both were consumed. In the pay car were all the cheques for the workmen in the Seaforth district, and these were lost in the conflagration. The only person injured was Pay Clerk Alexander Hall, who was scalded and badly bruised about the leg. The forward trucks of some of the engines of the freight were torn off.

Killed By a Knee Blow.

Ottawa, March 15.—A post mortem examination of the remains of John Fitzgerald, who died as the result of an assault on Friday night, and which William Hamilton, a restaurant keeper, is held on a charge of causing death, showed that he had been seriously injured. He evidently got the force of someone's knee on his abdomen. The bowels were badly crushed and peritonitis had set in. The police court proceedings against Hamilton have been postponed until Thursday, pending the result of the inquest.

The Merger Was Illegal.

Washington, March 15.—In the United States Supreme Court's opinion today an opinion was delivered in the merger case of the Northern Securities Company v. the United States in favor of the Government's contention that the merger was illegal. The opinion of the court was handed down by Justice Harlan, and it upheld the decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Minnesota, in every particular. Four of the justices dissented from the five constituting the majority.

Wreck Near Moosejaw.

Winnipeg, Man., March 15.—The transcontinental train for the West was wrecked at Chaplin, about 65 miles west of Moosejaw, Sunday night. Several passengers were bruised and injured. Two tourist cars were derailed owing to a broken rail, and, of course, it is the passengers in these coaches who were injured.

NO TARIFF REVISION

In Debate on Address Sir Wilfrid Makes This Fairly Certain—Parliament to Meet on November.

Ottawa, March 15.—Without definitely committing the Liberal Party, Sir Wilfrid Laurier made it fairly clear in the House yesterday that there will be no tariff revision during the present session of Parliament. He also announced that the question of the admission of Newfoundland into confederation and of Provincial autonomy for the Northwest Territories would come up in the course of the present session. Prime Minister's only other important intimation in the House was the presentation assurance that the Joint High Commission would not meet again.

The debate following the moving of the address by George B. Grant, and the seconding by Dr. Pugsley of Hochelaga, was participated in by H. L. Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and W. F. Maclean. Mr. Borden attacked the Government along various lines, more chiefly on the appointment of Mr. Blair to the Railway Commission and the Alaskan Boundary award. The leader of the Opposition was in fine form, and was at times wont home with effective force.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whose improved health was apparent to everyone, spoke with a good deal of his old-time vigor. He defended the appointment of Mr. Blair on the ground that the former Minister of Railways was sufficient warrant for the Government's action.

W. F. Maclean talked chiefly on the railway matters. He denounced the nationalization of the Grand Trunk Railway, its consolidation with the Intercolonial, and connection between this combined system and the Canadian Northern, thus giving immediate relief to the West.

Kerr Moved Up.

Ottawa, March 15.—Senator Kerr of Toronto moved the address in reply to the speech from the throne in the Upper House. Senators Tessier, Ferguson and Scott took part in the debate.

TARIFF REDUCTION.

Ottawa Government Makes a Concession on Agricultural Implements.

Ottawa, March 15.—An order has been passed making the duty on malleable sprocket chain or link belting chain when used in connection with agricultural implements 20 per cent. It was 30 per cent., except for binder. Now it is to be a flat rate of 20 per cent. for agricultural implements.

An Order-in-Council has been passed placing petroleum oil on the free list when imported by mining companies for use in the concentration of ores of metals. This is a concession to the Kootenay mining industry.

Suicide's Body Found.

Victoria, B.C., March 15.—Lying face down with outstretched arms, within a few feet of the main road, two miles north of Victoria, is the body of David Ferguson, missing since Dec. 31, and was found yesterday morning. Ferguson's brothers, James, offered a reward of $1,000 for his brother, dead or alive, but this reward was withdrawn after the body was found. The right hand of the dead man was tightly clutched a sharp knife, and in the right side of the neck was a wound which severed the carotid artery and windpipe, showing that the jury returned a verdict of suicide while of unsound mind.

Car Repairer Lost a Foot.

St. Thomas, March 15.—William Hollins, 43 Wilson avenue, car repairer on the L.E. & D.R.R., was run over by a yard engine on Saturday and had his foot injured so badly that it had to be amputated. Mr. Hollins was walking on the track looking back, and though the engineer whistled and rang the bell, he did not see the motion, and before the engine could be stopped it was on him.

Baby Died in Agony.

Niagara Falls, March 15.—At Montrose, a village three miles from this city, Gordon, a two-year-old son of George Burns, ran against a pail of boiling water which was on the floor. The pail was upset and the child fell, receiving such terrible burns that he died after hours of great suffering.

Appointed Judges.

Ottawa, March 15.—Mr. John Idington, K.C., of Stratford, and Mr. F. A. Anglin, K.C., of Toronto, have been appointed Judges in the new Exchequer Court division of the Supreme Court of Canada, by appointment of a Chief Justice has been deferred.

2 CHAIRS OF FORESTRY

Ontario Government May Consider Such a Proposition.

Ex-President Mills of the O.A.C. and the Minister of Agriculture Favor Cosigh, Wants the Minister of Education Want Forestry Taught in Connection With the University of Toronto—Routine Proceedings in the House.

Toronto, March 15.—Less than an hour the Legislative Assembly advanced a number of bills through various stages. Nothing of a debatable nature was touched.

Mr. Whitney moved for a return of correspondence between the University of Toronto and the Government, with reference to the construction of a physical laboratory for the University. Also, copies of the statute of the Senate of the University, providing for the establishment of a department of forestry in the University, together with copies of all correspondence relating to the establishment of such department.

Chair of Forestry.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt said the information would be given at once. As to the physics building it was not long since the matter was called to the attention of the department. There would be room, perhaps, for some of the physics department in the new science building. As to the chair of forestry in connection with Toronto University, he had no objection to any

ABOLISH HOTEL LICENSES.

Premier Again Supports the Proposition in Liberal Caucus.

Toronto, March 16.—The Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature again met in caucus yesterday morning.

The temperance question was not discussed, but Premier Ross took the opportunity to urge upon his followers the advisibility of endorsing the suggestion made by him at the last meeting of caucus that a bill should be introduced abolishing hotel licenses and placing under Government control the retail sale of liquor in packages.

Railway subsidies and other matters occupied the attention of the caucus.

No Action Considered.

London, March 16.—Asked if the Government intended to take any steps to protect the iron trade of the United Kingdom against Canadian bounty-fed competition, Austen Chamberlain said the abolition or modification of the Canadian bounties would be a subject for consideration when the fiscal and commercial relations between the United Kingdom and the colonies come up for settlement.

Will It Be Merged?

New York, March 16.—The World yesterday morning said one of the greatest financiers connected with the creation of the U. S. Shipbuilding Company will have to face a charge of grand larceny. Another who belongs to the same firm as the former will have to face a charge of forgery in the third degree. Six or seven others men will have to face less serious charges.

THE FIGHT OF MARCH 12

Russians in Port Arthur Lost 300 Killed or Wounded.

Japanese Were Outside the Range of Fort Fire—Gen. Kuropatkin Orders General Stoessel to Hold the Fort With His Present Garrison—Makaroff Has Missed the Coast Extending Three Miles Seaward.

London, March 16.—According to a correspondent of The Daily Mail at Newchwang, Gen. Kuropatkin has wired Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel that he must hold Port Arthur with the present garrison.

Rumors from the theatre of war are plentiful. The Daily Express correspondent at Berlin gives an alleged official intimation from the Russian Ambassador, that Vice-Admiral Makaroff has mined the coast of the peninsula in Port Arthur, the mines extending three miles seaward.

A correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Yinkow says that the Japanese again attacked Port Arthur, March 12, as a challenge for Vice-Admiral Makaroff to come out and fight. During the heavy bombardment the correspondent says, the Japanese were in a position safe from the guns of the fortress. The Russian casualties amounted to 300 killed or wounded. The correspondent adds that this is authentic.

More Desertions.

Port Arthur, March 16.—Grand Duke Cyril, cousin of the Emperor, has arrived here.

Vice-Admiral Makaroff yesterday visited the torpedo boat destroyers which participated in the fight with the Japanese on March 10, and warmly thanked the officers and crew for their splendid behavior. The Admiral distributed decorations.

War Correspondents Seek Peace.

St. Petersburg, March 16.—The Emperor will receive the German and Swiss military attaches, who leave for the front Friday, these being the first of the foreign attaches to go.

Russians Deny the Story.

St. Petersburg, March 16.—From the highest official quarter the Associated Press has received information that there is absolutely no foundation for the rumors persistently issuing from Tokio that the Russians are abandoning Port Arthur.

"It is the vilest nonsense," said the official. "Nothing has occurred there to warrant such reports. The Japanese fleet has not been seen for 48 hours. The motive of the Government at Tokio in spreading this story is probably to influence public feeling in Japan for the purpose of creating enthusiasm while a war loan is being floated."

The newspapers here manifest the greatest indignation. The Bourse Gazette characterizing the report as a British invention. Attention is redirected to the order of the day issued by Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel, commander at Port Arthur, in which he declared that the place would never be surrendered, as representing the Russian position.

Shipping Soldiers Home.

St. Petersburg, March 16.—On account of the difficulty of housing the vast number of troops pouring into Mukden, 14,000 have been sent forward within the last few days towards Yalu River as reinforcements for the 7,000 troops already at Kuan and Anju, and the stream of soldiers from European Russia is not being held at Harbin.

Rumor Not Believed.

Paris, March 16.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Echo de Paris says that rumors to the effect that the Vladivostock and Port Arthur squadrons have been united, is received with incredulity by the general staff. The correspondent says that the rumors are probably due to Vice-Admiral Makaroff's frequent sorties. The correspondent says that General Zillinski is now Viceroy Alexieff's chief of staff, and is acting under his orders in succession to Major-General Pflug.

British Files a Protest.

Pekin, March 16.—The British consul has filed a protest with Sir Ernest Satow, the British minister at Pekin, against the projected abandonment of the Newchwang end of the Chinese railway by its directors and the management in Great Britain. The reasons given by the consul for his action are that the British Government had previously made known its intention of protecting the road, and also that its abandonment at this time means the probability of its destruction by the Russians, should they eventually be forced to retreat.

War Notes.

Seoul, March 16.—The Japanese authorities have ordered the newspaper correspondents at Fingyang and Anju to return. They also refuse to honor the permits formerly given for correspondents to accompany troops to the front, and are holding them at Seoul.

New York, March 16.—A despatch from China says that letters from Pigeon Bay say the loss of life at Port Arthur by last Thursday's bombardment will exceed one hundred.

Russia Gets 5,000 Tons Barley.

San Francisco, March 16.—A deal for 5,000 tons of barley has been closed here with agents of the Russian Government for the use of Russian troops in the Soudan.

Arrested and Shot.

Vienna, March 16.—Captain Leontieff of the Russian general staff was arrested and shot at Warsaw for having sold to a foreign power a list of the secret service agents used by the Russian general staff in the frontier districts of Russia's western neighbor.

No One Lost.

Brisbane, Queensland, March 16.—The missing ship Aramac has been reported safe. All the missing passengers have arrived.

TOLD IN A FEW LINES.

Chicago has had 58 inches of snow this winter, beating all records.

Windsor is preparing for a big military demonstration on May 24.

One boat, with 30 people on the Aramo, wrecked off Queensland, is still missing.

There were 220 cars of settlers' effects en route to Canada at Portal, N.D., Monday.

Thirty-five Japanese army officers have left New York for Vancouver en route home from Europe.

A grand jury will investigate the corruption charge against prominent citizens of the American Soo.

Essexville, Mich., residents are looking for the incendiary whose latest work set fire to a feedmay will prove fatal to one girl.

France and Britain.

Paris, March 16.—The recent visits of M. Paul Cambon (French Ambassador at London) to Paris to confer with the Foreign Minister Delcasse, have revealed the fact that the negotiations for a settlement of the outstanding differences between France and Great Britain have been resumed, after having been interrupted by the outbreak of war. It is understood that the proposals for settlement include those relating to Newfoundland, Egypt and the Newfoundland shore fisheries. Concerning Egypt, it is expected that France will secure a modification of certain restrictions placed on communication with Lake Tchad.

Fire at Cornwall.

Cornwall, Ont., March 16.—About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon fire was discovered in the main room of the Canadian Colored Cotton Company's Canada mill. It spread very rapidly until the west end of the upper floor was ablaze. The company's fire brigade rendered good service, and with the aid of the town brigade they kept the fire in the room where it originated. The loss by fire was very small, but the water caused considerable damage. It is too early to form any close estimate of the loss, but it is fully covered by insurance. The main room will probably be running again in a day or two.

Casualties Starving.

London, March 16.—The Express prints the following from Montreal: Great snowstorms continue in Eastern Canada, and industry is paralyzed.

The railways are blocked to traffic, roads are impassable, and the cold is intense. The price of food is in consequence increasing, and, in many districts which are cut off from the rest of the world the inhabitants are practically starving.

No News of Pro Patria.

Halifax, N. S., March 16.—Nothing has been heard of the missing steamer Pro Patria or her passengers or crew. The steamer Harlaw has been chartered to carry the mails and the cargo that has been accumulating here for St. Pierre. The Harlaw will sail on Thursday morning.

If He Is Absent.

Ottawa, March 16.—There is talk among the Ottawa Liberals of asking Thomas Ahearn to become their English-speaking candidate at the next general election.

Three Men Killed.

Sherbrooke, Que., March 16.—A collision near Lennoxville, between a freight train of the Boston and Maine and a freight train of the Canadian Pacific Railway, three men on the Boston and Maine engine were killed.

THE G. T. PACIFIC RAILWAY.

Sir Wilfrid declared in the House that to wait until a proper knowledge of the country through which the G.T.P. Railway was to be built was gained would be ruinous to the interests of Canada. Here is his language:

"To those who urge upon us the policy of to-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow; to those who tell us, wait, wait, wait; to those who advise us to pause, to consider, to reflect, to calculate, and to inquire, our answer is: No, this is not a time for deliberation, this is a time for action. We cannot wait, because time does not wait; we cannot wait, because in these days of wonderful development, time lost is doubly lost."

Well, "the to-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow" has come and passed into history, and the construction of the road is not even commenced. The Grand Trunk rejected the terms, the Government pleaded and then time is extended. The policy of the Government is the very quintessence of opportunism and humbug. Yet their followers accept and swallow it without even making a wry face.

JUDGED BY THEIR DEEDS.

Since 1896 thirty members of Parliament have been foisted on the Canadian treasury by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Among them were no less than seven Cabinet Ministers—with salaries aggregating $54,500 per annum. The Government members so provided for are:

Sir Oliver Mowat, Lieut.-Governor Ontario	Salary. $10,000
Sir Henri Joly, Lieut.-Governor British Columbia	6,000
Sir Louis H. Taschereau, Supreme Court of Canada	7,000
Hon. A. G. Blair, Railway Commissioner	10,000
Hon. David Mills, Supreme Court of Canada	7,000
Hon. Sir H. Bernier, Railway Commissioner	8,000
Hon. H. G. Carroll, Quebec Bench	2,500

The first four named were elected in 1896 as Liberals. The Liberal principles enunciated in the general election of that year. Mr. Bernier and Hon. David Mills followed shortly afterwards, and before Sir Wilfrid had abandoned all support of the old Liberal platform. One of the acts of the Conservative Government, which was most condemned by the Liberal party, was that of appointing members of Parliament to offices of emolument under the Crown. Sir William Mulock placed his party fairly on record on this question, by introducing a resolution declaring the practice vicious in its tendency, and denouncing the appointees as "parasites on the administration," and "office seekers and place hunters." Yet from among Sir William's own party thirty "parasites on the administration" have not hesitated to draw money from the public chest. From the Cabinet two "office seekers and place hunters" have come to Lieut.-Governorships; three to the courts of the country; and two to the Railway Commission. Half of the greatest business Government ever assembled on earth were thus disposed of.

What think the people who pay the salaries, of this combination of hypocrisy and generosity?

Our esteemed local contemporary has been printed an article, "Mr. Dooley on Hockey," which was written by a member of The Intelligencer staff and published in this paper about a year ago. It is gratifying to see that any of our humble efforts find favor with our esteemed contemporary, but why did it wait a year before copying the article, and why did it fail to give credit where credit was due? Can it be that our esteemed contemporary makes a practice of printing ancient articles which it fails to credit fairly? Alas! we fear so.

Our correspondent, "Alderman," whose letter appears in another column, gives a very clear statement of how matters stand in connection with the now vexed question, "Who shall keep the Police Court records?" These he finally brought in "Alderman's" letter, as he places the onus for the deadlock directly on the Police Commissioners, the same opinion having been expressed, at the last Council meeting, by another Alderman, at present on the sick list. What he does that Ancient and Honorable Body, the Board of Police Commissioners, say to this?

Dr. Sheard, Medical Health Officer of Toronto, says the present winter has been the worst for sickness in his experience. And the same story would probably hold good for most other places in Ontario.

Yesterday was surely a hard luck day for the Board of Trade, when both the president and secretary broke their legs. They had.

One good thing about this long winter is that it defers the house-cleaning season.

The opposition in the Imperial House of Commons got a snap verdict over the Government yesterday, but it showed nothing more than that the latter had stayed too long at lunch. When they came back to report progress some the Government had 25 majority. So it is hard to see what Redmond and his fellow-plotters had to do so much shouting about.

A FRANK ACKNOWLEDGMENT

THE BRITISH CANADIAN REVIEW APOLOGIZES TO MR. CARBONNEAU.

The following is taken from the British Canadian Review of the issue of the 13th of February, 1904, which is the paper in London undertaking to give the fullest Canadian news but particularly in mining affairs. The articles speak for themselves.

THE GOLDEN HORN COMPANY.

Sir—Some twelve months ago you took occasion to comment on the formation of a Klondike mining company, incorporated to operate an extensive territory on Gold Run Creek. In your role of critic and adviser on Canadian mining matters, you characterized these claims as worthless and made many libellous and untrue statements against myself. A vindictive newspaper article seems to lose much of its importance at a distance, more especially when the person attacked is in his own country and among those who actually know the true facts of the case. You may remember, if you follow the remarks of the local press, that every paper took strong exception to your remarks, as being absolutely unjustifiable. As I have lived and worked in Klondike for five years, this fact speaks for itself.

Your attack on me was as bitter as it was unjustified, and had at that time been in London, I should have taken immediate action.

The company I had formed, being the most important, both in size and general value of the properties, which has yet been brought out, required my entire time and energies, and to speak frankly, your criticism has in no way affected my own or the company's welfare.

My object in writing to you is to enclose a copy of the latest balance sheet of the company, which has just been passed by the auditors, London firm of the highest standing.

You will see that from March to October last year the total value of £100,256 was washed from the company's claims, and is thus enabled to distribute dividends amount ing to £79,566, a proof of the richness of the claims and the economy of the management which has, I think you will admit, never been equalled by any other Klondike company.

As your remarks as to the value of this company's properties have proved so entirely at variance with facts, you may possibly now do me the honor to withdraw the statements made by you to the company and its originator.

Yours truly,
C. E. CARBONNEAU.
15, Avenue D'Autin, Paris, 3rd February.

EDITORIAL.

A Klondike Balance Sheet.

The letter which we publish this week from Mr. C. E. Carbonneau, in connection with the Gold Run Co., may recall to many of our readers some articles which appeared in these columns about fifteen months ago. The letter and the enclosed balance sheet were as much a surprise to us as to those addressed by the writer which, under the circumstances, is sufficiently temperate for remark.

This first balance sheet of the Gold Run Co. we must confess, does appear to justify the not unqualified letter which accompanied it. The letters we have published from our Klondike correspondent have, from time to time, referred to his work on the large outputs from Gold Run Creek, but a yield of over £100,000 in seven months from the claims of this company alone would seem to justify the company's Caledonia and the claims of its promoter.

The balance sheet shows that the total cost of obtaining this amount of gold dust amounted to £27,682, or just slightly over 25 per cent. of the gross output. As one-fifth of the profit was allotted from the first to those who received 50 per cent. of the proceeds, the company's work so far has been carried on with greater economy than was usual in Klondike companies. During the period a sum of £14,575 was expended on exploration and development. The company is capitalized at £400,000, and paid a monthly dividend at the rate of 2 per cent. during the working period. The total expenditure in London, including directors' fees, came to £1,570, which, on a company of this capital, is, we consider, very moderate. The auditors are Messrs. McAuliffe, Davis and Hope.

Without a report from an engineer of repute, we are, of course, in the dark as to the probable life of the mine, but in view of our expressed disbelief in its capabilities, in fairness to Mr. Carbonneau, we must make him our acknowledgment. In regard to the personal statements contained in his letter, it is true that the Klondike papers resented our remarks on their fellow-citizen, but perhaps we attach much the same importance to distant press comments as Mr. Carbonneau does, and esprit de corps is strong in frontier towns.

Mr. Carbonneau has waited to notice our remarks until he could send proofs in the shape of his balance sheet; his self-restraint is noteworthy, and we acknowledge it the same. We will go further, and say that some months after our articles appeared his integrity was vouched for in quite an unexpected manner. One of the Canadian members of the Alaskan Commission, who resided for some years at Dawson, where he was a law officer of the Crown, was discussing this and that Klondike mine, with a member of our staff when in London last summer. His testimony as to the character of Mr. Carbonneau was directly at variance with our prior information and comment. We did not consider it necessary to refer to this conversation at the time, as we felt that Mr. Carbonneau could look after himself, but his letter deserves this acknowledgment from us now, and an expression of regret that we should have thrown doubts on the bona fides of the Gold Run Co. and himself.

Save Your Children's Eyes

Astigmatism is a very common, but a very little understood ailment of the eyes. It is the cause of most eye trouble. It does not mean that the eyes are weak or have any disease. It means that the two eyes do not focus on the same point; therefore, the muscles of the one eye which focuses incorrectly are constantly straining to pull that eye ground into focus with the other eye. That strained eye, eventually causes headaches and nervous troubles. If neglected, it will cause serious eye troubles. All school children should have their eyes tested to see if this defect is present. Many adults also need examination for it. We make no charge for such an examination, and have every necessary scientific appliance for making the examination perfect and thorough. Come in and talk it over with us anyway.

THE SAMOYEDS.

A Mongolian Race That Sometimes Resorts to Cannibalism.

Samoyeds, a race of Mongolians inhabiting the shores of the arctic ocean, maintain themselves by hunting and fishing. They make use of the same implements in bone and stone, besides cherishing the same superstitions, as were current in the stone age among the inhabitants of western Europe. They clothe themselves in reindeer skins. In the severest weather they wear no hair outside, and when it is wet the tunic is reversed. This interesting race is gradually dying out owing partly to the scourge of smallpox which makes ravages among them and also to their fondness for ardent spirits, which lead them to degradation and misery, as the Russian merchants take advantage of this to cheat them when bartering for valuable skins and walrus teeth. In fact, to such an extent do these traders dupe them that the Samoyeds sometimes are reduced to a state of famine and have recourse to cannibalism. This seems to account for the name Samoyed, which was given them by the Russians and which signifies in their language self eating. Every year in mid-last these ugly looking people travel down in their reindeer sledges from Archangel to St. Petersburg and take up their abode temporarily on the frozen river Neva, where they build themselves circular huts composed of a framework of poles, over which are stretched reindeer skins. Here they traffic for the products of civilization.

Remedy For a Cold.

"We desire a remedy for a cold," says the Baltimore News, "and for the information of those who are making suggestions we mention that we have already taken the following: Quinine, rock and rye, lemon, hot, hot whisky, Irish moss tea, beef tea in quantities, hot milk, mustard plaster (externally), mustard plaster (internally), hot water bag, steam bath, hot irons, X's mixture, bronchial troches, hot baths of iodinium, flaxseed, nausea, all the ten minute remedies, Stickem's corn cure, Bumply's sure cure for hog cholera, Dover's powders and two different persons of unknown character.

"We will be genuinely obliged for a long list of other things to take.

"N. B.—We have also taken a fresh cold."

At Chingford, in Essex, England, an estate is held by a very strange condition. Whenever it passes into new hands the owner, with his wife, manservant and maidservant, comes on horseback to the parsonage and pays his respects by blowing three blasts upon a horn. He carries a hawk upon his fist and his servant has a greyhound in a slip, both for the use of the rector for that day. He receives a chicken for the hawk, a peck of oats for the horse and a loaf of bread for his greyhound.' After dinner the owner blows three more blasts, and then, with his party, withdraws from the rectory.

Painter and Tavern Keeper.

Martinus Alberstrelli, who lived in the fourteenth century, was a painter who spent much time in endeavoring to produce perpetual motion in oil. He was not very successful and objected so much to the criticism he received that he gave up painting and kept a tavern, but his name as a painter still lives while his tavern keeping record has passed away.

A Schemer Spotted.

"The young man talks a great deal about his estates abroad."

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox, "he's like one or two others who wanted to marry into the family. He's anxious to trade his imaginary estate for some of my real estate."

Haven't We!

"But," said the Englishman, "you have nothing for sound asleep here—nothing in the way of grand old things that have long since passed into history."

"We haven't, eh? Wait till I get you a copy of the city ordinances."—Chicago Record-Herald.

HOW IT SPREADS.

The first package of Hem-Roid (the infallible Hair Restorer) was put out and went to a small town in the State of Delaware.

It made the cure of a case of Piles that had been pronounced hopeless.

The news spread and although this was only two years ago the demand prompted Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., the discoverer, to prepare it in factories that now fill it by the sent to all parts of the world.

It will cure any case of Piles. There is a month's treatment in each box.

Sold for $1.00, with absolute guarantee.

It is for sale by druggists.

THE PORCUPINE.

Only Known Creature That Eats the Foliage of the Hemlock.

"You don't have to skirmish around much to get tired of farting one of these hemlock porcupines on," says an old woodsman. "Just go kinky, some salt over a stick of cordwood or saw jag for that matter, and he'll eat the whole business and enjoy it. As you would mince pie." The customary diet of these animals is hemlock browse. They make themselves a home in a hollow log or under the roots of some old tree, but always within reach of a big hemlock.

The hemlock is their pasture, and they make beaten paths from one tree to another as they eat their fill. Once up in a tree the porcupine goes out on the big limbs and, pulling the small branches in with one paw, browses on the pungent leaves. In going through the woods you will find little piles of these fine leaves on the ground under hemlock trees. That means that a porcupine is feeding in the tree, the leaves on the ground being dropped from his feast.

Sometimes a porcupine will remain in a hemlock tree for a week at a time, staying close to the trunk at night and feeding during the day. This curious little beast is the only known living thing that eats the foliage of the hemlock.

DANGER SPOTS IN A STORM.

Places to Avoid When the Lightning Is Flashing.

Out of doors trees should be avoided in a thunderstorm, and if from the rapidity with which the explosion follows the flash it is evident that electric clouds are near at hand a recumbent posture is the safest. It is seldom dangerous to take shelter under sheds, carts or low buildings or under the lee of a bridge, and a distance of twenty or thirty feet from tall trees or houses is an eligible situation, for while a discharge take place these elevated bodies are most likely to receive it.

It is well also to avoid water, for it is a good conductor, and the height of a human being near the stream may determine the direction of a discharge. Within doors we are tolerably safe in the middle of a carpeted room or when standing on a thick hearth rug. The chimney should be avoided on account of the conducting power of the carbon deposited in it, and gilt moldings or bell wires are sources of danger. But we are tolerably safe, since blankets and feathers are bad conductors.

It is injudicious to take refuge in a cellar, because the discharge is often to a distance, as in a cloud, and buildings frequently sustain the greatest injury in their basements.

QUEEN BEES.

Wonderful Provision of Nature by Which They Are Made.

A marvelous provision of bee life is the power which they possess to raise queens, or mother bees, from eggs or very young maggots which in the ordinary course produce workers, which are neuters, or undeveloped females.

If by any chance a queen is killed or lost the whole colony would perish were it not for this wonderful provision of nature. Much perturbed at first at their loss the bees within a few hours settle down and deliberately build a peculiar shaped structure known as a queen cell. This is much larger than an ordinary cell, rough, irregular and strong.

In this the selected eggs, or larvæ, are lavishly supplied with "royal jelly," which is highly stimulative and in which the baby queen literally floats during her period of growth. The result is that certain organs and ovaries which remain dormant in a worker bee are perfected, and the new queen hatches out in about fifteen days, or six days sooner than the workers.—London Standard.

Headdresses In Africa.

The married women and the men of the upper Mobangi wear their hair long and shaped in a fantastic profusely adorned with colored beads woven in and out among the locks. This coiffure is the object of astonishment of all travelers who see it. Coquetry is the privilege of the sex under the tropics as well as in civilized lands, and the women are very proud of their headdresses. They are constructed of the hair requires a number of days, for while it is in progress or when they fear that it will be disarranged they cover the hair with a finely woven net of wood fiber. Four or twelve handsomely carved keep the arrangement in position and give it a truly artistic aspect.

Curious Legal Custom.

A curious custom is in vogue in many parts of India. "If a dispute arises between two neighbors over boles are dug close together, in each of which defendant's and plaintiff's lawyers have to place a leg. They have to remain thus until either one of them is exhausted or complains of being bitten by insects, when he is judged to be defeated and his employer loses his case.

Audience Not Elected.

"So you belong to a glee club?"

"Well," answered the youth with longish hair, "that's what we call it, but no one seems very joyous when we ring."

Wall Street Proverb.

THE WOMEN VOTE.

Result of Their First Use of the Ballot in Australia—Many Funny Incidents —Distinctive Mode.

The recent elections in Australia were of special interest because the newly enfranchised women of the Commonwealth exercised the right of suffrage for the first time.

A careful analysis is to be made of the ballots, to determine just how many, of the nearly 700,000 women registered, went to the polls, and for whom they voted. Until this sifting takes place, the public can only judge of results generally.

It is said that the women's vote, so far as Melbourne was concerned, was cast largely for labor nominees. It is equally probable that the women of Sydney cast their votes largely against labor candidates.

Here in Melbourne, says The Argus, the women voters were divided by the politicians into "women" and "ladies." The "women" are said to have gone to the polls almost to a woman, while the "ladies" are accused of having shown less enthusiasm and less interest, and as a corollary there were fewer "lady" votes than there should have been.

The "lady" electors waited, so another committee say, for vehicles to carry them to the polls, and wherever these failed to put in an appearance, there was a corresponding falling off in the expected antilabor vote. On the other hand, these same committeemen aver labor "women" supporters went to the polls on foot, and voted in big bunches in every electorate. But a very much more plausible explanation of the heavy labor vote is that the whole strength of the Victorian civil service and that of the many sympathizers was thrown against the Commonwealth Government in order to pay off an old grudge.

In Sydney women electors were told by spellbinders and the newspapers that the tariff was responsible for their increased grocery, meat, dress, hat, and shoe bills, and that they should bend every effort to break the power of the protectionist party. They tried hard to do so, as the big majorities of the free trade candidates indicate.

There were four women candidates, three Senatorial and one for the House of Representatives. Miss Vida Goldstein, who ran for the Senate in this State, polled some 50,000 votes out of about 900,000.

Many women declared when Miss Goldstein announced her candidacy that they would vote for her because they were opposed to women running for Parliament. But it now appears that many of these resisted the feminine prerogative of changing their minds. The fourth nominee in New South Wales did not even do so well as Miss Goldstein. Miss Nelle A. Martel polled about 15,000 votes out of a total of about 900,000, and so did Mrs. Anna Moore-Bentley. Miss Selina Anderson, who ran for the House of Representatives in the Dalley district, seems to be made over several suburbs of Sydney, polled 3,000 odd votes out of about 17,000 cast.

Under the Federal Election Law any nominee who fails to poll one-fifth as many votes as the leading nominee forfeits his or her required pre-election deposit of £25 to the Federal treasury. So the women candidates may be said to be rejected by their sounding of the temper of Australia's electors toward possible women M.P.'s.

Of course there were many funny incidents when the women went to the polls. Hundreds of mothers here and in Sydney brought their babies spring to the polls, including, in many cases, offspring in arms. Policemen were asked by some of these mothers to hold their infants while they deposited their votes—a request duly as citizens.

Women marched up to returning officers in some booths and enquired: "I want to vote for Mr. Double Dash; how will I mark my paper to do that?" It is recorded of one woman that after she had marked her ballot she took it to the returning officer and asked him to see if it was correct.

"There is the right, please?"

The official had to pause to read her a little lecture on the secrecy of the Australian ballot.

Though the daily papers had carefully explained by every means known to printing how ballots should be marked, hundreds of women either forgot the instructions or, forgetting them, husbands, brothers and other male relations, or the newspaper press, or else tried to independently of them, their first day in the power, and did the things which they should not have done, or else undone the things which they should have done.

But the testimony of the returning officers is that no more mistakes were made by women than by men, and that the women exhibited a sense of their responsibility and a knowledge of what they were about unlooked for and admirable.

One Woman of more than ninety years in this State, and one of about the same age in New South Wales were among the voters. It is said that at some polling booths, here and in Sydney, the women voters outnumbered the men voters by as much as two to one, but this is only conjectural. But there is no doubt that the women electors showed a most commendable zeal in this important matter.

"My word!" a husband is reported as having said to a friend at a polling place, "my wife blatted me through breakfast in a brace of shakes and went off to vote at such a rate you could not see her body for dust."

The polling places were so arranged that women voted in one side of the room and men on the other.

The Federal Election Law does not forbid persons from congregating about polling places, so it was a common sight to see party workers buttonholing voters right at the threshold.

Mrs. Maybrick's Cause.

(Montreal Gazette.)

It is intimated from Washington that no objection will be made to the admission of Mrs. Maybrick to the United States, when she gets an opportunity to return thereto. This is in keeping with what appears to be a popular sentiment in the United States, where the country has seemingly come the influence that effected the unusual release. This feature of the case has been its peculiarity. Mrs. Maybrick was no sooner tried on charge of the murder of her husband by poison than she was the victim of unmerited agitation followed. The recoil, character and even the sanity of the presiding judge was attacked. The fact that the condemnation was the result of the verdict was ignored. The whole additation of Liverpool, Mrs. Maybrick was help up to contempt. The course pursued was tabulated, indeed, to do anything but effective of its purpose. The end, however, it prevailed, possibly through the sweeping effect on the official mind of many important issues. Mrs. Maybrick has been taken from the prison to which she was committed after the commutation of the sentence to death, and upon her, and well, it is understood, she will be completely free. Though her crime was committed in Britain, the United States is her home, and in the United States, where she has been practically invited, it is trusted she will remain.

FOXBORO.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Lloyd, of Madoc, took place in the Methodist Church on Sunday, at 10.30. Mrs. Lloyd, who was visiting her sister, Mrs. Wm. Bristnell, was stricken with paralysis on Monday and died on Friday. The deceased was a sister of Mrs. Jas. Brintnell, of this village, and Mr. E. Brintnell, of Belleville.

A surprise party consisting of the members of the Epworth League visited the home of Mr. Clarence Coulson on Wednesday night. Mr. Coulson, who is an excellent host, entertained the company in fine style. The evening was spent by playing games of all kinds, followed by vocal and instrumental music. The party broke up at an early hour, all having spent a very pleasant evening.

BEGINNING OF GAS.

Sir Walter Scott a better Novelist Than Scientist.

Jan. 28 marked an interesting anniversary in the history of street lighting, for it was on that date in 1807 that Pall Mall was lighted with gas—the first street of any city to be illuminated. The idea of using gas for purposes of illumination first occurred to Mr. William Murdoch, a native of Ayrshire, who worked in the mines of Redruth, Cornwall.

He made his first experiments in 1792, at Redruth. Removing in 1798 to the machine making works of Messrs. Watt and Boulton at Birmingham, he there followed up his experiments, and succeeded in lighting up the building with gas for the celebration of the Peace of Amiens.

The merit of bringing gas light into use in London belongs to a German named Winsor, who somewhat resembled Sir Boyle in his schemes by the extravagance of his pamphlets. Sir Walter Scott wrote from London that there was a madman proposing to light London with—what do you think?—why, with smoke.

Even the liberal mind of Sir Humphrey Davy failed to take in the idea that gas was applicable to purposes of domestic illumination. Yet, Winsor having succeeded after all in obtaining their supporters, "the long line between St. James's Palace and Cockspur street did blaze out in a burst of gas-lamps on the night in question to the no small admiration of the crowd."

In London, about 1810, before any company had been established, Mr. Ackermann's shop in the Strand was regularly lighted with gas. It is said that the lady calling there one evening was so delighted with the beautiful white jets she saw on the counter that she offered any money for permission to carry them home to light her drawing-room!

Gas lighting had a ridiculous object to contend with, worthy to be ranked with that which insisted for years, without experiment, that the wheels of steam locomotives would go on whirling without creating any forward movement. It was generally assumed that the pipes conveying gas would not stand apt to produce conflagrations. People went to bed unnecessarily with their hands, under the belief that a careless touch would burn them.

Gordon at Gettysburg.

Major Robert Stiles, author of "Four Years Under Marse Robert," thus describes General Gordon at Gettysburg: "His face was radiant, his figure erect, mounted on a splendid sorrel charger, with gleaming eyes and proud arched neck. The rider fairly stood in his stirrups and, bareheaded, waved both hands, while his sonorous voice rolled out such exhortations as only he knew how to make to soldiers. Thus they charged, with the great black charger joyful in the midst of the flashing bayonets."

Daily Intelligencer.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Mayor Chown informs The Intelligencer that the Private Bills Committee met at the Legislature were unanimous in favor of Belleville's extension by-law day morning. One of the opposition lawyers was our old friend Mr. Smoke, whose eloquence, however, was wasted. One significant feature, the Mayor says, was that all the lawyers on the committee were in favor of Belleville's request being granted. The matter is now practically settled, and the city will at once proceed with the sale of its Gas debentures, and also steps to place the plant in good repair.

Coming out of the committee room after the matter had been settled, victors and vanquished fraternized cheerfully. "Oh! well," said one of the Trenton Electric people, laughingly, "you beat us, but then there's no ill feelings; we had to make a bluff for the stockholders, you know."

Belleville's case, the Mayor says, was very ably handled by Mr. Mikel, the City Solicitor, the results speaking for themselves. At the same time, the work of our wideawake Chief Magistrate was probably not the smallest factor in bringing about a victory for the city.

"There may be frost in the gas pipes," said the Trenton Electric Company's lawyer, "but we struck our biggest frost in the Private Bills Committee."

The Chairman of the Gas Committee, Ald. Sinclair, informed us last night that it is his intention, at the next meeting of the Council, to introduce a motion looking to the purchase by the city of a fair quantity of gas stoves, the same to be sold to consumers of fuel gas on the instalment plan, the summer series being extended as a matter of course. This plan of selling gas stoves on the instalment plan is followed in many places with great success, although as it does, people of moderate means to use fuel gas for domestic purposes without any large outlay of money at one time.

AN ABSOLUTE NECESSITY.

SO THINKS AT LEAST ONE TRAVELLING MAN.

I would as soon think of starting out without my valise as without my grip as to start on a trip without a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in my valise. As a travelling man who represents a St. Louis hardware house, Why? I assume I have to put up at all kinds of hotels and eat everything I can get, have to eat good, bad and indifferent food at all hours of the day and night and I don't believe any man's stomach will stand that kind of thing without protest. I don't know mine won't. It has to have something to break the fall and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is a crutch I fall back on.
